BEYOND BELIEF

I am lying on the floor of my office, eyes closed. For months I've been talking to people who knew Theodore Gaines-Rogers. I've been reading things he wrote during the 20-year span from 1947 to 1967, when he directed San Diego County's Probation Department, and in the years after, when he devoted himself to psychic experimentation. I'd like to interview him. But he died on September 6, just short of 89. In his letter years, he preached that everyone is psychic and that you don't need special training to communicate with spirits. Dr. psychic up, high spirit a few inches apart, I breathe in Gaines-Rogers' air, and I strive to make my mind receptive.

Could Ted Gaines-Rogers enter my body and fill me with his presence? At least a half-dozen others who worked with

It Ain't West Point

I was intrigued by your headline in this week's edition, March 6, in which you compare the Carlsbad Army-Navy Academy to West Point ("Cry Bye Mom, So Long Dad, Where Are the Girls? West Point of the West"). I'm sure you'll get many calls. The preparatory school filled with high school children in no way compares to the U.S. military academy or its sister academic institutions, the Naval Academy and the Air Force Academy. The Carlsbad Army-Navy Academy relates to Stanton or Valley Forge Military Academy, in that it is a preparatory school with high school-age students, not college students who have become accomplished individuals, both academically and in terms of their personal character, and are selected and appointed by U.S. elected officials to attend one of the three academies. Believe me, it ain't West Point.

John Gonnerman

Same-Sex Relations As Birth Control

"City Lights" of March 6 reports that the Navy is concerned about the high rate of unwanted pregnancies and abortions among sailors. Perhaps the Navy should recruit more lesbians and gay men. Same-sex relationships are a 100-percent birth control method, you know.

Talk Radio Is A Joke

I found Matt Potter's article in the March 6 edition of the Reader concerning Junior Seau and his paternity suit to be a real eye opener ("City Lights"). I couldn't agree more with the comments concerning the San Diego Union-Tribune and its unabashed boosterism when it comes to anything dealing with the Chargers and the Padres as well. It's a shame that so many people of San Diego blindly read the paper and feel that they are getting objective and factual reporting when in reality they are getting fed the official Charger line. The TV stations are no better. Every one of them employs an ex-Charger as a sports reporter. Talk radio is a joke as well since the sports-formatted stations also broadcast the Chargers' games!

The San Diego media certainly has no problem when it comes to reporting the marital problems of Deion Sanders and Barry Bonds or the paternity problems of Darryl Strawberry, etc., but we had to find out about Seau's dark side in the Reader. While this information may tarnish Seau's carefully groomed image, it is something that his adoring public needs to be made aware of. My heart goes out to the mother of his child as well as his little boy, whom [Seau] doesn't seem to have much time for. Thank you for enlightening us and letting us see just what a joke the San Diego sports media really is.

Brilliant Saville

Jonathan Saville's review of Conquistador, the new opera, is brilliant (Classical Music Review, March 6). It is also courageous, given the anger that it will arouse among partisans on political correctness. Mr. Saville is head and shoulders above every critic in Southern California.

Michael Praetorius
Downtown

Blatantly Offensive

I read with great interest the review of the opera The Conquistador presented by Jonathan Saville in your weekly edition of March 6. While I do not always agree with him, I respect his right as a critic to present his opinion of the production as he sees it. However, I find the concluding remarks in the last paragraph of his review irrelevant to the production and blatantly offensive. The patent bias, poor taste, and lack of judgment evidenced in these remarks casts suspicion on the integrity of the entire critique.

Nothing Pagan About Vengeance

All Neopagans owe you a debt of thanks for lifting the customary blanket of journalistic silence regarding our religio-cultural movement ("Lost Angeleno," March 6). You are also to be congratulated for describing Neopaganism in an intelligent, objectively balanced fashion, and especially for touching on the important issues of silence and distortion.

One minor correction: The journal Green Egg is still being published and is available at any New Age bookstore.

And one bone of contention: your final paragraph carries two implications: (1) Neopaganism condones date rape or at least provides a justification for same. (2) Neopaganism condones revenge as a means of restitution. I will personally pay $100 to you or anyone else who can show me any Neopagan publication advocating date rape, vengeance, or any other form of violence. I think it more likely that

Fat hen How does Susan Golding hope to become a U.S. senator? By raising millions from San Diego's biotech fat cats. That's part of a plan revealed by Golding handler and ex-boyfriend George Gorton in an interview with Roll Call magazine. "According to Gorton," the magazine wrote last week, "Golding has a file of about 7000 donors from her bids for local off.ce, and will make further inroads among the Westside Los Angeles Jewish community, the entertainment industry, and San Diego's flourishing biotechnology firms." Golding's strategy of hitting up San Diego business interests for campaign cash "worked just fine for Pete Wilson," Gorton added. But Stockton multimillionaire and Chargers owner Alex Spanos, expected to play a big part in Golding's fundraising, is taking a low public profile. "One potential pitfall for Golding," Roll Call notes, "is the controversy swirling around her handling of a contract to expand the stadium where the Chargers play, a dispute that has made local headlines for months." In addition to Gorton, the magazine says, look for pollster Dick Dresner and media guru Don Sipple to climb aboard the Golding truck soon. "The Golding campaign will emphasize crime and education," said Gorton, pointing specifically to a drop in San Diego's juvenile crime rate during her tenure. A troubling unknown for Golding, says Roll Call, is Vista's Darrel Issa. The car alarm magnate is said to be 99 percent sure of running for the seat, and he's worth $250 million.

R's that kind of town The big downtown public relations firm of Stoorza, Ziegaus & Metzger couldn't resist doing a little horn-blowing for itself in the pages of this month's PR. News, a trade magazine for the profession. Problem is, the write-up about Stoorza's work promoting January's grand opening of Wolfgang Puck's new restaurant in Mission Valley Center took a few shots at the locals. In a story headlined "Dishing Out the Goodies Lure Media to Restaurant Launch" the magazine wrote: "SZM's objectives were to build awareness of the cafe in San Diego [and] attract customers to the restaurant, despite its location in an older, unexciting shopping center." First, free food was used to lure TV types and disk jockeys: "A selection of menu items were hand-delivered to all major broadcast media, radio and TV. . . SZM tried to get the media to feel like they'd be missing out if they didn't come. 'Then, once they're there, they feel bonded to doing a story on it,' Stoorza V.P. Sara Muller was quoted as saying. She added that "even though San Diego is the sixth-largest city in the U.S., it operates like a small town. We needed to get elected officials, presidents of chambers, CEOs, and top management of major companies to know about Wolfgang Puck.... When Puck asked why there were no celebrities at the launch, we said, 'These are the celebrities of San Diego.'"

Affirmative action A congressman from Pennsylvania fears that San Diego's supercomputer center is in a battle to the death with its Pittsburgh counterpart, and he's doing what it takes to make sure the homeboys win. Rep. Mike Doyle, Democrat from Swissvale, told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette last week that the National Science Foundation, which divvies up grants for the centers, isn't playing fair with its plans to consolidate the nation's four supercomputer operations into just two. In addition to San Diego, the current centers are at Champaign-Urbana, Ill., and Ithaca, N.Y., as well as Pittsburgh. Doyle told a house committee he thinks San Diego might have an unfair advantage since it's out west. "This better not just be, 'Well, we want one east of the Mississippi and one west of the Mississippi,' " Doyle said. "There better be some sound scientific criteria for picking San Diego (over Pittsburgh) if that is what actually happens."

Arena joust Look for flames a week from next Wednesday when ex-mayor and Chargers contract foe Maureen O'Connor and U-T columnist Don Bauder join forces to tangle with car dealer and chamber of commerce honcho Steve Cushman and Ry Snyder, executive director of the San Diego International Sports Council. Headlined, "Does San Diego WANT what it takes to be America's Finest City?" the luncheon event is set for the University of San Diego.

Bill Silva and Elton John

We Try to Create a Healthy Business Climate

By Thomas K. Arnold

Three months after he cohosted a "birthday party" fundraiser for City Councilwoman Valerie Stallings's 1998 reelection campaign, veteran San Diego concert promoter Bill Silva has been given what critics are calling a sweetheart deal to produce rock shows on city-owned land in Mission Bay Park.

Among the questions being raised: Why was the project not submitted to a wide-open bidding process, and why is Silva paying the city 5 percent of gross ticket sales — half the rent the city typically charges promoters to use the Civic Theatre or the San Diego Sports Arena?

Critics also point out that the $50,000 minimum guarantee for five months' worth of shows is less than the city makes each year from Street Scene, which lasts just two or three days.

"Bill Silva has obviously negotiated a great deal for his company," says David Swift, San Diego area manager for Avalon Attractions, the Los Angeles–based concert-promoting company that is Silva's chief rival in the local market. "There are certainly some costs he needs to incur, with staging and site setup, but even with those costs, it's still a great deal — and we both know relationships with various people helps business."

"If it's a city facility, there should be a process by which it goes out to bid," adds another local concert promoter who asked his name not be used. "I think there is a process, but Bill has so many political cronies in town that they favor him."

Silva's political largess is well documented. He's given money to perennial mayoral hopeful and County Supervisor Ron Roberts and Councilman Juan Vargas. In the summer of 1995, Silva gave Deanne Spehr, an aide to Councilwoman Judy McCarty, a pair of free tickets to a Bob Dylan concert he was producing. And in October 1994, Silva hosted a festive fundraiser for Mayor Susan Golding in his private skybox at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium during the Rolling Stones concert. At least $11,300 was raised from an assortment of developers, hoteliers, tourism officials, and others, many of them with business before the city.

"From the fact that he is a prodigious fundraiser for the mayor and city council, it certainly creates the perception that he received favorable treatment," says Ruth Holton, executive director with the California chapter of Common Cause. "And certainly members of the city council should be aware that if someone gets favorable treatment and also happens to be a good fundraiser, people will think that treatment wasn't just on the merits of the case, but on the relationship with the council."

Silva defends his practice of giving money to local politicians. "We contribute to candidates we think will further a good business climate in this community — not necessarily our own business agenda, but business in general," he says. "This city, in my estimation, is one in which it is very difficult to do business, and we need politicians who are willing to lessen the bureaucracy and be receptive to the businessman's plight. And if you look at the people I've supported — Ron Roberts or Valerie or Juan Vargas — you'll see they are all people who have different philosophies on life and politics, but they all try to engender a healthy business climate in this community."

Besides, he adds, his deal with the city to produce for-profit shows on Hospitality Point was okayed not by the council, but by the city manager's office. "None of them had anything to do with the decision," he says. "It was all done at the staff level. I never even spoke to the city council about this deal throughout the whole process."

Holton responds: "Staff are not ignorant about who the big campaign donors are. That doesn't excuse anybody."

Silva says his new deal with the city, which gives him "exclusive use of portions of Mission Bay Park" — specifically, Hospitality Point — from May 15 through October 31, is merely an extension of an earlier deal he cut last year after the demise of the San Diego Symphony, with which he had coproduced shows

Permanent Breath-hold

By Bill Salisbury

The buzz took longer than usual to reach me. A Navy SEAL named Keith Kimura was pulled unconscious from 60 feet of room-temp, gin-clear water on 10 January 1997 and died the next day at Sharp Memorial in Coronado. More than a month passed before I heard of a death in the Basic Underwater Demolition/SEAL (BUDS) training tower located on the Strand, a short mortar round south of the Del. You've probably passed the tower on your way to or from IB along Highway 75. Stands between the highway and the ocean. Looks like a giant, upright machine bolt: the cylindrical shaft is flooded with 60 feet of fresh water topped by a hex-head that contains a deck area where trainees — and instructors — enter and exit the shaft.

The tower, which has been in operation since the early 1970s, is used primarily for free-ascent training. To begin this exercise, trainees may either free dive to a container of compressed air called a diving bell, positioned midway down the tower, or enter the tower through a chamber at the bottom. The main purpose of free ascent is to practice reaching the surface after a simulated malfunction of scuba gear. Another purpose is to practice "lock-out, lock-in" procedures for leaving or returning to a submarine underway at a depth of 60 feet.

The key to surviving the exercise is to "blow and go," that is, the trainee must continually exhale compressed air from his lungs until he's on the surface. The compressed air must escape the body as the trainee ascends and water pressure lessens; if not, expanding air in the lungs will burst through the alveolar walls, leak into the pulmonary veins returning to the heart, be pumped into arteries, and block the flow of oxygen-rich blood to the brain. This fatal process is called "air embolism." According to the U.S. Navy Special Warfare Training Handbook, death from lack of oxygen in the brain occurs within five to seven minutes.

But I didn't need a manual to understand the often terminal terror of air embolism. In 1966 I made a free ascent of 120 feet after running out of air on a training dive at San Clemente Island. Quick, efficient work by SEAL instructors got me to a recompression chamber within five minutes after I surfaced vomiting blood, probably from ruptured lung tissue. Spent 36 hours in that chamber to dissolve bubbles in the blood. So I had more than the usual journalistic interest when I heard a trainee had died during free-ascent training in the tower.

On 14 February I got my first official confirmation of a death in the tower. Trish O'Connor, an assistant to the public affairs officer for Naval Special Warfare Command, said an accident had occurred on 10 January that resulted in a death the next day. Public Affairs had issued a press statement on 13 January. When I asked for a copy, O'Conner said it wasn't very detailed, and she could read it over the phone.

"We are all deeply saddened by the death of Hospital Corpsman Second Class Keith M. Kimura. His tremendous devotion to duty and concern for all those around him, in particular the BUDS students under his care and instruction, were his hallmark traits.

"We pray that his family and numerous friends will be given the peace and comfort they need during this most difficult time.

"An investigation into the circumstances which led to his death is ongoing."

I'm used to terse Navy statements about circumstances surrounding SEAL deaths, but this was an all-timer. Still, the statement contained enough for me to realize an instructor had gone belly-up in the tower and not a trainee.

When I pressed O'Connor for more info, all she would add was that Kimura had died during free-ascent training. She wouldn't comment on anything else because "an investigation is ongoing."

"What about cause of death?" I asked. "I mean, he died more than a month ago. Surely a death certificate's been issued. Did he embolize?"

"I can't tell you anything more. You'll have to speak with [Public Affairs Officer] Lieutenant Commander Jim Fallon."

Thus began numerous phone calls back and forth between me and Fallon that failed to connect for several days. In the meantime, I rounded up my usual sources in the teams and a few I'd never talked to before.

Here's what I learned from more than two of these unofficial sources: that Kimura was an instructor assigned to assist in free-ascent training for BUDS class 220; that he was not wearing scuba gear or working from a bell with compressed air; that he didn't die from an embolism but drowned; that free-ascent training had yet to begin when someone — either another instructor or one of the trainees on the tower deck — noticed Kimura's motionless body, perhaps in a sitting position, 60 feet down on the bottom of the tower; that Kimura had entered the water to see how deep he could free dive and how long he could remain under (one source said Kimura may have announced to a group of instructors milling around on the deck, "I'm going to set a world record"); that between five and ten minutes passed before Kimura's body was spotted; that such impromptu breath-holding demonstrations have been going on unsupervised for years; that over time the tower, which started out as a "scary thing," to be respected, had become a "plaything," for some instructors.

My sources, many of them experienced SEALs, raised troubling questions. How, they wanted to know, could experienced instructors lose track of one of their own? How could anyone, instructor or trainee, be allowed to enter the water without supervision? And why the breath-holding exhibition in the first place?

I may know the answer to this last question based on what I learned during my 16 years as a SEAL. The ability to hold one's breath is a badge of honor in the teams. The champ when I came on board was a legendary instructor named Paul McNally. I recall how other trainees and I assembled our first week at the Amphib Base pool to watch in awe as McNally dived to the bottom and remained motionless in 12 feet of water for nearly five minutes. The lesson was clear: this is what a real frogman can do; this is what you worthless clumps should aspire to. Never mind that you won't have to hold your breath for more than a couple of minutes to complete a real mission; this is the mark of a man.

But, unlike real missions, the ability to hold your breath could make or break you during training. Holding your breath to load obstacles with demolitions at unlikely depths of 30 feet or more has been an initiation rite, just as surely as "tacking" submarine dolphins, since the beginning of trainee time. Never mind that such deep obstacles couldn't possibly hazard landing craft that draw only a few feet of water. You load that deep-water obstacle and you are somebody!

Another breath-holding rite of passage is the so-called pool-competency drill (unofficially known as pool harassment). In 1991 the Government Accounting Office (GAO), Congress's investigative agency, found this and other BUDS exercises "potentially dangerous.... During pool competency, instructors... knock off students' masks and fins, crimp or tie knots in their air hoses.... No safety diver is nearby to give air in an emergency.... Between July 28, 1988, since 1992. In that year, the symphony, plagued by poor attendance at its outdoor "Summer Pops" series, decided to try adding rock, jazz, pop, and country acts to the bill to boost ticket sales and tapped Silva as its concert promoting partner. Five shows were lined up for Embarcadero Marina Park South, owned and maintained by the San Diego Unified Port District, in a make-shift outdoor facility with room for about 5200 people.

The next year the lineup was expanded to 14 shows, including appearances by Whitney Houston, Kenny Loggins, and the band Chicago, which ended up drawing a total of nearly 50,000 people and grossing in excess of $1.2 million. Under the deal, Silva and the symphony agreed to split all profits and losses.

Just before the second season got underway, the arrangement drew heat from two other promoters who produced summer concert series, Avalon Attractions at the San Diego State University Open Air Theater and Richard Bartell at Humphrey's on Shelter Island. They claimed Silva was being given an unfair competitive advantage by linking with the nonprofit symphony, which paid the port district no rent for using the park. In December 1993, two months after Silva's final show for the 1993 season, operators of Humphrey's filed a $125,000 damage claim against the port, claiming commissioners discriminated against Humphrey's when they allowed the symphony to stage for-profit shows with Silva. "Based on Mr. Silva's arrangement with the symphony," Bartell recalls, "he was producing the same type of shows we were, but he paid no rent. And we felt that was unfair."

Bartell says the claim was subsequently resolved when the port agreed to charge Silva the same rent he was paying at Humphrey's: 3 percent of food sales, 5 percent of Leverage sales, 5 percent of ticket sales, and 10 percent of sponsorship fees, "which in our case came out to be more than $100,000 a year."

Silva continued to produce outdoor shows at Embarcadero Marina Park South for two more years. The 1994 season grossed nearly $2.2 million and attracted 76,925 spectators, the 1995 season generated gross sales of just under $2 million and drew crowds totaling 78,362, according to figures supplied by his office.

Last year, when the Republican National Convention came to town, the Summer Pops series was moved back to Hospitality Point in Mission Bay Park, where the symphony had originated its outdoor summer shows back in the middle 1980s. When the symphony filed for bankruptcy in the spring of 1996, Silva and the city signed a five-month deal of their own that allowed Silva to continue staging pop shows on Hospitality Point.

Again, other local promoters cried foul, this time because no one else had been invited to bid. "It was so close to summer that there was no time to put it out for bid," explains Terri Williams, deputy director of the city park and recreation department's coastal parks division. "He had already worked on it [the season] and had even booked some acts."

Under his solo deal with the city, Silva produced 14 shows by acts ranging from the Moody Blues to Linda Ronstadt. The concerts drew a total of 59,595 people and generated $1,460,344 in revenue. The city received 3 percent of gross ticket sales, 3 percent of food sales, and 5 percent of beverage sales, for a total of $67,288. The new contract Silva and the city just signed is for the May–October 1997 concert season, with two one-year options "at the sole and absolute discretion of the city manager." Due to complaints from Avalon Attractions that the first contract had not been sent out to bid, Williams says, the city last December ran two weeks of ads in the San Diego Daily Transcript seeking proposals. City officials also approached Avalon, Bartell, as if a third promoter who has worked in the San Diego area, the Niederlander Group of Los Angeles, and invited them to submit proposals.

But Silva "was the only valid response" the city received, Williams maintains, so he got the contract. The terms of the agreement are the same as last year's, except that the city stands to reap 5 percent of food sales instead of 3 percent. Silva also must guarantee a minimum of $50,000, with all proceeds going for upkeep of Mission Bay Park.

Silva insists "it's not a sweetheart deal. Each year we have to pay $300,000 to $350,000 to build and install the site — in staging, fencing, electrical, dressing rooms, equipment acquisitions, labor costs, ad infinitum. And then on top of that, because of the size of the venue and the fact that it's in a public park that needs to be cleaned every night after each show, we spend another $300,000 to make it presentable to the public. So we're spending between $600,000 and $650,000 a year in operations. Nothing's permanent and there's no assurance that we will have it next year. The reason there were no other proposals is that everybody I talked to thought it was a crazy and insane deal and doesn't make sense financially. If it did, other people would have submitted bids."

Both Avalon's Swift and Humphrey's Bartell, however, say the reason they did not submit bids is that they were busy producing summer concert series of their own elsewhere. Another promoter said he did not submit a bid because he felt he could not have gotten the same terms Silva, "with his city hall connections," was able to negotiate.

Critics also fault the selection process, wondering why ads for a proposal were run in a tiny downtown business paper with a circulation of less than 10,000, instead of a nationally circulated entertainment trade like Billboard, Variety or the Hollywood Reporter.

And while Silva points out that he pays the same percentage of ticket, food, and drink sales to the city as Humphrey's pays to the port, critics note that Humphrey's holds its concerts in its own facility, on its own leased grounds — for which it already pays the port more than $600,000 a year in rent.

"If I were Bill Silva I would be very happy with the deal," concludes Avalon's Swift. "But if the city were in it just for the money, they could have done a better job." ■

If your car is smashed up, what about your body?

After an auto accident, you automatically bring your car in for repairs, but what about your body? Chances are, if your car was damaged, so were you.

Auto accidents frequently cause whiplash, back and neck injuries. A chiropractic examination will identify any injuries you may have sustained. In many cases, through chiropractic treatment, unnecessary pain, even surgery, can be avoided.

If you've been in an auto accident and are hurting, we urge you to give us a call and make an appointment for an initial exam. Our patient list includes many people who have found relief through the natural, chiropractic approach to health care. We can help you too.

and March 12, 1996), eight students experienced shallow water blackout ... unconsciousness due to lack of oxygen. ... Diving medical authorities view this as dangerous because it can lead to air embolism or drowning."

I called Ray Dittenhoffer, an authority on free diving, in Beaufort, South Carolina, where he owns and manages Craven Street Inn. Dittenhoffer has been a member and captain of the U.S. free-diving team, has taught spearfishing and free diving for years (including several courses in San Diego), and is a close friend of the world free-diving champion, Pepin Ferreras, who free dives to more than 400 feet.

"Breath-holding at any depth can be fatal," Dittenhoffer said, "because you can lose consciousness from lack of oxygen without any warning whatsoever. It's like running out of gas in a car with no warning indicator. I never practice breath-holding without supervision, even if it's in a swimming pool.

"And breath-holding at depth is doubly dangerous because the deeper you go, the more efficient your body becomes in delivering oxygen to vital organs like the brain. You feel great, you don't have the urge to breathe like on the surface, but your body is using up that O². At some point, usually as you start to ascend, the light goes out, and you are well on your way to a permanent breath-hold. The cardinal rule is simply do not free dive to any depth without supervision."

After my interview with Ray I had a few intense conversations with Public Affairs Officer Fallon, but he told me little more than I'd learned from his assistant. He did say Kimura was from Thousand Oaks, was 25 when he died, had graduated from BUDS in 1992, and served a tour with Swimmer Delivery Vehicle Team Two before joining BUDS as an instructor in 1996. He said he'd try but didn't think he could find a photo of Kimura.

Fallon wouldn't comment on what my sources had told me. He urged me to wait a month or so until the investigation was completed. He did offer, as he put it, a "sound bite": "This command is absolutely committed to our people and to the safe conduct of all evolutions; safety is paramount."

He added that he didn't believe his thin statement on 10 January about Kimura's death had kept anything from the public. "You don't think," he asked, "that the Navy should make a full press release every time a sailor dies, do you?"

I said I thought a death in a high-risk training exercise warranted more than condolences to family and friends, especially when BUDS had been severely criticized a few years ago by the GAO for ignoring safety during such exercises. Fallon, who is NOT A SEAL, was unaware of this criticism. ■

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP

BY MATTHEW ALICE

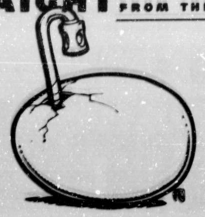

ILLUSTRATION BY NICK GARRY

Matmail:
I was getting ready to cook up some eggs the other day, and I started wondering...how do the little chickens breathe inside the shells before they've hatched? It seems like a long time for them to hold their breath during the 21 days or so it takes for them to break out of the shell.
— Rich, the Net

Let's back up the truck, Rich. You're already five miles down the wrong road on this one. The chicklet doesn't drop out of the hen fully developed in the shell, then struggle for 21 days to get out. In fact it takes 21 days from the time it's laid for the egg to develop from the tryable, yolk-and-white form into the cute, chirping, fuzzy yellow form. For the first two weeks outside the hen, the thing in the shell hardly even looks like a chick. But you're right, the developing embryo does need oxygen. And I'm pleased to be the first to tell you that unhatched chicks (and other birds) breathe through their butts.

Around day four after the chicken lays an egg, the embryo develops a structure called an allamois (al-an-toys), a vein-filled sac that grows out of the back end of the bird's digestive tract. It absorbs oxygen that comes in through the porous egg shell and also excretes wastes. The growing bird can hum along nicely, "breathing" this way until about two days before it hatches. At that time, it breaks the shell's membrane lining and punctures that little air sac in the fat end of the egg. For a while, the chick breathes with both the air sac and the allantois. When hatch-time comes, it's weaned itself off the allamois, which dries up and is left behind in the discarded shell.

Dear Matthew Alice:
A large, white, official-looking X has been painted in the bike lane on northbound 101 in Encinitas, in front of D.B. Hacker's restaurant (101 North Highway 101). Who painted this X, and what are its implications?
— A.G., North County

The ominous X is an aerial marker. It was painted by a surveyor, who also pounded that shiny nail into the asphalt at the intersection of the two arms of the X. Somewhere in the vicinity (maybe within blocks, maybe within acres or miles) are three more Xs with nails, and the four Xs mark the corners of a square or rectangular chunk of land. The nails indicate points of known elevation and map coordinates. When the first surveyor's done, an aerial surveyor hops in a plane and takes a series of overlapping photos of the land chunk in question, making sure the Xs are included. When the photos are assembled, all the landmarks can be located correctly and their elevations described using the Xs as reference points. (I'll spare you the details. It's complicated.) After that, who knows. Sometimes the surveys are used for mapping. Sometimes they mean we're in for a new strip mall or housing development. Around the corner from Hackers, on Second, west of Highway 101, you'll see two more bike-lane Xs from two other projects. The county is lousy with them, like an out-of-control ticktacktoe game.

Dear Matt:
Who/what are the "Chouest" ships (the Laney Chouest, Dolores Chouest, Cory Chouest, Amy Chouest) — red and brown, with mini-subs on board, which go in and out of the bay? What do they do? Who are the Chouests?
— Barbara J. Nobles, Hillcrest

A Chouest family reunion would clog up the harbor big time. What a clan. It all started with Edison Chouest, founder of Edison Chouest Offshore Inc., in Galliano, Louisiana. The company builds icebreakers, container ships, oil field vessels, surveillance and submarine-rescue ships, research vessels — all kinds of high-seas workhorses. At some point, the company started naming ships after family members, and things have simply gotten out of hand. Don't know whether they had babies to keep up with ship production or built ships to keep up with the babies, but anyway, there are at least 22 Chouests working around the globe — the four you named, plus Margaret B., Eddie, Kathy, Carolyn, Dino, Dionne, Damon, Casey, Ross, Betty, Ella G., Jonathan, Ryan, Gail, Julian, Joseph, Joan, and Jackie Chouest. There used to be a Kirt Chouest too, but a fleet owner renamed it. Dolores Chouest is Edison's wife. Laney Chouest is the youngest of their sons. Margaret is Laney's wife. Amy and Cory are their kids. Ella is Laney's mother-in-law. Laney carries manned and unmanned submersibles, which the Navy has recently used to scout submerged plane wreckage and for undersea geological research. Dolores carries a deep submergence rescue vehicle to help subs in trouble. Cory and Amy are research vessels. Laney and Dolores are currently ported at North Island.

Matmail:
Where did the idea come from that ostriches stick their heads in the sand when they're frightened? Do they really do that? How do they keep from inhaling the sand?
— Curious Person, San Diego

Congratulations. You cleverly identified the big flaw in that particular old wives' tale. Ostriches will sometimes flatten themselves on the ground when things are looking dicey — or as flat as a big lumpy bird can get, anyway. That's the likely source of the story. But either way, you've got to figure the ostrich is a pretty delusional bird.

LEAVING IT ALL BEHIND

SPORTING BOX

Three forty-five a.m. is the truest piece of the night. Bars are long closed and the earliest rising day worker is in deepest sleep. The urban world slides along at half speed; soft, quiet, just you and me.

A tall man is working a wand steam cleaner. He moves the wand back and forth over a six-foot square of cement, back and forth, back and forth, then moves on to the next section. The rush of water hisses as it hits the ground; hot steam billows back up to the man's chest. It looks like a workingman's ballet presented in the chalky stage light of a nearly full moon. I walk closer to the figure and ask, "Got a second?"

Cliff Jones smiles. "Sure. I've been wanting to take a break anyway."

Typical night-shift reply. Jones and I are in front of the Lucky supermarket on the corner of Magnolia and Main in El Cajon. My companion is the proprietor of a steam cleaning service and he's been hosing the concrete entryway into the grocery store. Jones retrieves a cup of coffee and a cigarette from his van and we begin with, "When did you start work tonight?"

Jones has a gracious, plenty-of-time smile. "I started at 1:30."

"Work until...?"

"After this job I might go home and go to sleep. Depends on how I feel when I finish. If I feel okay, get a second wind, I'll do another job. This is a subcontract for me. I have my own contracts all over the city."

I study his rig, count two tanks and a diesel generator. "What is it that you actually do? This looks like a high-pressure water gun."

"Correct. High-pressure hot water. It gets gum, stains, and cleans concrete. I also have a steam option on the machine. I just a gave a quote to a condominium complex in La Jolla. I'll use the steam on their tile because if I use the high pressure it will blow all the compost from around their plants."

Never fails. Every job has its steam option. "How did you find this gig?"

"Not too many people are aware of it. I wasn't. I was an insurance broker for 15 years. This was introduced to me by a man who was selling the machine to a body shop that I was selling commercial insurance to. I saw the potential in it and bought one."

There's another job hawking steam cleaning units to the public. I shudder. "So I guess the selling point is that every business has to have its sidewalk cleaned, every shopping center, every..."

"Absolutely."

"Was the salesman right? Is there a fair amount of work out here?"

"More than we can handle, but don't tell anyone." Jones shows his relaxed, carefree smile. "The first machine I bought was $14,000, monthly payment of $350 until it was repossessed. That first year I went out and hustled, hustled, hustled. I had business but I didn't have the contracts to keep me going through the bad months. That's why I failed the first time."

I'm feeling so relaxed, I nod pleasantly. Jones carries on. "The bad months are the winter months."

"Because the rain cleans?"

"It doesn't clean, although people think that. I clean my accounts in the rain. You can see the difference right away. Rain gets the top dirt off if it's on a slope, but it doesn't clean."

A police siren kicks in from North Main. "I assume most of this work is done at night?"

"Can't do it with people around. San Diego is so congested with vehicles and people — it's a joy to be able to get away from that."

"How about sports? What kind of sports can you do working nights?"

"Play a lot of golf, getting very good. I play early in the morning. I don't golf on the weekends; there are too many people on the course. Normally I'll go on a Monday and a Wednesday. I've played twice, three times a week for the last six years."

"What about the NBA, the NCAA playoffs, football, baseball, all that stuff?"

"I watch the late Sunday games for football and the Monday night game. The rest of it, that's for day people. You leave all that behind when you work nights. I don't miss it. There isn't much about days or day people that I like. Way too much pressure, way too much gimmie, gimmie, gimmie, way too much hurry, hurry, hurry. You can have it all."

Thanks.

THEODORE GRAHAM-ROGERS: SAN DIEGO'S OTHERWORLDLY PROBATION OFFICIAL

him over the last ten years testify to such experiences with other ghosts, under his tutelage. Birds outside my window twitter. But no otherworldly presence appears.

So instead I'll let Debra Saum describe her first encounter with the octogenarian who became her mentor. This occurred in August of 1968, a week after Saum had left a stressful second marriage. "I had gone through a lot of personal introspection to leave, and I knew that I was launching myself into a whole new phase of my life," she recalls. Today Saum is 46 years old and beautiful: glowing with health, vivacious, lissome as a yogi. In fact, she was teaching yoga at the tony Cal-a-Vie Spa in Vista, when one of the body-worker/beauticians there invited her to a group that Graham-Rogers had organized.

The woman explained that the group's purpose was to investigate psychic phenomena, a goal that intrigued Saum. "When I was around six and seven years old, I used to have dreams all the time about things that would come true," she says. "I also used to see colors around people." At some point in her childhood, these dreams and visions disappeared. "I think I probably shut down," Saum reflects. "That's typical in kids who are real psychic."

But when she was 16, catastrophe rocked Saum. Her father, a 36-year-old firefighter, died of a heart attack while battling a fire in central San Diego. "I was really angry with my dad! I wasn't done relating to him, and I wanted to figure out how to continue doing it. If we go somewhere, where is it?" she demands. "And is there a telephone line to those individuals? I started studying Zen and yoga and meditation. When I was just a kid, I was reading Carlos Castaneda and investigating some pretty far-out principles."

Saum says, "I'll never forget what happened" on the August evening in 1968 when she rang the doorbell of Graham-Rogers's Cardiff duplex. "The door opened, and there stood this tall, skinny, little bent-over gray-haired gentleman. And I instantly felt the strongest bond that I have ever felt with anyone in my life. He embraced me, and he said, 'Oh! I've been waiting for you!' "

He led her into the room and introduced her to the other people present. Saum's coworker from the spa, a tall redhead with the face of a cover girl, was there. I'll call her Carla. (She's afraid that use of her real name might damage her current career in nursing.) Another member was Margaret (also not her real name). Margaret, who's now 44, is also a very attractive woman, petite and blessed with long, wavy, honey blond hair.

Like Saum, Margaret says she first experienced precognition as a child. "I had psychic dreams," she says. "They weren't anything earth-shattering. Like, I'd dream that my friend's grandparents had come over. And then the next day, I'd go to her house and her grandparents would drop in." Margaret also believes that a dead grandmother communicated with her via a Ouija board for a period while she was in eighth grade.

She says her first astonishing experience didn't occur until she was in her mid-20s. This was just before she got married. "I was sharing a bedroom with my sister. And I woke up one night and there were three ladies at the foot of my bed," Margaret recounts. "All wearing dresses. All holding little purses. All with little hats and jewelry on. One was my grandmother, who had passed away when I was 10. One was my father's mother, who had died when he was 19. And the third was my father's aunt, whom I hadn't met either." She recognized the latter two from family pictures and descriptions.

"They said they were always going to be with me. That they would be my guides," Margaret says the apparition flabbergasted her, but she managed to chat with the three women, who finally disappeared. Asked whether she might not have dreamed them, she is adamant. "No way! Because I was fully awake. They called my name! I know we've all had dreams that feel very realistic ... but it isn't the same as being awakened in the night and seeing something actually there. It was just too real."

Margaret says the experience disturbed her so much that she had no desire to experiment any further. She became involved with Graham-Rogers only because he lived in the duplex adjoining hers. She and her husband had moved into it just four days before their first child was born. After her daughter's birth, Margaret says she got to know all the neighbors in her cul-de-sac. She thinks she must have learned about Graham-Rogers's interest in paranormal phenomena by noticing his library. "A lot of people in the community had converted their garages into additional rooms. He'd made his into a library. Except for where the washer and dryer were, all the walls were covered by books, and he had bookshelves in between, just like a regular library."

Graham-Rogers had organized the volumes according to topic: hypnotism, past-life experiences, extrasensory perception, religion, and so forth. "We probably started with religion because it's a very important part of my life," Margaret says. (Besides being a devout Christian, she works for a mainline Protestant church.)

"Ted had books on religions of all kinds — Hindu, Christian, Buddhist, Jewish. He was a man of faith, and an incredibly intelligent, well-read, well-versed person when it came to religion. He showed me the similarities between the different religions, something I had never had the opportunity to study."

Margaret says she and he also chatted about their families and backgrounds, and she learned that he was organizing a class in the home of a neighbor at the end of the block. Called Voyage to Discovery, its subject was the development of latent psychic talents. Although her session with the nocturnal grandmothers had frightened her, Margaret says it also had made her believe in the existence of the paranormal. "My mother always used to say that women had 'intuition.' I had grown up with that idea, and I decided to join and find out if I really had psychic ability."

She says Graham-Rogers did things in the group like experimenting with an automatic card shuffler and a deck of cards. The seven or eight people who made up the group would attempt to divine which card had been selected. "He had these sheets and we would mark how many times we would get it right or wrong or be off by only one. Because the fact that you don't get it right on does not necessarily mean that you don't have psychic awareness," Margaret declares. "You could be one off, and that would tell you something."

After a while, Graham-Rogers progressed to putting objects in a box and having the women try to intuit what the objects were. Explains Carla, the body-worker-turned-nurse, "We would all sit and meditate and write down everything that came to us about what was in the box. We wouldn't all come up with the same thing. Or rather, it would often be the same thing but interpreted differently. Like, once he put in a toy sailboat. And somebody drew triangles. And someone else drew water — but not necessarily with the sailboat on it."

Margaret says at some point the group began meeting at Graham-Rogers's house, "and that's when we stepped up to the next level. ... We went on to writing down our dreams, talking about colors, learning meditation." Graham-Rogers lectured about tarot cards and initiated the women into the mysteries of reading tea leaves. "Those were tools to use in interpreting psychic behavior," says Margaret. "So if we were ever to have clients, then we could interpret them, although that wasn't the goal. The goal was to raise our level of psychic awareness. And for Ted to do research on people who never had proclaimed themselves to be psychics."

Margaret says her experiences in the class changed her view of herself. "First of all, I discovered that I can interpret and read tea leaves very well — that it wasn't just a matter of looking into the cup and reading tea leaves. When I looked into the cup, I could see a person's future. I could see what was going on in his or her life. For instance, I read Carla's tea leaves, and I saw her in a long, white, flowing dress. It was a wedding dress, but not a traditional one." Not long after this vision occurred, Carla got married. Margaret declares, adding that she hadn't even known that Carla was dating anyone.

"Oh my gosh!" she interjects, as if she had just remembered something. But she explains, "It just gives me chills thinking about it. Even though I've had these experiences, it amazes me that they exist! Everything that we're taught says, 'No, this cannot happen.' But why couldn't God make this happen — put things into the world that are there for us to discover?"

She says the next milestone in her development came one summer evening when her daughter was 18 months old. "It's warm. My husband hasn't come home from work yet," Margaret summons the memory into the present tense. "My daughter and I are picking up her toys out on the patio. And suddenly I hear this [whispered] 'Margaret!' coming from the house. I walk into the kitchen, look around, but there's nothing there." Outside, she heard her name again, and again she found nothing. "The third time I hear the voice, I call up Ted and tell him, 'You've got to come over. Something's happening right now, and I haven't a clue what's going on.'

"This is giving me chills just recalling it!" she exclaims. "Ted and I were sitting right here on this very sofa. And he puts me into a trance, and I see a rainy street in a downtown city." Her voice has taken on a hypnotic quality. "I see a Mercury Sable with the driver's side just sheared off. There are people all around and it's nighttime, so I can see the lights reflecting off the wet street. There's also a jackknifed truck. It's all very clear."

She says when Ted directed her to move further into the trance and tell him more about what she was seeing, "I saw three little girls walking through a tunnel. I knew it was the tunnel that you go through when you die. One of the girls had braids. She was, like, 12. One was around 8 and one was 6 or so. The three little girls were all holding hands, and they were crying. Ted was telling me, 'Tell them to go toward the light. Tell them that they have died. Tell them everything will be all right.'

"And it's like I'm two people. I am divided in half. My brain is seeing and telling Ted everything that's going on. And the other half of me is realistically evaluating, asking, 'What in the world is going on here? Why am I here? And why am I doing this?' She's almost shrieking the questions. "I thought, 'This can't be happening. It's just too strange. Too weird. No way in the world am I doing this!' And all of a sudden I saw this one girl coming back." Margaret says when she told him this, Graham-Rogers reacted with alarm. "She's coming back! Oh, my gosh, then tell her to come back through the tunnel, that it wasn't her time to go yet!' And she went back into her body, inside the car that was all demolished.

"I came out of it just crying, Sobbing! Because I was feeling the girls' tragedy, and I also was just in awe. What had happened?" Never before had she experienced anything like this, Margaret insists. "No way! There was no way I would invite something like that! It was just yuck!" At the same time, energy and a sense of euphoria coursed through her.

"And Ted was just beaming. He was saying, 'You're a medium! You're a medium!' 'I'm a what?' Margaret bellows back at him in her re-creation of the scene. "All I could think of was these women who were starbans and had cows of balls and the whole business."

Margaret says that night she couldn't sleep, and at one point she returned to her living room. "And this man appeared. He was holding a hat and crying. He was saying, 'I'm so sorry! I'm so sorry!' I asked what he was sorry about." Margaret says this conversation was telepathic, but she insists she could literally see him standing before her. "He was three-dimensional, but there was no solidness to him. It was obvious that he was a spirit. He told me he was the truck driver who'd killed the family, that his brakes had gone out and he'd been killed in the accident too. I said, 'That's okay. All will be forgiven. Let me send you to the light.' Then I went into trance and told him to look around for the bright white light and that it would be all right. But his anguish was just so awful. That's something that we see in ghosts. You can feel their anguish and their feelings."

Appearing on the "Ask Your Probation Officer" radio program, circa 1991

That was her first experience as a medium, Margaret declares. "And for the next seven or eight years, that's what I did. I rescued people when I was in trance."

She says she'd had several such "rescue" experiences when Debra Saum showed up for her first meeting. It's been eight and a half years since that night, and Saum no longer remembers all the details of the evening. Besides Clorfa and Margaret, another woman named Connie was there, and "We had some entities present," Saum recalls. "I remember feeling them and talking about them. There was no hell, that's for sure." From then on, Saum attended almost every Thursday night gathering.

For each one, Graham-Rogers served wine and laid out an assortment of cookies or Sara Lee cake. "We'd all come in and chitchat, as women do," says Saum. "How was your week? And we'd sit and eat our cookies and unwind. And then at some point, Dr. Ted would lead a meditation — basically a general relaxation technique where we would say, 'We are here. We await ourselves to open. Whoever wants to come through, we are here to help you.'"

Saum says they didn't turn off the lights or gather around a séance table, though Graham-Rogers always burned incense, which he loved and defended in India by the case. And "sometimes we'd die and we really feel anything, and then we'd kind of all open our eyes and stretch a little bit and start to chat. But there was never, ever a meeting when something didn't eventually happen." At some point one or more of the women would start to sense something is to manifest physical symptoms of a ghostly visitation, according to Saum.

"Connie would start getting the shivers. For Carla, her legs would start going." Very common was the sudden sensation of cold, Saum says. "What we discovered is that when an entity comes into the room, it needs energy to make its presence known, so it will pull energy out of the room. Sometimes when you feel extreme cold, it's not frightening. It's just a sign that there might be someone present."

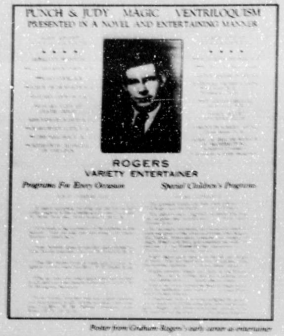
She claims that sometimes the symptoms were more bizarre. "One of my most vivid memories is of all of us sitting around, and we were chatting. We'd done the meditation, and we were sure relaxed and instantaneously, all of us said, 'I smell leather!' Do you smell it?' I smell leather! A moment later, Carla said, 'I feel this cowboy guy. And I think we're smelling his chaps.' "

Today Carla's eyes sparkle when she recalls the incident; it was the first time an entity entered her body, she asserts. "I remember a very heavy, drooly type of male energy coming in. And I was more or less taken over," she states. "I had no control over anything. It was sort of like I was there in the background. Something else was inside my body. It was like I could see it from the outside. He just came in and all of a sudden, he was me. My facial expressions had changed. My voice had changed. My whole presence became very big."

Carla doesn't remember much about the cowboy's story. "Sometimes we got names; sometimes we didn't. I think it was like he was shot by one of his own. There were Indians, but he was left. They thought he was dead." Being abandoned to die out in the middle of nowhere "was sort of what got him caught between the planes. He wasn't sure where he was and what had happened. So he got stuck," Saum and Carla and Margaret agree that when they tried to persuade the cowboy to "go to the light," he balked. "He wouldn't let go of me," Carla recalls. "I could tell that he was still caught at, like, the chest level."

"He was angry," Saum recollects. "He wanted to get get whoever had killed him, and he couldn't figure out why he couldn't go back to his body."

"I remember being shocked by seeing the possibility that he wouldn't leave!" declares Margaret. She says Graham-Rogers's reaction also startled her. "Ted got very upset and angry. He said, 'You will leave. It's time for you to go!' This is Carla's body." Carla was very calm and had her eyes closed. But she was just shaking. And Ted was yelling across the room, saying, 'You've got to leave her body! You cannot have it!' "



Poster from Graham-Rogers's early career as entertainer

The cowboy "stubbornly fought it, but finally he went over to the light," recalls Saum. Carla concurs. "He came up through the top of my head, that's where they usually came out," She adds. "I usually had a really bad headache after these experiences."

Graham-Rogers was jubilant; such experiences were what he had hoped to precipitate, Saum says. "He mentioned to us in passing once that Bumblebees somehormonically are not supposed to fly. And he kept saying, 'You all are doing things that we're not supposed to be able to do.' " Charmed by this image, the women started calling their group the Bumblebees. Soon they came to believe that they could travel far beyond Graham-Rogers's living room.

Saum, for example, relates this incident involving a trans-Atlantic spirit. She says that Graham-Rogers had become involved with several psychic research organizations in England, and on one of his many trips to that country he met a couple named Rita and Fred. "Rita would have this little entity by the name of Billy come through her. She'd be sitting in trance with her eyes closed, and she'd be saying — mind you, this is Billy speaking through Rita — 'Fred, you will feel pressure here, here, and here.' And sure enough, Fred would feel somebody pushing him on the forehead. She'd say, 'Fred, you will see these colors.' And he'd see them. Well, this had been going on for about a year, and it seemed as though Billy really dominated Rita. He was the only entity that would come through her. And it was always the same — the pressure, the colors. It was getting kind of boring. Dr. Ted would have weekly conversations with them over the phone, which he recorded.

"So the Bees knew about Rita and Fred," Saum continues, "but we weren't all that involved with the England stuff. And then one night I started feeling the energy of a little boy child who was really upset. He'd been drowned, and his body was beyond decay in this pond. And we discovered that he'd been murdered by what seemed to be his uncle. The way this comes is that I'm getting images and pictures. And the other members of the group would be filling in the pieces of the puzzle that I wasn't seeing. One gal would say, 'Oh yeah, there's the needle.' So it was not suggestion. We were all experiencing the same vision, if you will."

Saum says the group eventually determined that the spirit was Billy. "Billy was pretty cantankerous. We later realized that he had the ability as a spirit to travel back and forth between the astral plane and this world. He'd learned to do things like making pressure happen on Fred's face and bringing colors for Fred to see." Saum claims that the Bumblebees finally persuaded Billy to stay put in the spirit world, and "here's the clincher, I think. I asked Ted if he was going to tell Rita and Fred the news, and he said, 'Of course not! I want to see what happens.' The next week he called them, and Rita said, 'Dr. Ted, the strangest thing has happened. Billy's gone! He's not coming through me anymore.'"

Saum says she met Rita and Fred when she traveled to England with Graham-Rogers in 1991 to attend a psychic conference. "They were a lovely, dear, sweet, unassuming couple — very plain and down-to-earth," she says. Saum says the trip also showed her how many people in English psychic circles knew and respected Graham-Rogers. He'd become an active member of the London-based Society for Psychical Research as long ago as 1948. His interest in psychic investigation predated that by several decades, however.

Autobiographical material discovered by Saum after Graham-Rogers's death indicates that he was born into a mystical milieu. His parents were a doctor and nurse who practiced in New York City, and they "as well as aunts, uncles, grandmother, and many family friends were from a New Thought background and actively interested in psychic research. ESP was an accepted fact," Graham-Rogers records in one document. Saum adds, "He told me that one of his grandmothers was a known psychic to the stockbrokers. They would stop by in the morning in their horses and buggies and get her perception for the day's market. And he had another female relative who read tea leaves. So he'd been raised with a fascination for the subject."

The young Ted also learned hypnosis in his midteens and trained in stage magic from the age of 8, his memoir states. He says he became a protégé of "an outstanding professional" magician by the name of Frank Ducrot, who introduced him to Harry Houdini. "From the age of 15, I professionally performed magic and gave demonstrations of mentalism, ESP, and hypnosis," Graham-Rogers writes. "Using my knowledge of psychic phenomena and sleight of hand, I assisted Houdini in his investigation of fraud mediums."

If Graham-Rogers ever wrote about those outings with Houdini, the writings appear to have been lost. However, Houdini chronicled his debunking work, and in his classic 1924 work, A Magician among the Spirits, the world's renowned performer explains why he took on that role. As a young man, he had dabbled in giving séances "as a lark," he records. "At the time I appreciated the fact that I surprised my clients, but while aware of the fact that I was deceiving them, I did not see or understand the seriousness of trifling with such sacred sentimentality. . . ."

The death of Houdini's mother, whom he adored, changed his casual attitude. "How would have parted gladly with a large share of my earthly possessions for the solace of one word from my loved departed. . . . From that time to the present I have never entered a séance room except with an open mind. . . ." To try to establish the possibility of "intercommunication," Houdini began getting various friends and loved ones to agree that whichever of them died first would communicate with the other, if at all possible. By 1924, however, he was reporting, "I have never received a word. The first of these compacts [some 14, by that point] was made more than 25 years ago, and I am certain that if any one of the persons could have reached me, he would have done so. One compact was made with my private secretary, the late John W. Sargent, a man of mature years. We were very much attached to each other. The day before he underwent an operation he said to me, 'Houdini, this may be the end. If it is, I am coming back to you no matter what happens on the other side. . . .' He died the next day. That was more than three years ago, and there has been no sign. And I know that our minds were so close to each other that I would have received the signal that my friend wanted to call me."

Houdini amassed a fabulous library of books about Spiritualism and related matters. He attended hundreds of séances. "[B]ut as a result of my efforts I must confess that I am farther than ever from belief in the genuineness of Spirit manifestation," he wrote. "[N]othing has been revealed to convince me that intercommunication has been established between the Spirits of the departed and those still in the flesh."

Houdini's unequivocal dismissal of Spiritualism had a major impact on the movement that had burgeoned in America since the middle of the last century. Believers, whose ranks worldwide may have swelled to as many as 30 million by the late 1800s, detected en masse in the second quarter of the 20th Century. But despite having worked at Houdini's side, Graham-Rogers doesn't appear to have joined the skeptics.

In 1929 and 1930, he participated "in research of telepathy and clairvoyance (ESP) at Columbia University," according to his autobiographical notes. He must have done this while taking courses in theology and sociology at Wagner College, from which he received a bachelor of science degree in 1933. He paid for his education by working as a magician.

After graduation, the New York City school system hired Graham-Rogers to work on delinquency prevention, then he drifted into a job with New York City's Public Works Administration. But magic continued to play an important role in his life, according to his only child, a daughter named Pat, who today works as a textbook illustrator for the San Diego City Schools. "It was great as I was growing up because we never had to pay for a magician at my birthday parties," she says. "He also used to perform at birthday parties on Long Island for fancy folks. I remember he used guinea pigs instead of rabbits because they lasted longer. And they were always named Tony. But I wasn't allowed to make pets of them because they were a part of the act." Pat remembers her father taking her to see Harry Blackstone perform on the evening before the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. "I got to go up onstage, and of course I was well trained not to say if I saw anything interesting."

Pat Graham-Rogers thinks the involvement with magic increased her father's long-standing interest in parapsychology. That's likely, agrees Ryomen Mandel. Now the director of the Yoga Center of San Francisco, Mandel used to live in San Diego. She met Graham-Rogers here around 1981 and says she shared with him an interest not only in meditation and spiritual exploration but also in magic. For one six-year period, Mandel performed in a professional magic act that traveled around the world.

"When you practice the art of magic," she declares today, "you come to appreciate the power of awe. I don't mean that in terms of power over people, but in terms of opening inner doors. The power of awe can shake us loose from our preconceptions of how life is supposed to be. So practicing magic leads you to want to discover what's beyond the veil. What you see is not necessarily what's going on, and you start wondering about that in your own life."

In the first half of the 1940s, Graham-Rogers's workaday life sounds as if it alone must have been pretty diverting. He got a job as a New York State parole officer; then when the war broke out he became an Army Air Force captain, two events that like today in Pat Graham-Rogers's mind. "I always think of Dad as a combination of Dick Tracy and General MacArthur," she commented shortly after his death. "Because he'd come home from his parole work with a shoulder holster and a blackjack, and then in the Air Force, he was in uniform."

But throughout this period, the other side of the veil continued to mesmerize him. He pursued metapsychology studies through extension courses with the Theosophical Society in Covina, California (according to his notes), and since the war ended and he returned to his parole job, he also plunged into "intensive study and practice of metaphysics, creative imagery, psychic research, and metapsychology" at the Rosicrucian New York City facility.

For part of his Army Air Force service, Graham-Rogers had been stationed in Tunisia, and his family had vacationed in San Diego, says his daughter, who adds, "Mother fell in love with it. And then I came down with rheumatic fever and they thought the climate would be better for me." So Graham-Rogers sought and won an offer to run the San Diego County Probation Department, and he assumed on June 1, 1947.

In the tidy manila folder that Graham-Rogers left behind him, one gets glimpses of two lives so different that they seem as if they should belong to two separate people. The folder for his career as chief probation officer holds a couple of yellowed newspaper clips. In one from 1963, "Charles Rogers" (as he was known in that life) is receiving the Legion of Honor award from the Mason's Order of DeMolay along with three other self-satisfied middle-aged men in crew cuts. Rogers looks like the archetypal early '60s Organization Man — now too big to be handsome, mustache too wimpy to be threatening, he cinched up tight against the stiff white shirt collar. In a 1967 photo that must have been taken right before his retirement, he's grown more interesting, developed jowls, let his mustache begin to expand. But he's discussing a booklet entitled Don't Be a Dope at a PTA meeting, and the expression on his face is as tight and judgmental as any ever worn by Nancy Reagan. Other papers in this folder bear mind-numbing titles such as "Commitment of Minors to State Institutions Under the Jurisdiction of the Department of Mental Hygiene."

Then there are the folders holding his psychic writings. Most of the writings aren't dated, but his personal notes reveal that be belonged to the California Parapsychology Foundation from 1950 on and participated in numerous psychic activities during the two decades that followed.

Carla says that Graham-Rogers took into consideration "all the other courses I'd taken for massage therapy" in granting her a Ph.D. in metaparapsychology.

Retirement in 1967 gave him more time to devote to these interests, according to his daughter. His wife died in 1975, and afterward, "He grieved for quite a while, but then he sort of did a reversal and became a different person," Pat says. "He had always wanted to wear Western clothes, I think as a result of living in Arizona. So he got into cowboy boots. He had about 80 pairs of cowboy boots and a couple of Stetson hats." She observes, too, that he became something of a flirt.

He also began collecting advanced degrees from various institutions, some of them dubious. In 1977, for example, he picked up a Ph.D. in counseling psychology from Newport International University after writing a dissertation entitled "The Proposal of Phi Mow as a Generic Term for the Dynamic of Paranormal Phenomena in Therapeutic Relationships." The following year, he bagged a Ph.D. in [illegible] psychology from the Pacific Institute for Humanistic Studies, based in San Diego. Some years later, Graham Rogers gave himself listed in Who's Who in the World and Who's Who in American Education, and according to those lengthy entries, he also served as the chairman of 1985's metapsychology department from 1977 to 1979 (the same period in which he was acquiring his own degree there). His daughter Pat says that after the Who's Who listings appeared, other degrees from other dubious organizations "just sort of began arriving in the mail," she adds. "He loved it" — speculating that her father had always wanted to live up to his own father's medical degree.

The Who's Who listing says that Graham Rogers served on UNI's psychology faculty from 1967 through 1983. But during that interval two other organizations commanded his attention: the International Association of Metapsychology and the International Institute of Metapsychology — both founded by Graham Rogers and headquartered in his home. In 1985 they caught the eye of a reporter for the Coast Dispatch, whose resulting story included two photos of the dashing, muscular figure into which the one-time organization man had metamorphosed: the gleaming dome of his head fringed with snow-white hair, the snow-white mustache approaching handlebar proportions, eyes laughing behind wire-rimmed glasses.

The reporter described the Cardiff display as being stuffed with "the works of noted psychologists and his spoken [illegible] hundreds of cassette of lectures and programs, [illegible] copying machines, tape recorders, and other study aids." Graham Rogers had "probably done as much as humanly possible toward turning a typical tract home into an institute of higher learning," the story declared.

It also proclaimed that about 100 persons were affiliated with the institute, which boasted "a staff of 12 'minister-counselors' " including Graham Rogers. He was said to conduct seminars and workshops and also to practice past life regressions. In the latter, clients were "sent into earlier parts of the present life, then into previous ones," the article stated. "Rogers says he has done at least 200 such sessions in the last four years, including his own regressions, one in which he viewed himself as a monk in early Tibetan times and another in which he was a pirate in about the 12th century. . . . A $75 'donation' is asked for the first session and subsequent sessions are billed on 'a sliding scale.'"

No one seems to know how many degrees Graham Rogers's institute granted over the years, although the person who is storing the institute's papers says they include at least 40 student transcripts. One was for Carla, who says that Graham Rogers took into consideration "all the other courses I'd taken for massage therapy" in granting her a Ph.D. in meta-parapsychology. "And I did some extra study with him and had to write a paper," she adds. "Also there were like four or five books that I read."

Graham Rogers also granted a Ph.D. to Debra Sasson, but through the lists it after her name on her business card today. Sasson says, "Really, honestly, the episode of my degree is not with I was studying with him." Instead she says that "studying with him made me realize that I wasn't strange. Or if I was, then were all one of us who were equally odd. I had thought that I was just much too sensitive for my own good — being able to pick up on emotions everywhere and being able to feel people in physical and emotional pain. That through that [illegible] month's life course, I wouldn't have those sensitive experiences. But working with him made me realize I should enhance those abilities."

Sasson believes that at least as important to Graham Rogers as his teaching was the "research" that he focused on during the late '80s — the work with the Bumblebees group. She says, "For the most part, his research was focused on trying to dispel certain principles and theories that had come out of the Society for Psychical Research, which was born in England in the late 1800s. This group is the one that's responsible for the beginnings of the study of ESP. . . . But they had become rather old-fashioned and had certain rules and regulations that you were to follow if you were a group of psychics 'sitting in circle.'"

Sasson says Graham Rogers had come to believe that "we all have the innate ability to perceive these so-called extra-phenomenal occurrences," and he was determined to demonstrate scientifically the existence of such abilities.

"What would constitute a

Most Often Asked Questions About
HAIR TRANSPLANTS:

Q: Is the procedure painful?
A: The method we use should be no more uncomfortable than having your teeth cleaned. Part of the reason for this is our experience with the surgical technique. The second factor is the amount of time we spend with each patient. We are not a high-volume transplant mill; you can be assured that each graft is meticulously performed.

Q: Are there any telltale signs of the surgery?
A: Unless you let it be known, only a hair transplant expert should be able to tell…and even then there can be some strong doubt. Hair naturally grows one to four follicles at a time, the same number we transplant. However, right after the surgery there is a series of blemishes where the grafts have been implanted. If you desire to hide these, there are a number of strategies we can recommend.

Q: How do I handle showing my head after surgery?
A: There is no single best approach. Frequently, pre-existing hair can be styled to completely cover the transplanted area. When this is not possible, some patients wear hats, take vacations, or stay home for a few days. Others simply don't care if its noticeable or not…in fact they are proud of their decision to have their hair restored with a permanent and natural solution.

"Our transplants are real hair from your own head which naturally grow to require styling and trimming."

Q: Is it a permanent solution?
A: More permanent than your original hair…which you will be replacing. Our transplants grow and require hair styling. For most people, it is like a fountain of youth for their head. The question should not be whether or not there is a permanent solution. The question should rather be, are you ready for a permanent solution?

Q: Are hair transplants very expensive?
A: Compared to a few short years ago, hair transplants are very affordable. Plus, newly developed techniques allow us to create a virtually undetectable finished work using your own hair. One example is our single follicle transplant method that allows us to feather the edges of your scalp line. And, even though we offer the added benefit of superb artistry, our fees are highly competitive. We welcome the opportunity to provide you an individual estimate.

scientific demonstration? What would it take to convince a group of hard-nosed skeptics that the Bumblebees were indeed communicating with the spirits of dead people? To get some insight into this, I contacted the Amherst, New York-based Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal (CSICOP), which for 20 years has spearheaded the worldwide skeptical movement. Chairman and founder Paul Kurtz commented that claims of spirit communication have been on the rise within the past 5 to 10 years, usually under the updated rubric of "channeling." Kurtz then fired off a couple of questions that he would pose to any group such as the Bumblebees. "Can you corroborate that what the person says he's heard or learned about the Other Side is true? You need independent, objective corroboration," Also, can the entities supply information that group members wouldn't have known about?

Kurtz raised another question: "How do you interpret such experiences?" he asked. "One way is there are entities out there communicating. But another is that there may be psychological and even sociological phenomena at work. That's a natural explanation without making the leap to something beyond." Hearing about the Bumblebees' adventures, he pronounced, "I think what's really at work is suggestion, self-deception, the will to believe, and creative imagination. It's in the milieu today. It's in the culture. It's in movies."

I also spoke to Ernie Ernsse, a veteran critic of the San Diego psychic scene. In the early 1980s, Ernsse formed a group called the San Diego Skeptics, and under its aegis he says he once checked out a spiritualist who "used to do a table-tipping routine down at a college inside the Navy base at 32nd Street. It was nothing new," he recalls today. "The table had big rubber legs on it so it wouldn't slide, and she was just rocking it up with her hands. "What amazed him, Ernsse says, is how many of the other members of the audience seemed enthralled by the performance. "She wasn't even doing it particularly well. You could see her sort of lunging to get better leverage. Yet people were lined up to give her donations."

Ernsse's group eventually disbanded, but about a year and a half ago a kindred organization, the San Diego Association for Rational Inquiry, took shape. None of its members (including Ernsse) were familiar with the work of Graham Rogers. When I described the evident sincerity of the women who had worked in the Bumblebees group, Ernsse was unsurprised. "That's one of the curious things about this!" he asserted. "Most of these people are sincere. Probably 90 percent of them. There's only a few that are really con artists." But groups like Graham Rogers's "generally are not really interested in rational evidence," he continued. "Or what they lack in actual hard-core objective evi-

You see, Sue, like most Americans, believes that by eating the "right" foods and taking nutritional supplements, she'll live a longer, healthier life. But Sue is dead wrong. Sue is misinformed.

The fact is that U.S. soil is dangerously depleted of minerals. A problem that's profoundly translated into farm grown vegetables, fruits and meats that simply can't supply what we need for healthy levels of nutrients. The U.S government has known this since 1936 (see Senate Document #264).

The "elemental" pills and tablets in popular brands of vitamins and minerals give you a maximum absorption of only 15%.

dense, they more than make up for in excuses as to why you can't test whatever they're doing." At that point, "it essentially turns into a religion — where they simply believe because it feels good."

I countered that believing in a soothing idea struck me as different from experiencing vivid physical sensations: seeing things in front of your eyes, smelling leather, hearing things such as the Bees report experiencing. Once again, Ernisse sounded empathetic. "As a fellow member of this species, I'm not immune to things like that. Years ago, I used to fool around with some meditation techniques and self-hypnosis, and I found that the things the human mind is capable of producing for itself are just amazing! The hallucinations, visual and auditory, that I used to get under self-hypnosis and meditation were startlingly real. And of course everybody has vivid dreams to the point of being awakened and startled. Vivid dreams are a phenomenon of the human mind, which is a pretty amazing thing. That doesn't mean they actually happen."

Despite his skepticism, Ernisse claims it wouldn't take much to change his mind about the existence of ghosts. "If in a well-lit room, some person materialized out of thin air and then conversed and disappeared," that would do it, he suggests, adding, "You have to be able to eliminate the possibility of tricks."

It appears that Graham-Rogers's idea of a scientific approach to his work with the Bumblebees was to video- and audiotape most of the group's sessions. He also hired a woman to transcribe the tapes. Identifying herself over the phone only as an astrologer and "yoga" named Vickie, she became garrulous as she recalled Graham-Rogers. "I can't say enough about this beautiful man and the lives that he touched! He was just a charmer. And this bevy of ladies — he just loved them!" Vickie added after her exposure to the Bumblebees' exploits, "I would watch (television) programs like The Other Side, and they were like kindergarten, compared to where Ted was! These were really a group of high, very beautiful, spiritual ladies."

Upon a chest sits a basket filled with pieces of driftwood that Saum has transformed into "affirmation wands."

Vickie says she'd usually type for about two hours at a time. "I can remember one tape that it took me three sessions to type up." She says this episode concerned a little girl who se spirit was being channeled through Rita in England. "It was so sad that I would sob so hard. It was like the little girl was in me. So I would sob. But it was a real good feeling of sobbing. And then I'd have to quit and come home and then go back, and as soon as I'd turn on the tape, I'd sob some more. It was just so dear, and it made passing over a completely different experience."

The very mundanity of the picture of life after death that emerged from the Bees' sessions comforted Vickie. "Like, 'remember one lady [ghost] who was out hanging up her clothes in Nebraska.' And she had no idea that she'd passed over. [The Bees] said, 'What is your name?' and she couldn't remember it! She'd adored her husband, but she couldn't remember his name for anything!"

Vickie says another time the Bees made psychic contact with a pair of men walking down a road in overalls "on a chain gang or something." She says, "They were so funny! One of the Bumblebees was tall and thin. Beautiful girl. And another one was kind of her opposite." The two ghostly convicts took over their bodies. "And the one turned around and said, 'If it weren't for you, I wouldn't be here,' and smacked the other one. Everybody was laughing so hard!

"It was just one after another after another," Vickie says, adding that Graham-Rogers "didn't want to know [the spirits'] personal names. He wasn't into sensationalism at all. What he was into was the spiritual."

"The videos of the Bumblebees are fascinating to watch," Saum told me the first time that we met. "There's no table-tipping going on or nothing terribly dramatic. But they show, they prove, one of Ted's theories: that unsolicited, a group of sensitives can all experience the same phenomena happening at the same time."

Saum invited me to view some of the tapes at her Cardiff apartment. Its central room expresses her personality far better than do the living quarters of most people. One corner of the room explodes with healthy plants. Along another wall, dozens of stuffed animals spill out of a hammock suspended from the ceiling. Upon a chest sits a basket filled with pieces of driftwood that Saum has transformed into "affirmation wands." (She writes down wishes, plays them next to the wood, wraps them with lengths of eye-catching yarn, then decorates the whole creation with feathers, shells, crystals, and other ornaments.) The walls of the room also testify to her artistry, adorned as they are with drawings of "experiences that we were having in the Bumblebees group." Pyramids, wavy streams of color, images of planets recur. Saum says, sometimes she would come home and draw until dawn, exhausted but driven to record the visions on paper.

A heap of videotapes lay on the middle of the floor, and Saum seemed a little nervous about diving into them, then explained that sometimes the lack of microphones made it hard to understand what the subjects on the tapes were saying. Also, there were so many tapes covering so many meetings that it was difficult to locate particularly eventful sessions.

She nonetheless popped in one cartridge recorded in 1993. In it, a few of the women sat with their heads bowed, as Graham-Rogers, in a voice grown reedy with age, invited the spirits to join the group. Little happened for a few minutes, then Margaret crossed her forearms and placed her hands against her biceps, fingers spread wide. "She's starting to get something," Saum alerted me. A few minutes later, slow words came out of Margaret. "The symbolism of the spirit is not one that can be ignored," she murmured. "There are many figures that are repeated within the planets."

Saum didn't recognize what this was all about, so we tried several more tapes and found a few sessions in which the women talked about spirits who they felt were present. Still Saum seemed frustrated by her inability to lay her hands on tapes capturing more clear and dramatic encounters. In answer to my question, she told me that it was "quite common" for the Bees to be able to see with their eyes some evidence of the various entities that visited them. "There was one time that I saw the shadowlike form of an apparition in the dormers. It was like somebody being backlit. I didn't see distinct features, but I saw the shape of a head and shoulders and arms hanging down.

Although never died the entities — seen or unseen — frightened the group members. Sauers and others concur. Sauers says on several occasions they dealt with "grumpy" carbonaceous, mischievous spirits. "But she says the group members discussed at length the best strategies for dealing with them. "The 1 whole interview was that you just keep showering that individual with unconditional love and acceptance, and we practiced the idea of being very persistent and loving. . . . We all concluded that if we have been lost about you and you inside love and understanding and are not afraid to say that, it dissipates whatever force or energy it is that you're encountering. If you are afraid, it feeds the fire."

Sauers says she stopped attending the weekly meetings around 1992 through the dropped in on them from time to time and stayed in touch with Graham-Rogers. Other members of the Bumblebees continued to meet for several more years. They even made some field trips to sites they'd heard might be haunted. Carla, for example, tells about the occasional duplex on Neptune Avenue in Encinitas filled with mysterious noises where the Bees and Graham-Rogers rescued the spirit of a sailor named Eric, who who's crashed and died on the nearby rocks. Another time, on one of the Navy buses in Point Loma, spirits of Indians who'd been slaughtered hundreds of years ago were haunting one particular homemaker, according to the Bumblebees, who claim they were able to facilitate a mass Native American rescue.

Well, into the 1990s, Graham-Rogers continued to counsel selected clients and to work with certain students, according to those who knew him. He also continued having books about the occult and selling them through a small mail-order book business. But as time went by, his physical problems mounted.

"The guy spent ill during the period of time I worked with him," says Susan Foley, an acupuncturist who was introduced to Graham-Rogers by their mutual friend, yoga master Ryonen Mandel. Foley says when she met Graham-Rogers, he was suffering from trigeminal neuralgia, an inflamed nerve that was causing "burning, screaming pain" throughout his lower face. Acupuncture helped control it, she says, although the pain periodically continued to trouble him. "And he had a lot of other medical problems. He had aneurisms and blood disorders and he was diabetic, and he had all kinds of different things going on."

His infirmities failed to deter his buoyant spirit. Foley attests. "I walked in and met a skinny man in his late 80s who had the most outrageous twinkle in his eye and an absolutely droll, almost British, sense of humor. When he realized I had a similar sense of humor, the sick voices evaporated from there." Foley also comments on how literate Graham-Rogers was. "I think often sitting there with his glasses slightly pushed down on his nose, just pouring over a book with a light over his shoulder. . . When he was on the trail of something with his research, he was very, very tenacious.

"The only break he would take was for Star Trek, which he would watch, no matter what. Especially the old Star Trek because it handled so many concepts. He was loved in the phlosophy of it. I remember the first time he came to my office. Someone had given me one of those little toys that look like the tricorders on Star Trek. I very seriously evaluated him that day, and I said, 'You know, I think I want to use just one more diagnostic tool. I want you to lie back and close your eyes.' So he lies back and closes his eyes, and I take out my tricorder and act like I'm starting to scan him, and before he even opens his eyes, he goes [in a tone of delight], 'My God! Where did you get that? And does it work?' That was Ted! I did it on a few other people, and all the kids got it, but no other adults did."

By the middle of 1995, his energy levels had dropped considerably, Foley says, and in January of 1996 he moved from the four-level La Costa condominium where he had been living to a ground-floor apartment facing Balboa Park, a location much closer to his doctors. His weight by then had dropped to 121 pounds, according to his daughter. But she says she found a caretaker to come in and cook for him, and by the summer of 1996 Graham-Rogers weighed almost 150 pounds again. In his resilience, he resembled the famous Russian mystic Rasputin, asserts Ryonen Mandel. "They gave Rasputin enough poison to kill six horses, and they shot him, and they threw him in the river, and he crawled out and came after them. Ted was kind of like that in a quiet sort of way. He had a wide variety of major physical difficulties — yet he was vital, alert, alive, functional, and doing his work right up to the end."

"Just the week before he went into the hospital, he had gone on a ghost-busting trip down on Maple Street, where they had a caretakerless Mafia ghost," his daughter says. "I really thought he'd live to be 100."

But Mandel says in fact he was preparing to die. She explains that by the end of last summer, Graham-Rogers needed to undergo kidney surgery, but the date that he chose to have it performed set off alarm bells for "every psychic he knew, every psychic I knew. They said, 'Whoa, bad time!' Astrologically speaking, all of the information said: don't do it then. Plus there was just the common-sense fact that it was scheduled for the Monday of the Labor Day weekend." She continues, "Everybody was up in arms with him, so they called me and I went over. We sat and talked about it, and he looked at me with a twinkle in his eye and said, 'Yeah, I know. But this is the time it's supposed to be done.' And I recognize the consequences and I accept them.' And together we got real clear that he was not exactly running toward it, but if death was to take him, he was prepared and ready."

He had the surgery, but complications did develop and he went into a coma. Various friends and his daughter visited him on the morning and early afternoon of September 5. But no one seems to know intuited when the fateful moment was coming, and he died alone late that afternoon.

Since then Vickie, the astrologer who transcribed his Bumblebee tapes, says she has had "quite a lot" of contact with his spirit. "He makes his presence known with all kinds of little things that only he and I would know," she says. Nikki Maimes, a friend of Carla's who participated in the Bumblebees group for about three years, says, "I feel like Ted is closer to me now that he's passed over than he was in the last year before his death. I feel we're really connected now."

Saum says one day when she was helping Pat Graham-Rogers clean out her father's apartment, she felt Dr. Ted's very strong presence in the room with her. She also says that after her first interview session with me, she had a significant experience. On the way back, I said, "Ted, I'm trusting that this is okay. There are a lot of people out there who may think this is really strange, and I may be getting myself in hot water (by publicizing Graham-Rogers and his work). If you're out there, give me a sign that I'm doing the right thing."

Saum says right about then, she spotted a hawk — a creature that she regards as auspicious. "I said, 'Okay, that's really great.' And then of course my left brain clicked in and said, 'Well, it's just a hawk, Deb.' So I continued driving down the freeway and saying, 'Give me a sign, Ted.' And I spotted another hawk. And by now, I was getting the familiar hair-raising chills that are usually present when an entity is around or when the information is really right on." A moment later, the radio station that she was listening to began to play a song by Larry Carlton — one that Saum listened to constantly around the time she first joined the Bumblebees. "Watch the two hawks and the song, I finally said, 'Okay. I get it. You're here. And you're telling me it's fine and to quit worrying.' So he didn't appear in my car. But this is the way this stuff works. The objective mind says, 'Well, it's just two hawks and a song on the radio. Don't get carried away.' But sometimes you have to interpret."

Margaret says Graham-Rogers's death shocked her. She'd had no clue that he was even sick until someone called her on the morning of his last day. "When we were living next to each other, I was always able to sense when something was wrong," she says. "So when I got the call, I was surprised that I hadn't known." She says she raced to the hospital and tried to communicate with him in his coma. "But it wasn't until I said psychically to him, 'Hi, Ted. This is Margaret,' that he smiled."

Graham-Rogers needed to undergo kidney surgery, but the date that he chose to have it performed set off alarm bells for "every psychic he knew."

Margaret says after he died she also felt keen disappointment as several of the other women reported being "contacted" by Graham-Rogers. "It seemed as though everyone had sensed him but her. "Then one day at the end of October, I was the liturgist at my church, and I was on the altar and the pastor was giving his sermon. I wasn't meditating or anything. I was just listening to the sermon." She says she suddenly felt as if a "big psychic light" had come on right behind her. "It was like a ray from the light. I was crying, and I could sense this wonderful peaceful sense that everything was okay, that he was taking care of business and would come back to me when it was time. I was just so glad that he made his presence known to me. I kept thinking, I wonder if anybody else in the congregation can see this?" Margaret adds that the Bumblebees plan to reconvene in the coming months, at which time they hope to get more information from Ted about what life after death is like. It seems unlikely that they'll fail to receive further messages. ■

CUSTODY'S WAR DANCE

Huddle Huddle, Whisper Whisper, Walk Walk

It's not very far from Bill Blatchley's office to the family courthouse. In the northeast corner of a chunky, two-story building at Ash and Columbia downtown, Blatchley's comfortably cluttered office still felt chilly at 8:15 on a clear January morning. Bright white light streamed through the column windows. After walking behind the desk that occupied most of the spacious room, Bill Blatchley folded his six-foot-plus frame into an office chair. Stuffed Big Bird and Bert dolls leaned lazily against two of the windows. Blatchley tipped back in his chair. "Custody is really the machine that drives my practice," he said. "Although it sometimes seems like the custody practice generates so much negative." For a moment, Blatchley sounded weary. "People tell me that I'm getting wiser."

Blatchley's wife and law partner Jill bustled into the room and set a sheaf of papers on the desk in front of Blatchley. Hovering over his shoulder, Jill watched while Blatchley scrawled his signature in three places. Jill turned and left. Blatchley kept talking while he wrote. "This morning we've got a case. I represent Dad. He's in the U.S. Army in Washington. It's an interstate case. They were divorced in Illinois. Mom's been all over the place with the kid since the divorce. We found Mom here in San Diego with the kid registered under her new husband's name. The kid's four years old. This morning, Dad and his new wife are in town from Washington. He wants three weeks visitation four times a year. They don't pay these guys much, so he can't afford to be flying her up to Washington every other weekend. Of course, Mom's response was, 'Give me more child support and attorney's fees.' Since Dad's in town, we're going to try the dog-and-pony show at the courthouse if the FCS report is good."

Bill Blatchley

In a contested custody matter, Family Court Services (FCS) meets with the parties and makes a recommendation to the court about what custody arrangement would best serve the child. Blatchley continued. "The issue here is whether FCS is willing to give Dad a three-week block of time with a four-year-old. There's still a certain amount of gender bias. The counselors say a four-year-old girl can't be away from Mom for three weeks. The separation isn't as drastic as they think it is."

Jill stuck her head in the door and pointed at her watch. Blatchley rose from his chair. His halo of graying blond hair and oversized features made Blatchley look like a college athlete gone to seed. Standing nearly as tall as her husband, Jill could have been a model in a former life. Her blond hair, ivory complexion, fitted cream-colored suit, matching stockings, and expensive-looking pumps gave the impression of something long and smooth and vanilla.

As I turned to leave the office ahead of Blatchley, I stopped to admire, atop a cabinet by the door, a shiny red car, three feet long and gleaming with chrome. "That was my first car," Blatchley smiled. "It's a Murray. When I was growing up, my father owned a toy store. I kept the car. A few years back, I took it to an auto shop and had it restored."

Out in the hall, Jill and Blatchley's secretary Stacey scurried to get him ready for court. Jill handed him a battered leather trial bag stuffed with papers and files. "Are the copies in here?" Blatchley asked. Jill nodded. Blatchley strode back into his office. "I'll need my calculator." In California, child support is determined according to a statutorily defined formula that factors in the relative incomes of the parties and the amount of time each parent spends with the child. All family law attorneys and judges use calculators to compute proposed child support.

Downstairs, Jill, Blatchley, and I piled into a dusty brown Cadillac. Blatchley cleared out a crumpled suit before ducking into the back seat. Jill drove. During the six-block drive to the family courthouse, Jill asked, "Will this be before Dominitz?"

Blatchley nodded, "Yes."

Jill laughed. "He's a municipal court judge who's come over to family court to help us." Jill paused for a moment searching for words. "He's g.r.a.... strong personality."

Jill dropped Blatchley and me in front of the red brick family courthouse at Sixth and Cedar. After pushing through the glass front doors, Blatch-

Non-Surgical Vision Correction
FOR NEARSIGHTEDNESS

There is now a non-surgical treatment for long-lasting correction of nearsightedness (myopia) and astigmatism that is quick, less costly, and without risk.

This vision-correcting procedure was first utilized as a method of improving vision in the early '60s but now vision can often be restored with an accelerated program, in a matter of weeks.

Orthokeratology is designed to quickly reduce the patient's myopic condition and to improve vision with a succession of specially fitted therapeutic contact lenses which gently reshape the curvature of the cornea.

Advanced techniques and new technology in specialized contact lenses have revolutionized eye care in the field of vision restoration.

Special stabilizing contact lenses are also available to prevent or retard the gradual increase of nearsightedness.

Dr. Michael Salterlee is highly qualified in this procedure, and holds a fellowship certificate from the International Orthokeratology section of the National Eye Research Foundation, with over 25 years of orthokeratology experience. His practice is devoted to contact lenses and corrective vision care.

ley placed his trial bag on the x-ray machine's conveyor belt and walked through the metal detector. Two olive-green uniformed bailiffs stood behind the x-ray machine. "You'd be surprised," Blatchley told me, "what people try to bring in here." Above and behind the bailiffs' heads, a glass case displayed weapons confiscated at the family courthouse: switchblades, an enormous hunting knife, bullets, a crack pipe. "I've come down here for hearings," Blatchley said, "and been told my client had been taken to jail for trying to enter the building with drugs."

Once through the metal detector, Blatchley grabbed the FCS report out of a mahogany-colored accordion folder at the end of the conveyor belt. Blatchley's client and the client's wife walked toward us. The man's short hair and narrow face looked nervous above his white shirt and sweater vest, dark blue slacks, and loafers. Blatchley turned to me. "He doesn't look like an Army guy today."

As Blatchley and his clients huddled around the FCS report, a large crowd milled around the courthouse's high-ceilinged foyer. Sitting at lacquered wooden picnic tables, lawyers in suits and their puzzled, worried clients pored over files. Each lawyer's calculator sat at the ready; some attorneys fed numbers into the little black boxes with the speed of accountants at tax time. Voices rose up in Spanish and English. "That's what I make a year." "That's your gross. How many deductions do you claim?" "We'll just get them to sign this stuff…"

At a bench in an alcove, a tired-looking woman, 20ish, with streaked blond hair fed Peppermidge Farm goldfish to a dancing three-year-old girl. The girl's red jumper and white Peter Pan collar set off her dark curls. A white-booted foot kicked off a receiving blanket in a stroller the young woman absentmindedly pushed back and forth.

Blatchley left his clients and walked with me to another alcove where sheets of 11 x 14 paper listed each courtroom's calendar for the day. "I just want to make sure where we'll be," he explained.

As Blatchley studied the calendars, two female attorneys approached him. "I'm waiting for those figures," the first woman said in an almost playful voice.

Blatchley wheeled around. "He's in Egypt. I can't get it."

"What? They don't have faxes in Egypt? The oil companies?"

Blatchley laughed. "They send all their mail by camel."

"I want that stuff," the woman pointed her finger at Blatchley like a schoolmarm as she headed out the courthouse door.

Blatchley shrugged his shoulders and turned back to the calendar. "We're in F-6," he said, and led me to the far end of the courthouse.

We pushed through double doors into a small courtroom packed with lawyers and litigants. In front of an empty bench, lawyers lined up to file papers with the judge's clerk. Sitting at a desk below and to the right of the bench, the clerk laughed at the lawyers' jokes while mechanically stamping piles of pleadings. Lawyers stood in front of the bookshelf on the bench's left and sat in the few chairs on the bench side of the bar. In the spectator area, all 23 theater style seats were filled, and people stood self-conscious, loudly in the center aisle. Each time the door swung open and closed, people moved forward like a wave washing up then receding down the aisle.

Beatrice Snyder and Marilyn Bacer

While Blatchley waited in line to file his papers, a gray-haired, rotund lawyer ahead of him turned and gave Blatchley a sheepish look. "I don't know whether you're going to love me or hate me," the gray-haired guy started. "I'm taking over the ——— case."

Blatchley laughed and put his arm around the man. "Let me introduce you to my best friend," he told me.

The other man laughed along. "I figured you'd want to get out of it." They drew together and murmured for a few seconds.

A few minutes later, Judge Domnitz took the bench. With his thin, dark hair, horn-rimmed glasses, and pointed features, Judge Domnitz needed only a pointy hat to resemble one of the nerdy elves in the Christmas video of Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer. Judge Domnitz blazed like a machine gun through the calendar. "Item number one, Marriage of Smith. Is Mrs. Smith here?" Judge Domnitz scanned the courtroom.

Wearing a flowered housedress and plastic jelly sandals, Mrs. Smith clutched a dirty white teddy bear. She stood up hesitantly. "I'm here."

Judge Domnitz smiled at Mrs. Smith. "Is Mr. Smith here?" Judge Domnitz scanned the courtroom a second time. "If there's no response, what do we do?" Judge Domnitz asked the courtroom.

"Take it off calendar," the lawyers chimed like Ed McMahon to Domnitz's Johnny Carson.

"That's right. Ma'am, you can go home."

Mrs. Smith shuffled out of the courtroom. Judge Domnitz moved on. When Domnitz called Blatchley's case, Blatchley asked to trail. When a matter trails, it goes to the bottom of the calendar so the lawyer can talk to his or her client and the other party's lawyer and try to settle the issues.

Blatchley headed back out into the foyer to talk to his clients. FCS had recommended three weeks' visitation in the summer and at Christmas vacation instead of the three weeks' visitation four times a year that Dad had requested. Blatchley had just filed his pleadings showing that the Mom was a "bad guy." Dad had to follow her around the country trying to track her down. If Blatchley and the other lawyer continued the hearing to another day, the judge would have a chance to read the pleadings. If the judge didn't like what the Mom had done, Blatchley thought Dad had a better chance of getting more visitation.

For the next ten minutes, Blatchley and the opposing counsel did a lawyer dance, shuttling back and forth between their clients. Huddle huddle, whisper whisper, walk walk, huddle, huddle, whisper, whisper, walk, walk. In the end, Blatchley and the other attorney agreed to continue the hearing to another day. After Judge Domnitz granted the continuance, Blatchley walked out of the courthouse with his clients. "Send pictures of the girl with you at Christmas," he told them.

"We've got videos," Dad's new wife chimed in.

"No, pictures are enough."

In a coffee shop down the street from the courthouse, Blatchley, who has practiced family law for 18 years, talked about the custody and some of his more contentious cases.

"My interest in family law really came from my own life situation," he told me. "I divorced in law school. I thought I wanted to do criminal law — for the courtroom, for the juries, for the arena. But I had two children when I separated in law school. Of course, they stayed with their mom. I finished law school, and I ended up with custody of both of my kids. My ex-wife was having difficult times. She had sent one of the kids back to her mother's in Connecticut."

Within the family law community, Blatchley has a reputation for being a formidable opponent. Judge Thomas Ashworth, who has spent the last ten years as a judge in family and juvenile court, described Blatchley as very dogged and determined. "Bill Blatchley is perceived by most as a very hard fighter," Ashworth told me over the phone. "Most family lawyers prefer not to have him on the other side of a case."

"Someone described me as a 'Crusader Rabbit,'" Blatchley said. "I tend to have a lot of the distressed clients. The more you do custody and the more successful you are, the more you get the bad cases. Bad in the context of more complex, more stressed. I like to take on the cases where I think the previous results have been bad, or say, the evaluation is not fair. I see my clients in a clear light. I see their pitfalls and downfalls. Then I get a sense of what would work for them and their kids, and that's my goal. I pursue until I get that or until reality, in the form of judges' rulings time and again, tell me, 'No, you're not going to get that.'"

Blatchley has had his share of bad results. "The worst case I ever had was in North County. I got beat up real bad. I represented a woman who had concerns about a daughter who was living with the woman's husband. My client had made reports to Child Protective Services. I didn't know if they were correct or not. We got involved in litigation. I was an outsider because I was from San Diego." North County has its own family court located in Vista.

"The case took on a life of its own. Certain attorneys who were part of the group up there were appointed for the child. It went to trial for six or seven days. It had well-known psychologists on both sides. It became very vitriolic. The judge was not my favorite judge. He decided my client was a negative person and took her out of her daughter's life. The judge gave her five hours' visitation. The child was about nine. The recommendation originally was for a 60-40 split — 60 to Dad. Another psychologist in our community had recommended

"Because of the abuse allegations, there was a full physical workup. The findings were inconclusive. It was the ultimate backlash. If you make an allegation of abuse, and they find it was for good purpose, then they come to your aid and rescue. But if you make an allegation, and the court decides it wasn't for good purpose, then there's a backlash. You get black-marked. It went to the court of appeal and ended up taking about four years to resolve itself. Every time I would go to court, it would have a physical impact on me. I couldn't work the rest of the day. I'd be depressed. The last day of trial, the case went until 11:00 at night. The judge brought in a second crew. One crew went from 1:00 in the afternoon until 5:00. At 5:00, the second crew came in with the understanding we were going to go until we finished. That case was a change in the road, and I began to look at litigation differently."

Some clients try to use their lawyers to get at the other parent. In the past, family law judges could make orders concerning custody on an ex parte basis. Ex parte means the judge makes the decision in chambers rather than in open court. There is little or no notice given to the opposing party. Under new family court rules, judges can make changes in custody ex parte only in emergencies. "Then it comes down to what's the definition of an emergency," Blatchley explained. "The judge's problem is what do you do when somebody comes in and says, 'My husband is going to steal the children and run off to Europe.' And the judge sitting in the chamber doesn't know. So you act to protect, and you issue a restraining order saying you can't take the kids out of the county. Or if you think they won't comply with the restraining order, you give a visitation order so the parent can have physical control of the kids for the next four or five days until we can get everybody into court. But what you sometimes find is the lawyers or the party litigants figure, 'Gee, you're going on vacation tomorrow, and I get a restraining order that says you can't take the child out of the county, I've just destroyed your vacation. I've gotten my way and you didn't get yours.' "

"THAT'S WHAT I MAKE A YEAR." "THAT'S YOUR GROSS. HOW MANY DEDUCTIONS DO YOU CLAIM?" "WE'LL JUST GET THEM TO SIGN THIS STUFF...."

Family lawyers are bound by the rules of professional conduct to do whatever is in the client's best interest so long as it's not unethical or illegal. In custody cases, clients sometimes want things that are not good for their kids. "I had a case where I think I did something for the kids," Blatchley said. "During the case, it was clearly established from my point of view that my client, a male, had sexually abused his daughter, who was then an adult. He was being accused of abusing his sons, which I don't think he was doing. Not because he was a great guy, but because of the male-female sexual issues. The adult daughter became involved in the case and filed declarations that were so graphic and descriptive in nature that I took this man aside and told him that he was going to do something positive for his kids by relinquishing them for adoption. The mom had married a decent guy who was providing a good family and was not going to harm or molest the kids.

"I convinced my client that the upside for him was that he wouldn't have to pay support. And I convinced him that no matter how good a lawyer I was, he was never going to have unsupervised visitation." Family courts have the option of ordering supervised visitation. In a supervised visitation scenario, the noncustodial parent may visit with the children only in the presence of a third party either appointed by the court or agreed to by the parties.

Blatchley continued, "My client agreed to withdraw his request for visitation and stipulated to allow the kids to be adopted. I convinced him that as adults these kids would have an opportunity to find him if they wanted to."

Blatchley finished his coffee, and we stepped back out onto Sixth Avenue. "Custody and visitation is the salacious side of the divorce world," he said. "And if you're doing all of the negative cases....I've taken some heat from the community. If you're representing a person who believes the other parent has done something inappropriate to the child, I think as their advocate and as a lawyer, you're obligated to bring that up. I'm usually willing to bring that out and suffer the negative response.

"If you take on the client's personality, then it's a pure war. And sometimes, you do take on the client's personality. It's the nature of war. And there are some of these cases where that war mentality unfortunately does take over. How else can you approach a case that's going to be a battle over the most important asset in anyone's life — the kids?"

Another day, another divorce attorney's office. After riding up the Koll Center's swift, silent elevator, I watched the doors glide open at the 20th floor. Waiting in Jim Clark's muted gray waiting room, I heard ringing phones, the indistinct babble of voices down the hallway, the low-level bustle of a law firm. Clark appeared and led me through a maze of cubicles to his office. Sitting at his desk, Clark looked out at the blue bay, Coronado, and the darker blue ocean beyond.

Clark, who has practiced family law since 1978, sees a fair number of his cases focus on child custody. "Within family law, I'd say I do a lot more custody than most people in terms of what the mix is," Clark told me. Judge Ashworth told me Clark is a bit controversial as a custody lawyer. "He files a lot of paperwork and is technically competent," Ashworth said. "You would probably get more of a mixed reaction about Clark than about Blatchley. Some people think he's difficult. Others like him."

When a client comes to Clark with a potential custody case, Clark tries to determine why the client believes custody will be disputed. "If you were the mother, I would ask you why you thought there was going to be a dispute about custody. A typical statement would be, 'My husband told me that if I left, he was going to use every bit of money and influence he had to make sure he got the kids.' Let's assume the mother said she's on Prozac or something that happens in the real world. You need to find out what impact being on Prozac historically has on her ability to parent."

Clark believes domestic violence is involved in more cases than people admit. "The genders don't agree on what domestic violence is. If you ask a bunch of men who have been accused of domestic violence, they will probably say, 'It wasn't as bad as she said it was.' If you ask a bunch of women who have been the victims of domestic violence, they will say, 'It's worse than I can put into words.' In many instances, a woman won't have said anything about domestic violence for a number of years. But when she finally resolves to end the violence, it coincides with the divorce. A lot of things come out. Sometimes, the husbands think this is all part of an effort to discredit them."

"THE BIGGEST MISTAKE THE CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE MADE WAS TYING CHILD SUPPORT TO VISITATION."

While Clark admits that none of his cases keep him up at night, the case that disturbed him most was one where he represented the kids. "When you represent the kids, you have a certain purity. There were five kids. Four boys, one girl. The father was a doctor, the mother a schoolteacher. They fought bitterly. The father would do things emotionally to the kids. His daughter was made to feel unworthy. She's about 10 and under the care of a psychiatrist now. She's functional now. The oldest child, probably now 20, was made into a dad clone. The children in between were whipsawed between the parents. Their lives were very difficult. We tried that case, and nothing got better. The father blamed everybody. The more less so. The trial judge made brilliant orders absolutely designed to help these kids out if the parents chose to comply with the orders. I don't know what's going to happen to them."

Clark finds that his work as a custody lawyer affects his relationship with his own kids. "You tend to parent with a little bit of confidence because you can put the disasters in context. You've really seen disasters. So something that a parent equally situated but not in this business might be concerned to a level of five, I might be concerned to a level of two or a level of nine, because of what I've seen.

"In the past week or so, I've heard of an attorney in a bitterly contested case where modest allegations came up. This lawyer said that the day he had children, it never left his mind that someday somebody theoretically could turn giving his daughter a bath into something sick. Dr. Jay Dess [a therapist who specializes in custody issues] lectured us about the ordinary things a parent could do with their kids, that if revealed in the wrong context in front of the wrong people could result in all kinds of things."

Clark feels parents should be equipped to deal with the trauma of divorce and child custody disputes. "I'm bringing up something I heard someone else propose. With the filing of divorce, the parents should have to go through a class that helps them understand what they'll be going through with divorce and custody. Most people care about their kids and want to do what's right. Many times they don't have the tools. They don't know what's available or what the alternatives are.

"It's like a soldier who receives training in how to fight. When he goes out and fights, he's better trained so the other soldier gets killed and he doesn't. Probably not a good comparison, but we don't train these people for battle." In custody battles, Clark believes parents need to be better prepared for the emotional trauma. "We need to get these people in the proper frame of mind so they can handle the stress. Again the soldier analogy. If they understand what a machine gun sounds like, the first time they hear one, they won't panic."

The emotional machine gun fire of a custody battle seemed far away when I sat in Beatrice Snyder's waiting room a week later. Decorated in cranberry and green, the plush couches, silk flowers, and carved wood tables looked like furnishings from a soap opera sitting room. The sound of "soft, relaxing hits" wafted up toward the chinoiserie border near the ceiling. Snyder's office had the same zealously feminine touch — soft carpet, a statue of an armless Venus de Milo in the corner. I sat with Snyder and her associate Marilyn Bierer while late-afternoon sun slanted through the blinds and the sky turned from pink to orange to ebony.

Sitting behind her desk in a fitted forest green pantsuit, Snyder wore her blond hair pulled back in a ponytail that flowed halfway down her back. Although she specializes in business valuation in divorce, Snyder has handled countless child custody cases during her 23 years as a family lawyer. Bierer, in a short-sleeved black dress and patterned black hose, sat beside me across from Snyder. The red-headed associate, who came to the law after being a nurse for 20 years, now handles many of the child custody cases that come into Snyder's office.

"I love the custody cases," Bierer told me. "My significant other has a theory about why. I never had children. Because I didn't have children, I don't know the heartache perhaps as a mother would."

Snyder agreed. "I have three children," she said. "I tend to be less objective than Marilyn."

When Snyder first started practicing family law in 1974, the courts presumed that children "of tender years" should live with their mom following a divorce. During the 1970s and 1980s, that presumption changed. Most children were given a joint custody arrangement where they spent significant time with both parents. According to Snyder, psychological studies suggest and the family courts now agree that young children should have a primary residence with one or the other parent and "frequent, ongoing contact" with the other. The amount of visitation has a direct impact on the noncustodial parent's support obligation.

"The biggest mistake the California legislature made," Bierer told me, "was tying child support to visitation. Many times when I get a woman client in, she says, 'My husband says there'll be no problem with custody. The minute the husband retains counsel, counsel tells him, 'The more time you have with that child, your child support goes down exponentially.'"

Horror stories abound. "Unfit" parents often seek increased visitation to decrease their child support obligations. "A client came in today. We didn't take the case. It was a situation where I would say this parent was unfit. There were sexual issues, child pornography. I would have said the man should have supervised visitation at best. But apparently this case had gone to the point where he was alleged to have had 49 percent visitation. Unsupervised. There had been physical abuse of the children in for pass as well. He went through some therapy classes and anger management, and 3 nine months later, the kids are back with him. His child support order went from $5300 a month to $3000 a month because of the percentage of share."

Snyder remembered another case from earlier in her practice that had a happier result. "The baby was two years old when the parents separated. This was during the time of 50-50 timeshares. One parent lived in Escondido and the other in El Cajon. The court ordered that the child spend the nights with Mother and the days with Dad. The dad came to me when the child was three years old, and we asked for full custody. The mother had been married three times before. She had three other children who were doing, quote, 'well' in school, meaning that they seemed to adjust to all the moves the mother had made. This was my client's only child. He had never been married before. They did a video psychological evaluation back then. We just went straight to trial. I had nightmares about losing that child. We did win. The mother left the jurisdiction right afterwards with her other children. The dad still sends me Christmas cards. The child is now 14 or 15 years old, doing really well in school, living four or five blocks from his grandparents. So in that particular case, the father was the best parent."

Other fathers aren't so good. "I had a case where the father was a known drug dealer," Bierer told me. "He had done time and was out and wanted custody. I kept telling the court, 'He's a drug dealer. He's dealing drugs now.' The court kept increasing his visitation. On a weekend when he had the child, people came in and kidnapped the daughter of his girlfriend — not my client's daughter, but his girlfriend's daughter who was also staying with him. They took the child to Mexico because a drug deal had gone bad. I got an order immediately. The next thing I know, he's in jail. I was in front of the same judge who had made the order, and I wanted to say, 'I told you. Why didn't you listen to me?'

The room had grown dark while we spoke. A single lamp on the side of Snyder's desk cast yellow light on our faces. Snyder told one last story. "I remember one case where I won custody for a mother who wasn't really emotionally stable. She hung herself three days later in the kitchen and the kids found her. That was about 15 years ago. She didn't want the divorce. She was fighting for the kids. That haunts me." ■

He had never paid much attention to the aesthetics of Dr. Ricardo on previous visits, but it struck him so seedy that night. Along the walk, floor tiles curled up at the edges. It had been raining all day, and a trail of soggy cardboard led from the front door to the receptionist's desk. Most of the floor was smeared with mud from the shoes of Dr. Ricardo's patients.

About half the chairs in the narrow waiting room were flimsy white plastic. A few were gray padded metal desk chairs. One was a high-backed wooden chair. A dented refrigerator sat in one corner, a small television perched on top. A replay of a World Cup soccer match entertained the dozen patients awaiting Dr. Ricardo.

Because of the pain in his side, the American stood as he waited. A pregnant woman in her mid-30s shouted at her three children.

"Don't touch that! Come here! Leave the man alone!"

The children were calmed by an old woman sitting in the corner. Though her hands shook, she began peeling a mango and cutting it into slivers.

"This piece is for you," she smiled at the little girl. "This one is for you, handsome," she said to the older boy. "And this one is for the baby," she said, nodding to the youngest.

At the reception desk, several members of Dr. Ricardo's staff were gulping greasy pizza topped with jalapeño and onions. The wallpaper was new, but irregular seams were visible and some of the paper was peeling back from the ceiling and left hanging. In addition to two crucifixes, eight oil paintings of Jesus were hung on the walls. In one, Christ was sitting upright on the cross, burying his face in his hands. Behind him were a mushroom cloud, a tank painted with a swastika, discarded syringes, and a soda can oozing glue. Another painting showed Jesus' limbs amputated, dripping blood from their torn edges and nailed back onto the cross out of order — above where his head should be, a hand instead of a leg.

A moon-faced nurse stuck her head out from behind the door to Dr. Ricardo's office and called his name. The American had been purposely late ahead of the other patients, who had been waiting longer.

In Dr. Ricardo's cramped office/examining room, a wooden crucifix, perhaps six feet high, was leaning against a wall behind the desk. The American was directed to sit in one of two burgundy velour parlor chairs in front of the doctor's desk, despite his attempts to explain to the nurse that standing was more comfortable.

"Sit down," she said in Spanish, pointing to the chair and smiling. He protested. "Sit down," she said more firmly. He protested again. She began shaking her pointed finger and raised her voice. "Sit down!" He lowered himself into the chair, avoiding abdominal movement. The chair turned out to be so accommodating, it did not worsen his discomfort.

Dr. Ricardo entered a few minutes later from a side door that led to the rest of the clinic. A third door in the back of the office opened into his operating room. Dr. Ricardo leaned over his desk and shook the American's hand.

"I am so happy to see you again," he said. "Do you need a prescription, or are you sick?" The nurse reappeared at the side door, summoning Dr. Ricardo. "Sorry," said the doctor. "Emergency." He left the room.

As he sat alone, the American began to have second thoughts. Perhaps he should have gone to an emergency room in the U.S. The American heard a man groaning. "Ohhhhh, ohhhhh, ayee." A different nurse ducked into Dr. Ricardo's office, admonishing the American with a smile and a tool. She spun over to the doctor's desk, opened a drawer, and pulled out a syringe packaged in plastic. She looked at it, put it in her smock pocket, and ran out.

One reason he liked Dr. Ricardo was because the doctor took seriously his job as a reliever of suffering. The American remembered when his father spent six months dying from liver and lung cancer. His father's American physicians had quibbled about painkillers: they were afraid the dying man might become addicted.

Dr. Ricardo would never have allowed the American's father to suffer. Once, when the American had mentioned to Dr. Ricardo that he was uneasy about an airplane trip, Dr. Ricardo whipped out his prescription pad and said, "I will give you something for your panic." It was a prescription for Valium.

The last time he had gone to see Dr. Ricardo was one afternoon when his back went out. After two visits to a Chula Vista chiropractor, he had not found relief. He decided to visit Dr. Ricardo. The doctor said the pain was caused by a "mechanical insult" that would resolve itself without treatment. A week's bed rest, something to relax the muscles, and something to ease the pain was Dr. Ricardo's prescription.

The drugs served two purposes: they dulled the pain and made sleep possible — a lot of sleep. By week's end, the American's back no longer hurt.

"This pain today was no back strain or situational anxiety. He had been vomiting all afternoon and left his office after lunch because he felt so bad. He had fallen ill the night before, rising in the earliest hours of morning with an inflagration so fierce he never returned to bed. That evening, a Mexican friend came to visit him at his Tijuana apartment. An awful pain in his right side — as if he had been kicked by a horse — made it difficult for him to answer the door.

"'Che Gueva! What's wrong?' his friend Raul asked. "'Come on,' said Raul, "'I take you to the doctor.'"

The American resisted. "'Just let me go back to bed,' he said. "'I'll feel better in the morning.' Then he had to go vomit again. After he finished, Raul was waiting outside the bathroom door. Raul, who stood about 5'6" and weighed no more than 130 pounds, pulled on the arm of his American friend, who outweighed him by 100 pounds.

"'You have to go to the doctor,' Raul insisted.

The American relented. "'Take me to Dr. Ricardo.' His office is on Avenida Madero downtown."

He sat and stared at a long, carved wooden nameplate on the edge of the desk. "Dr. Juan Carlos T. Ricardo Nuñez, M.D.," it read. "Cirujano (Surgeon)." Although he was a surgeon and called his clinic "Ricardo Ambulatory Surgical Clinic," Dr. Ricardo was a general practitioner. The white wooden sign overhanging the sidewalk in front of his clinic listed the services offered at his one-physician-operation. Surgery. Treatments of Obesity. Sex Education. Childbirth. Hemorrhoids. Drug and Alcohol Detoxification. On the glass front wall of the clinic, black letters listing more services ran in vertical strips until there was no more room. X-rays. Sonograms. Electrocardiograms. Injection. Ambulance Service. The clinic was open seven days a week from 8:00 a.m. until 9:00 p.m., 24 hours a day for emergencies.

In Dr. Ricardo's office, two medical textbooks were open, perched to the side of the doctor's desk pad, which was cluttered with patient files, lab results, and a couple of blue prescription pads. Sitting on top of the pile was a dog-eared Physician's Desk Reference. The wall behind the desk was used for a series of bookcases, jammed with medical books. Except for a glass container of tongue depressors, boxes of urine testing samples, and some packaged plastic syringes, everything looked secondhand.

Dr. Ricardo reappeared. "You are sick?" he asked. A look of genuine concern passing over his pockmarked face. "What is bothering your life?" The American explained about the pain in his right side. "Please, to my examination table," said Dr. Ricardo, pointing behind the chair in which the American was sitting to a white-sheeted metal table with a thin mattress.

Dr. Ricardo began unbuttoning the American's shirt and questioning him about his current illness. "Do you have vomiting?" he asked. "Do you have nausea? When did the pain start? Can you show me where is the pain?" He pulled the pallid, sweating American's shirt fully open on either side.

"Here," said the American, placing his hand over an area on the high, upper-right side of his belly. The doctor pushed the American's shoulders until the patient was flat on his back. "Here?" he asked, jabbing a finger under the American's right rib cage.

"Ohhhhhh, yes! There. Oh, it really hurts," the American cried out.

Dr. Ricardo was more friend than physician. They had both been cheated by the Mercedes-driving Venezuelan who had introduced them in a restaurant near the beach. Turned out that the Venezuelan cheated many others by selling them ads or getting them to invest in a binational, bilingual newspaper that was never published. The Americans had gone to Dr. Ricardo's office when he realized he'd been scammed out of $400. He hoped Ricardo could help him find the Venezuelan.

"Don't talk to me about that man!" Ricardo had yelled. "Never do I want to talk of this man again. Please! He owes me too much money." After that, the American and Dr. Ricardo met for lunches and an occasional dinner. They discussed politics, culture, Dr. Ricardo's dream of practicing medicine in the United States.

Dr. Ricardo frowned. "This is too bad for you," he told the American. "Do you have a little money with you? You need an examination of your blood, some x-rays, and a sonogram immediately. I think you have an inflamed gallbladder. First I must put you in the clinic immediately and give you IV fluids and antibiotics. I must observe you. Also, I give something for your pain. This may require surgery."

A vision of Dr. Ricardo's cramped operating room, furnished with beige 1950s-vintage equipment, flashed in the American's mind. Surgery? Here, in this clinic, in Tijuana?

"No," he told Dr. Ricardo firmly. "I don't want to stay overnight. If I'm that sick, I'll drive over to Scripps in Chula Vista." Dr. Ricardo grabbed both of the American's hands and squeezed.

"Listen," he said. "This is an emergency. You are very sick. This is serious. You must not go." The patient squirmed.

"How much for the blood tests, the x-rays, and the sonogram?" the patient asked.

"Sixty dollars," said the doctor. "If you do not have all the money, I invite you." The American wasn't about to let the doctor foot the bill. He motioned for his pants, which had been draped over one of the velour chairs during the examination. He removed his wallet and pulled out three $20 bills, which he handed to Dr. Ricardo.

"Before I make a final decision, let's see what the tests show first," said the American.

Clinica Ricardo's reception-ist also served as the laboratory technician. She abandoned her post in the waiting room to lead the sick American to the lab, a tiny cubicle just large enough for a narrow wooden chair with threadbare black cushion. She wore a name tag identifying herself as Sylvia. Her hair was tinted in layered stripes in various shades, from mud brown to shrill blond. She used her long, purple fingernails

HOT FLASHES DUE TO MENOPAUSE?
Are frequent hot flashes disrupting your days and nights? Are you considering using Estrogen Replacement Therapy? Would FREE medication, mammograms, Pap smears, endometrial biopsies, and medical assessments help?
Consider your well-being. Regardless of whether or not you have had a hysterectomy, you may qualify for a free clinical trial of a new investigational Estrogen Replacement patch with a non-alcohol water-based composition. You will be treated by board-certified San Diego physicians experienced in the treatment of physical and mental consequences of menopause. Women already on estrogen therapy may also qualify for the trial. Compensation will be made available for travel or other expenses. Openings are limited. Please call now.
For more information or to set up an appointment for this free trial, call the study coordinator at 296-5885.

Do you have diabetes?
The Dunlap Research Center is conducting a research study using investigational medication. Participants must be 30-75 years old and NOT REQUIRE INSULIN BY INJECTION.
Those who qualify will receive:
• free medication
• free physical exams
• free diagnostic testing
For more information call Claudia Jones at (619) 492-2809 or leave message on pager number (619) 601-7254.

to keep the complicated hairdo under control. She had to remove an electric hair driver and a styling brush from the lab's only chair before the American could sit down. He could see she had two test tubes to fill.

Throughout the procedure, Sylvia said nothing. She attached a narrow rubber tourniquet, swabbed his arm with alcohol, and began feeling around with her index finger for a vein. That was when he noticed the fingernails had been sprinkled with silver glitter. Sylvia jabbed the needle into his arm, then attached one of the test tubes. No blood came out. She pushed the needle in farther, moving it around in search of a vein. When the blood started coming, Sylvia released the tourniquet. After the first test tube was full, she removed it and attached the second. Sylvia fiddled briefly with the two tubes, then inserted them into a small white paper bag, stapling it shut when she was finished.

As the American stood in the lab doorway, Sylvia replaced the hair dryer and curling iron on the chair where he had been sitting. She picked up the bag containing the blood specimens, turned out the light, and closed the door. She led him down a poorly lighted hallway to Clinica Ricardo's x-ray department. Sylvia left the American in the care of Joaquin, a tall, self-assured young man with a thin mustache wearing a blue smock, jeans, and tennis shoes.

Joaquin met the American in the doorway of a narrow room that contained an x-ray machine on wheels and a portable sonogram machine. The room also served as a three-bed ward, although there were no other patients that night. Two beds were positioned head-to-head, parallel to one wall, and a third bed was perpendicular to the others along the front wall, which faced the street. The street-side wall was made of tinted glass with a metal frame and covered with a flowery shower curtain. Off to one side of the room was a tiny bathroom undergoing renovation and a large closet used as a darkroom for developing x-ray film. A second, smaller, and doorless closet held a rusty file cabinet for patient records.

Joaquin closed the door to the room, revealing a metal rack mounted on the back. The door and surrounding walls were made of wood. There was no lead lining, no radiation badges, no little room to guard the x-ray technician as he shot the film. Joaquin guided the American to the bench to stand behind the closed door, where Joaquin had placed a canister of film inside the metal rack.

Joaquin handed the American a hospital gown that had been draped over the aging x-ray machine. The lime-colored gown smelled of sweat. Joaquin spoke perhaps ten words of English. "You [Joaquin pulled at the patient's shirt, then motioned removing his own shirt], please," Joaquin said. "You [Joaquin pointed to the gown and motioned to the patient to put it on], please."

Once the American had donned the gown, Joaquin stood behind him and used his hands to position the American's body. As he shot chest and stomach x-rays, Joaquin chatted away in Spanish with a younger sidekick — not a clinic employee, but a friend who was there to keep Joaquin company.

As Joaquin was taking the last canister of film from the metal rack behind the door, Dr. Ricardo entered the room. The doctor and the x-ray technician spoke in Spanish, but the American understood.

"I am going to develop the x-rays now," said Joaquin.

"When you have finished, take them to my office," said Dr. Ricardo. "We do the sonogram now," he said to the American, switching to English. "Please to remove your gown."

The doctor had the American lie down on one of the beds, then wheeled the sonogram cart

Behind Christ were a mushroom cloud, a tank painted with a swastika, discarded syringes, and a soda can oozing glue.

to the bedside. Dr. Ricardo pulled a half-full, topless plastic bottle marked mineral oil from a shelf in the cart and poured a small amount onto the American's exposed belly. Then, leaning over the patient, he turned so he could see a small black-and-white television monitor. Dr. Ricardo began sliding a silver orb over the American's slick skin. The patient was positioned so he could see the TV screen too. A hazy image began to emerge. The doctor's probing with the device caused the American to mumble in pain.

"Oh, it is too big," said Dr. Ricardo as he conducted the examination. "Oh, yes. See the little rocks?" The American had no idea what he was seeing on the screen.

Back in Dr. Ricardo's office after the sonogram, the doctor placed one x-ray then another and another onto a light table. He moved them around, looked at one, then another, and then back at the first one again. He studied the x-rays, then went to his desk and picked up the results of the blood tests, which were printed on computer paper.

"This is not good for you," said Dr. Ricardo as he read. "You have an elevated white count. This means you have an infection. Also, your gallbladder is too big, and there are many small stones inside. I want to place you immediately in bed and begin the administration of fluids and antibiotics. I must watch this with great care."

Before he could respond to Dr. Ricardo's counsel, the American first had to find a place to vomit. Dr. Ricardo, sensing what was about to happen, jumped from behind his desk and placed a small plastic trash can at the American's feet.

"I will stay until morning," he told Dr. Ricardo.

The doctor tried to reassure his squeamish patient. "I will stay all the night to observe you," said Dr. Ricardo. "If this situation becomes critical, I can call for a helicopter to take you to the other side. But the truth is, I do not believe it will be necessary."

The American walked back through the waiting room to the sidewalk outside. Raul had been chain-smoking and pacing for two hours. When the American explained that he would have to stay the night, Raul began to cry.

"It's my fault," he sobbed. "The other night when my wife made the spaghetti, she didn't use purified water for cooking. She boiled tap water. Now you are sick. It is my fault. I am so sorry."

"No, No, No!" said the American. "The spaghetti was fine. It had nothing to do with the spaghetti. Why aren't you and Demora and the baby sick too? You all ate the same thing. Besides, that was three or four days ago. It's my fault because I eat a lot of greasy American food."

"That's true," Raul agreed. "You do eat a lot of crappy American food."

The American had his choice of the three beds in the ward. The only private room in the clinic was occupied for the night. He picked the second bed along the wall. Sylvia handed him a clean hospital gown and instructed him in Spanish to strip to his shorts and put on the gown. She then left the room. The American did as he was told and climbed into the hospital bed.

Sylvia was back in moments with a big IV bag and two syringes, which she placed on a bedside cart. Sylvia selected the back of his right hand to insert the IV needle. She injected the contents of two syringes one by one into the IV line. A sense of warmth and well-being came over him. Minutes later, he was in a mild stupor.

Although drowsy, the American could not fall asleep. The only light in the room fell from a bulb in the hallway. He could hear the television from the waiting room next door, and he could see faint figures moving in and out of his line of vision down the hallway. Less than an hour after receiving the IV medication, the American realized his bladder was full. The closest bathroom was still a work in progress. There was no bedside urinal around. The American needed to act fast.

The American lifted the IV bag from its hook after he slid off the bed to the floor. He lifted the bag up with his left hand and kept his right hand low. He walked the length of the hallway. He pushed the bathroom door open with his foot and turned on the light. Cockroaches scattered across the walls.

During his walk back down the hallway, the American noticed that a door into the waiting room was open. He stuck his head in. The reception desk was deserted. The main door to the clinic was open. The television was on, but the channel had gone off the air. Sitting in one plastic chair with his feet propped up on another chair, Dr. Ricardo had fallen asleep.

The American passed the night in a semisleep. He would make the awkward trek to and from the bathroom two more times before being awakened about 7:45 a.m. by Joaquin. Using the same gesture language he had the night before, Joaquin told his patient to put on his shoes and pants. As the American dressed, Dr. Ricardo walked in.

"I am sorry, but do you have a little more money?" he asked. "I need a more clear sonogram image to make your diagnosis. I will send you by ambulance to the best place for this in Tijuana. They have better machines."

"How much more?" he asked.

"Twenty-five dollars," said Dr. Ricardo.

Joaquin lifted the IV bag and walked with the American to the ambulance, which was parked in front of the clinic. Rust spots dotted the dirty white ambulance. A once-red cross painted on the side of the truck had faded to a chalky pink. Hand-lettered on the door in Spanish were the words "Ricardo Ambulatory Surgical Clinic." Joaquin told the American he could make the trip lying down in the back or sitting up front with Joaquin. The American chose the latter. Joaquin assisted the American into the ambulance, hanging the IV bag on the sun visor.

"Do you want a cigarette?" Joaquin asked in Spanish as soon as they pulled away from the clinic.

"Sure," said the American, "thanks."

Joaquin was eager to talk. He bragged that he slept on the stretcher in the back of the ambulance, usually with a different woman every night. He was 23 years old and had followed his uncle, Dr. Ricardo, from Guadalajara to learn the medical trade. He had lived in Tijuana for almost two years, and he liked it.

"A lot of action," Joaquin said. "A lot of opportunity." His uncle required him to work 12 hours a day, seven days a week, but he didn't mind. "The work is not hard. It is interesting. And the girls, they really like medical men."

In ten minutes they were at the Ultrasound and Radiology Center of the Pacific on Eighth Street. The floor at the center sparkled. All staff members wore starched white coats. The equipment looked new. The second sonogram took less than half an hour. Joaquin stopped on the way back to put three dollars' worth of gas in the ambulance. When he got back in, he offered the American another cigarette.

"Smoke it fast," Joaquin cautioned, "before we get back. My uncle hates smoking."

Back in his bed at the clinic, the American noticed that the pain was starting to bother him again. He tried to sleep, but during his absence, a handyman had resumed work on the out-of-commission bathroom. First there was metal-on-metal banging, then the smell of something like glue, and later, the odor of gasoline. When the handyman had finished his work, and the American was almost asleep, a nurse's aide began to shake him. She placed a bowl of corn flakes floating in warm, watery milk and a glass of apple juice on the tray next to his bed. She then began mopping the floor with a bleach solution; its smell competed with the aroma of gasoline and glue. When she finished mopping, she returned to his bedside to pick up the breakfast tray. The American told her that he was too ill to eat. She took the food away.

Early in the afternoon, Dr. Ricardo came in carrying a portable TV set, which he placed on a stack of boxes along the wall opposite the American's bed.

"I am so sorry, but you must stay another day," said Dr. Ricardo. "Right now we don't do the surgery, but I must observe you to see what course this illness will take. I have brought you a television." He handed the American the remote control. "Also, do you have a little more money? We need to do a urine test fluids, but we have to buy at the pharmacy. It is necessary to spend $40." The American handed him two 20s. "I will return in a few moments," said Dr. Ricardo.

The doctor returned carrying a portable telephone. "You can use this phone to call your family or employer if you need to," said Dr. Ricardo. "Please to call collect."

The American thanked him for the TV and phone but complained about the bathroom problem. Dr. Ricardo promised to fix the problem. Joaquin left briefly and returned with a metal pole on wheels.

"Put the IV on this and push it when you have to walk," counseled Dr. Ricardo. "I return later to examine you again."

Sylvia came in to replace his empty IV bag and inject more medicine, but otherwise he spent the afternoon alone. Only when he began using the pole on wheels did he notice that the hallway floor was warped. It was on one of several trips to the bathroom that afternoon that he discovered other architectural failings at Clinica Ricardo. The bathroom next to the lab was in use. The American could hear the shower running inside. He was looking around for options when his eyes caught those of a sweet young woman sitting in a chair at her brother's bedside. The door to the only private room in the clinic was directly across the hall from the lab and, until then, had always been closed. He did not have to say anything for the young woman to understand his plight. She smiled and beckoned him, then pointed to a door in the left-hand corner. This was the room from which he had heard the screaming the night before. He pushed his IV pole over to the open door and entered, closing the door behind him. Inside the private bathroom the northern wall failed to meet flush with the roof. With the door closed and the light off, you could see the sunlight filtering through the crack.

Dinner was a thin vegetable soup, a large piece of bread, and another glass of apple juice. But he still felt too ill to eat. Later, Dr. Ricardo reproved him for not eating. The doctor told the American that he could not be released from the clinic until he was able to take food by mouth. The next morning he forced down his breakfast, determined that he had spent his last night at the Clinica Ricardo.

By the second morning of the American's stay, his Mexican friends had learned of his whereabouts. Raul tracked them down in various Tijuana neighborhoods, and they came to visit him as a group. They brought him that morning's edition of the Union-Tribune and a cold bottle of Snapple iced tea. All five of them looked stricken when they saw him lying in bed hooked up to the IV bag. He told them not to be alarmed, that his condition was not that serious, and that he would be released that day. The American did not have the heart to order his friends to leave. They pulled in plastic chairs from the waiting room and watched television into midafternoon.

About 4:00 p.m., Sylvia came in and disconnected his IV. She told the American in Spanish that Dr. Ricardo was waiting for him in the office, but he should get dressed first. The American knew this meant he was about to be discharged. Over his protests, his five Mexican friends followed him into Dr. Ricardo's office. To his astonishment, Dr. Ricardo welcomed them. The six Mexicans began chattering away in Spanish as the proud American sat in one of the velour chairs and waited. Dr. Ricardo told the gathering that he had once been a military surgeon but that he had been a wild man, a bad man — excessive drinking, whoring. God had sent him a good wife, who had straightened out his life. Now he was a serious Catholic. The Jesus art on the walls of his waiting room had been painted by his nephew. They were all for sale.

Finally Dr. Ricardo turned his attention to the American. The room fell silent as he spoke.

"You are very ill," he said. "I think if you do not want surgery, you can recover at home, but you must stay in the bed two weeks more. Eat only vegetable and cereal — no meat, no grease, no avocado, nothing fried, no Coke, no coffee, nothing with caffeine. Here is for your medicine," he said, handing the American six different prescriptions. "Here is my bill for two nights in my clinic and my consultations. I am sorry if it is too much. If you do not have now, pay when you have it." The bill was for $70.

Dr. Ricardo leaned forward on his desk, resting his chin on folded hands. "You are my friend, but I must warn you. You someday will probably need surgery for this problem. Any fat can make you sick again. You have too much fat. This is bad for gallbladder, for heart, for stroke. And you have too much angry. Do not be so much angry, my friend. Please accept my advice. If you do not, you are going to die." ■

Adam-Walks-Between-Worlds was inclined to date rape for psychological reasons: the fact that he felt remorse over it probably reflected an awareness that it went against Neopagan principles of "harm none."

Adam may have been killed out of revenge, but it doesn't follow that his killer was another Neopagan. Pre-Christian societies often allowed revenge against a condemned killer but also provided for monetary restitution to the aggrieved relatives. This was generally due to the fact that the government in those times did not have the means to apprehend and prosecute a suspect. This was typical, for instance, of the Sumerian law code, whereas the later code of Hammurabi provided for harsher penalties carried out by the state. In other words, there is nothing particularly "pagan" (Neo- or otherwise) about vengeance. If revenge was the motive, the religion of the killer or the victim probably had nothing to do with it.

date rape is a much likelier hypothesis.

With these reservations, thanks for your article!

Funny Little Name

I'm calling in regard to the "I Would Like an Apology" letter from Milan of the three-piece Noodle band (March 6). You guys had asked the public to listen to each band and choose which one they liked. I didn't like either; I thought they both should change their names. I was the guy who called in and gave them negative publicity and made fun of them ("Blurt," February 27), which is basically what they set themselves up for by recording music and leaving it on the little Reader thing for us to listen to. The guy sounds like a crybaby. And, to respond to..."The writer, who did not even have the guts to identify him/herself, trivialized this issue and defamed both bands,"...I thought both bands sucked. I thought "Noodle" was a good name for a band and that neither band was worthy. Mr. Milan only uses his — whatever that is, first or last name — so I couldn't even look his phone number up in the book to tell him myself that they suck, and I personally would have, but you can't, 'cause the guy only uses his one little whatever, some funny little name he made up that he thinks sounds cool. So basically, you don't get an apology, and whatever, work harder and make a better, more original-sounding band, and maybe people will respect you and your music.

Duncan Made Me Sad

I was a bit saddened by the review by Duncan Shepherd of the film Sling Blade (Movie Review, February 27). It made me sad because a human being such as Shepherd can show off what lies between his ears while neglecting his heart so very much. Human beings who are slow of the mind are not, as he states, borderline morons. In this particular film, the slowest of the main characters, Carl, reflects some of the deepest harm that one human can do to another because there's simply no compassion, nor communication. In the film Sling Blade, we see the warmth of a community cast aside its bigotry and prejudice and make room for another human being, regardless of his mental capacity. The whole point of this film was to reveal compassion in the storiest conditions, a compassion that Mr. Shepherd, our reviewer, reflects so very little of.

Sports Clowns

To all Americans: Hey, all you guys and gals toiling at $6 or $10 an hour. Are you happy to be paying your hard-earned money in taxes so these sports clowns can make millions of dollars a year? Yep, your money is helping pay it. Look at it this way: Before 1960 sports owners paid for their own stadiums. Since then, as more and more tax money goes into stadiums, the owners have been freed up to pay these jocks millions. Do you really think your money is better off in Albert Belle's pocket or Jack Clark's pocket or Barry Bonds's pocket or Stan Humphries' pocket than yours?

Lynn Badler

You Moron!

It seems very funny to me how the Reader has covered and continues to cover the stadium expansion....well, I guess the only word I can use to describe it is idiocy. The chief idiots being Bruce Henderson and Michael Aguirre. Two men that have such a hunger for the power of public office that they are willing to use San Diegans to do it. The Reader has only fueled them. I'm sure that Henderson and Aguirre love the Reader's coverage of the issue, for the following reasons. First, everyone knows how anti-Golding this publication is, no matter what the issue. Second, fair reporting is not something that the "City Lights" editors/writers know much about. They have given Henderson and Aguirre a soapbox the size of a Buick while burying the underlying truth, that the city is right and you are wrong; it's that simple. Last, but certainly not least, how can a newspaper possibly be fair and unbiased in reporting on an issue when its editor makes monetary contributions to Henderson's failed political scheme? The next time the Reader makes bedfellows, it should find out exactly who they're sleeping with. Henderson and Aguirre are political scum, and they are the worst kind. They, especially Henderson, profess to be piloting this suicide mission for the good of San Diego and its voters. Well, martyrs they are not, and the only reason they care for the voters is to put money in their campaign pockets. Well, Bruce, three strikes and you're out. The voters have spoken before and said the same thing I am saying now. "Get the hell out of my face and quit your whining, you moron!"

Rewards Of Calumny

I'd like to thank Bruce Henderson for trying to encourage San Diego government to become legal. It may be sufficient to expose them, but probably not. What I wish for is for the Chargers and the owner of the Chargers and Mayor Susan Golding to reap the rewards of the calumny they have created. But we'll have to wait till the fall to see if Spanos gets his reward, and maybe for Susan also.

Slant To The Left

This is a message regarding Matt Potter. I've been reading the Reader for quite a long time. And I know that you have different articles, which is fine, but I'm getting really tired of his inability to be remotely objective, and also to be so one-sided — I mean, he's so blatantly one-sided on every single article — and it's always a slant to the left, every single time, and I think that it's very important that he try to be somewhat objective and show both sides of the story. I don't know what his problem is, or who taught him how to write, but obviously he's not doing his job, and someone needs to talk with him about that and being a little more objective.

From our April edition:

"I TOOK MY HEALTHY, PREGNANT 27-year-old daughter, Sharon Hamptlon, to Dr. Durante's office in Palm Desert on December 12, 1996...

"I saw Sharon in the recovery room about 3:30 or 4:00 p.m...Her eyes were partially open and I could only see the whites of her eyes as if she were in shock. She was not speaking and her whole body was shaking real hard in big shivers. Her legs were especially bad. The doctor said, 'She doesn't react to drugs well.'

"...On the way home to Barstow, I stopped at Wendy's to get a sandwich for little Curtis [Sharon Hamptlon's 3-year-old]. I tried to wake Sharon but all she said was 'Huh, huh, huh.' Then Curtis said, 'Mama, I love you. Do you need anything? Are you okay?'

"...I had no idea that Dr. Durante and Dr. Steir were on probation with the Medical Board for incompetence and negligence against women patients...I know there was an autopsy of Sharon's body and that the Coroner determined that Sharon bled to death because the doctor slashed through her uterus during the abortion."

—from Doris Hamptlon declaration to California Medical Board, January 16, 1997

"IN 1996 I RECALL AT LEAST TWO CASES which I handled as referrals from the clinic called 'A Lady's Choice' in which the attending physician who performed the abortions was Bruce Steir, M.D. The two cases involved repair of perforations of each patient's uterus."

—from Samuel Wiltchik, M.D. declaration to the California Medical Board, February 7, 1997

"WHEN I TOLD DR. DURANTE HOW POORLY RUN the facility was and the fact there were no real nurses on staff, he told me it would take a couple of years for them (the authorities) to catch up to him...Dr. Durante said he needs to talk to Dr. Steir about slowing down....The difference between Dr. Steir and the other doctors is that Dr. Steir did later term abortions which take 2-3 times longer that what Dr. Kirshen does, which are early term abortions. Dr. Kirshen averaged about 10 abortions a day."

Phone Matches™ Success Story

DANCE PARTNER(S) for practice, classes, dates and fun! Variety of dances. Any age, race. Will teach. I'm 5'9", 140 lbs., mature, youthful, energetic, caring, romantic.

John Bowen: I was taking dance classes, and I found it really difficult to find a woman who would go out and dance on a regular basis. That's what I was looking for, although I was also interested in a possible romance.

Rita Otero: I had just gotten divorced, and dancing was one of those things that I'd always wanted to try. When I saw the ad, it sounded custom made.

John: On our first date we were supposed to meet at a salsa club in Mission Valley. I showed up in my bicycle clothes and discovered that the place was closed.

Rita: We went somewhere else, and soon after we were practicing every Wednesday night at John's place.

John: For the first nine months, all we did was dance. I couldn't believe how fast Rita picked it up. I thought she had lessons before and was sandbagging me.

Rita: Sometimes we went to clubs, and we'd be out all night. Still, it stayed platonic. John took a long time to take the bait. But that was OK, because we really got to know each other.

John: I tried to get romantic a couple of times, in a superficial way, but Rita wasn't interested. She had a boyfriend at the time. But she was a steady and reliable partner. I really started improving, but one night a week wasn't enough for me. So I ran another ad for a dance partner in Phone Matches™.

Rita: I answered the ad, not knowing it was John's. When I discovered it was him, I thought, "What a rat! He didn't even tell me."

John: Things changed between us one Friday night on the dance floor. Rita just blew me away with her inventiveness and adaptability. I was mesmerized.

Rita: John is so thoughtful and respectful. Once we started dating, it was like opening up a treasure chest.

John: We both enjoy public displays of affection — or so my friends tell me. Rita is so easy to get along with, it's scary.

Rita: We just had our one-year anniversary — the romantic one. We also celebrate our dance anniversary.

John: All that time we spent together before we got romantic gave us something to build on. We learned how to interact, both physically and socially. I would definitely call us a success story.

Green Day

18th Annual Open Reading of Irish Poetry & Prose

W.B. Yeats

James Joyce

LOCAL EVENTS

St. Patrick's Day at D.G. Wills Books is a traditional affair — just corned beef, Irish whiskey, and 300 people waiting to read aloud. Now in its 18th year, the store's packed open readings of Irish poetry and prose have prompted guests to read Oscar Wilde, Samuel Beckett, Edna O'Brien, George Bernard Shaw, Jonathan Swift, James Joyce, and William Butler Yeats. But they have also attracted pipers, pennywhistlers, opera tenors, and television news teams. On one occasion, Dennis Wills and some of his carpenter friends even ate corned beef with their bare hands. "We do not expect," Wills says, "to do that again."

Things kick off around eight o'clock. "I always play a tape of James Joyce reading from Finnegans Wake for about ten minutes at the beginning," Wills says. Even this, the most difficult work of a writer once dismissed as nonsensical, doesn't scare the crowd. Lines like "Brekkek Kekkek Kekkek!" can be followed, as they were one year, by four book-sellers reading from George Bernard Shaw's play Don Juan in Hell.

Although the readings are, like Karaoke, open to everyone, there's a sign-up sheet. That way, you know if someone's got dibs on the mackerel-crowded seas of Yeats's "Sailing to Byzantium" or the long-legged moorhens in "Easter 1916." Local poet Patti O'Donnell reads the Molly Bloom soliloquy from Joyce's Ulysses every year, but Ted Burke, who started the bookstore's poetry series in 1979, reads something different every time, like a passage from Samuel Beckett's novel Molloy. (His memories of its reception are, he says, "blurry." Besides corned beef and Irish literature anthologies, the bookstore provides Guinness Stout and Old Bushmills whiskey.) Even Edmund Burke, an 18th-century orator who sided with the American colonies and Irish Catholics, gets an audience.

"There was a guy who used to come," Wills says, "and he was a big fan of Edmund Burke, and he memorized — he memorized — this speech, and the guy went on for 15 minutes, reciting from memory. Now that sort of brought the house down, because he had a thing."

Like boxing, the readings go in rounds. "We usually do two and sometimes three sets of readings," Wills explains. "We'll go through one round of 'em for about an hour, take a little break, play some music — people go to the bathroom, get something to eat, chitchat, whatever — and then we hit it again. And if there are enough people left, then we hit it again."

The Irish music is both taped and live. One year, former San Diego Opera tenor Howard Fried took the stage and sang "Raggle Taggle Gypsies." "We were silent," Wills says. "We were just all aghast because he had a beautiful tenor voice." While some may have been aghast because the song isn't Irish, Fried also sang "Danny Boy," which is set to a traditional Irish folksong called "The Londonderry Air." Guests who play the pennywhistle or Irish bagpipes have also been known to attend, and the readings tend to last until midnight, which has allowed performers to entertain before a news crew at 9:30 and then watch themselves — while still at the bookstore — on the 11 o'clock news.

Generally, the crowds thin out by then, but James Joyce remains on the agenda. "There are some X-rated letters," Wills says, "that James Joyce wrote to his wife that we read later in the evening, when there's a core group of people left and others won't be offended. We're a little juiced up by then."

If you'd like to make your reading selection while eating corned beef, take your Irish anthologies to Balboa Park on Sunday. The House of Ireland will host local tenor Patrick Biggs, the Cameron Piper Band, the Ireland Ceili Dancers, and other musical groups on the lawn of the House of Pacific Relations at 2:00 p.m. Irish coffee, stew, potatoes, and bread will be served.

OUTDOORS

Midwinter's Chill is fading, and the increased sunshine is triggering the emergence of bright green leaves on sycamore, liquidambar, and other decorative deciduous trees around San Diego. Cruise down 163 through Balboa Park to appreciate the vernal splendor of the sycamores growing in the landscaped center divider. Or walk across the El Prado bridge and look down upon the same.

More Roches Opposition with the sun this weekend, which means that it rises at sunset and sets at sunrise. An evening twilight deepens, Mars emerges low in the eastern sky, conspicuously bright (magnitude -1) and obviously reddish in color.

March is the Proverbial Windy Month here in San Diego, as in most places. From midday to late afternoon, sun-warmed air expands and rises over the county's interior, drawing in an influx of cool air from the coast to replace it. These afternoon sea breezes will continue at peak strength until well into the summer, providing dependable conditions for such sports as sailing, kite flying, and hang-gliding.

Comet Hale-Bopp continues its luminous trek through the early morning skies this weekend. Look low in the northeast at dawn (no later than 4:45 a.m.) to enjoy the best this comet will have to offer during the morning phase of its apparition. By late this month, the comet will be more advantageously seen just after dusk, low in the northwestern sky.

The Acquisition of Private Lands for Anza-Borrego Desert State Park is the mission of the Anza-Borrego Foundation; the group is hosting its annual Anza Borrego Foundation Week activities March 15-23. Events on Saturday, March 15, include a half-day hike in Culy Valley to view birds and flowering shrubs; an all-day trip exploring sites of cultural, geological, and botanical interest in Rockhouse Canyon; and a moderately strenuous hike from Mountain Palm Springs to Torote Bowl.

On Sunday, March 16, there's a rare tour (by auto) of the 28,000-acre Cuyamaca Impact area, an area normally closed to the public. Four-wheel-drive vehicles are mandatory for this event.

The fee is $20 per hike and $50 for the Cuyamaca impact tour. For information, hike requirements, space availability, and reservations, call 767-0446.

Wildlife and Plant Walks take place on an ongoing basis at the Blue Sky Ecological Reserve. Subjects for outing this weekend include "Hiking for Exercise" (9 a.m.) and an "Introduction to Blue Sky" (3 p.m.) on Saturday, March 15. Get another "Introduction to Blue Sky" at 9 a.m. on Sunday, March 16.

Join a naturalist for each 1-5 hour walk to explore the oak-lined stream-filled canyon in search of animals and plants. Wear comfortable walking shoes and carry water. For further information, call 486-7238. Free. Find the reserve on Espola Road, one-half mile north of Lake Poway Road, in Poway.

See a Diverse Variety of Chaparral plants when joining the Cuyamaca for an easy walk through Rice Canyon in Chula Vista at 2:30 p.m. on Saturday, March 15. Free. For details and directions, dial 232-3821 x203.

See Ya at the Slough, the Friends of Famosa Slough plan a bird walk at the Famosa Slough and Famosa Channel on Saturday, March 15, beginning at 1 p.m. at the kiosk located at the intersection of Famosa Boulevard and West Point Loma Boulevard in the Loma Portal/Ocean Beach area. Explore this tidal wetland for a variety of shorebirds and migrating ducks. Beginners are welcome; bring binoculars if you have them. Free. Call 224-4591 for information.

Sweetwater Marsh is the site for a bird walk hosted by the Chula Vista Nature Center on Saturday, March 15, and on Tuesday, March 18; both hikes begin at 8 a.m. For information, the required reservations, and directions, dial 422-3481. Free.

Nature Walk, a docent-led plant walk is planned at the Tijuana River National Estuarine Reserve from 9 to 11 a.m. on Saturday, March 15. Meet at 9th and Iris in Imperial Beach, and bring binoculars if you have them. Free. Call 575-3613 for information and reservations.

Bring Drinking Water, Shovels, gloves, and sturdy shoes to help plant trees in Linda Vista with People for Trees at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, March 15. Meet at Coolidge and Tate Streets, at the end of the cul-de-sac. For more information, call 234-TREE.

Tree Walk, Mithouse Tours offers its monthly hour-long guided tour highlighting various Balboa Park trees on Saturday, March 15, at 10 a.m., starting from the park's Botanical Building. Free. Dial 235-1121 for additional details.

Learn About Vernal Pools and fire ecology in Peñasquitos Canyon Preserve at 8 a.m. on Saturday, March 15. Participants will see it, try flowering plants, and learn about critters who favor the pools.

Meet at Caminito Propico and Calle Cristobal in Mira Mesa; park in the cul-de-sac on either side. The adventure is free; call 484-5249 for more information.

Breathtaking Views are promised on the outing along the south San Pasqual/lower Santa Ysabel trail hike planned by San Dieguito River Valley Park guides on Sunday, March 16, from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Learn about the park's history and present and future plans during this three- to four-mile moderately difficult hike. Free. Dial 235-5640 x5, for information, directions, and the required reservations. Bring water, a snack, and sturdy shoes.

Bird Walk, a docent-led bird walk is planned at the Tijuana River National Estuarine Reserve on Sunday, March 16, from 3 to 4 p.m. For information, reservations, and location on the event, call 575-3613. Free. Bring binoculars and field guides if you have them.

A Small Group of Intrepid Souls get together on St. Patrick's Day in 1997 to walk together, and thus Walkabout was born. Celebrate the organization's 20th anniversary when the original route is followed starting at 6 p.m. on Monday, March 17, with a choice of hills or no hills for participants. Meet at Scott and Emerald in Point Loma, and bring a flashlight. Free. Dial 231-7463 for more information. Free.

DANCE

Original Works by UCSD Faculty showcase student performers in recitals scheduled for March 13-16 at the Mandell Weiss Theater, Revelle College, on the UCSD campus. The "Evenings of Dance" are directed by Margaret Marshall and Pat Rincon.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, at 2 and 8 p.m. on Saturday, and at 7 p.m. on Sunday. Admission for the series is $75 general or $12 per individual performance. For information and tickets, dial 534-4574.

Parking permits are required on the UCSD campus, cost $3 after 4:30 p.m., and may be purchased at the Gilman Drive and Northview Drive information pavilions at the north and south entrances to the campus.

The "Private Women/Public Concerts" series at Studio Performance and Visual Art continues with performances by Lower Left Dance Thursday through Saturday, March 13-15, at 8 p.m. each evening. Three works by choreographers Nina Martin and Mary Reich are on the program, including Two in the Corner, Not to Be Seen, Herd to Swallow, and No Time/Second Thoughts.

Tickets are $10 general. Sushi is located in the ReinCarnation Building, at 520 11th Avenue, downtown. For information, call 235-8466.

Dance to the Music of Lime in the Harp and calling by Joseph Taulane at the New England-style contra and square dance on Friday, March 14, at 8 p.m. Newcomers are welcome, an introductory session begins at 7:40 p.m., and all dance throughout the evening will be taught. The dance will be held at the Trinity Methodist Church, 3030 Thorn Street, North Park. Admission is $5; for additional information, call 273-5553.

Rhapsody in Taps, the company's dancers and musicians will present a program of rhythmic tap dancing and jazz music — highlighting a diverse repertoire to music by classic composers such as Duke Ellington, Charlie Parker, and Miles Davis — at the California Center for the Arts, Escondido on Saturday, March 15, at 8 p.m.

Tickets range from $15 to $28. Find the center at 340 North Escondido Boulevard (at Valley Parkway), in Escondido. Call 360-6741 or 800-988-4253 for information and reservations.

FILM

Glare: The Screening Series '97 continues at UCSD tonight, Thursday, March 13, and promises independent media by established and emerging media artists. All works are presented in person by the artist. Tonight, view Surveying the First Decade: Video Art and Alternative Media in the U.S. (1968-80) by archivist Maria Troy, working with the Video Data Bank in Chicago. Troy will address the importance of videotape preservation.

All of the screenings begin at 6:30 p.m. in the Visual Arts Performance Space on Russell Lane. Admission is free, although there is a $3 charge per parking permit. For information and directions, call 534-2866. The series continues through April 30.

The Irish/Mexican Connection is explored in Mark Day's film The San Patricios, screening at 2 p.m. on Saturday, March 15, at the Centro Cultural de la Raza, following the St. Patrick's Day parade. The Centro is located at 2004 Park Boulevard, in the Pepper Grove area of Balboa Park, north of Presidents Way. Admission is free. For more information, call 235-6135.

Expect a "Lived-In" Portrait of an alcoholic in Steve Buscemi's 1996 film, Trees Lounge. The actor wrote, directed, and stars in the comic drama about an unemployed mechanic hanging out with his burly friends. It will screen for the Sunday Matinee Series at the San Diego Public Library on Sunday, March 16, at 2 p.m., in the third-floor auditorium of the library, at 820 E Street, downtown. Free. Call 236-5800 for additional details.

Yet Another Look at Female Sexual Awakening is on offer in Catherine Breillat's 1988 film 36 Fillette. Will 14-year-old Lili lose her virginity while on vacation with her family? Find out when the flick screens for the Film Forum series at the San Diego Public Library (820 E Street, downtown) on Monday, March 17, at 6 p.m. Free; call 236-5800 for more information. In French with English subtitles.

Over 60 Native American and Latino student works from across Latin America and the United States star in the Centro Cultural de la Raza's fourth annual Cine Estudiantil '97, in SDSU's Montezuma Hall. The festival begins on Tuesday, March 18, with a presentation by actor Edward James Olmos at 5 p.m. and a screening at 6 p.m. of his film Lives in Hazard, said to offer an exploration of East L.A.'s gang subculture.

On Wednesday, March 19, view Frogs Monsters and Lily Pads at 6 p.m., featuring 12 works by Native American students. Eleven student videos/films gathered thematically in "Innocence Lost" will screen from 8 to 10 p.m.

Films Focusing on Latino and U.S.-Mexican border topics are produced by local San Diego filmmaker Paul Espinosa, whose works are the subject of a festival continuing at the Porter Troupe Gallery on Wednesday, March 19, with a screening of Uneasy Neighbors. It's a documentary profile of the tensions between migrant work camps and affluent homeowners in north San Diego County, chronicling the life and death of the Green Valley camp, home to thousands of workers over a ten-year period. The film will be followed by dialogue and discussion with the Rev. Rafael Martinez.

Screenings begin at 7 p.m. Admission is $5 general. Find the Porter Troupe Gallery at 301 Spruce Street, in Hillcrest. For more information, call 291-9096.

Reuben H. Fleet Space Theater, get up close and personal with Whales, a film following the nomadic beasts on their annual migratory paths. Encounter the blue whale, the largest animal that has ever lived on Earth, with a heart the size of a small car; humpback whales, right whales, and orcas, among others. The large-format setting immerses viewers in the world's oceans to learn about these mysterious marine mammals.

When do we stand in the vastness of the cosmos? Explore the answer to this timeless question in Cosmic Voyage. The film begins on Earth and ascends through the solar system and Milky Way using two computer-generated zooms to demonstrate enduring scientific theories.

For ticket prices and showtimes, call 238-1233. The theater is found in Balboa Park.

Would You Buy a Used Bomber from This Man? Few works of art can be as public and as monumental as h... dings, but except for Frank Lloyd Wright and Stanford White, architects remain an anonymous bunch — their work isn't signed, and you never see descriptors being auctioned at Christie's. It an architect does crave attention, he's got to find other means, like hitching his wagon to a Very Famous Person. This tactic can be dangerous, however, if your client goes sour on the public palate. Just ask Hitler's architect, Albert Speer. AMC Biography, Albert Speer, airs tonight, Thursday, March 13, at 9 p.m. on the A&E Network, Channel 41.

A Third of Heaven Fell, angels have enjoyed a tremendous resurgence in popularity of late, possibly because they have been presented as such fluffy beings, benign spiritual protectors who help us out without demanding much in return. (Not like God, who tells us He will judge us by how well we followed His commandments.) Given their image, it seems odd that angels in Scripture keep having to say, "Fear not!" when they make themselves visible. And what about their fallen brethren? If angels surround us, why not devils? We blame evil on a lot of things — bad upbringings, socioeconomic hardship, mental imbalance — but few people take "the devil made me do it" seriously anymore. TS, Earcir airs Friday, March 14, at 10:05 p.m. on TNT, Channel 34.

Philosophers Rule the World, in an attempt to unite the two ends of the intellectual spectrum, the Learning Channel brings "The Great Books" to television. Two that inspire conversers are Plato's Republic and The Prince by Machiavelli, which ask what sort of a thing is man and how ought he to live and how do we get him to live that way? To label one as idealist and the other a realist is too simple. Better to look at the ends they propose for man and government; therein lie the true difference. Airs Saturday, March 15, at 9 p.m. (The Republic) and 5 p.m. (The Prince), on the Learning Channel, Channel 36.

It Started Harmlessly Enough, Keanu Reeves charmed a chain of America playing a dumb kid who always looks like he's just woken up from a nap in Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure. Then he ascended to genuine hunkiness with Speed, a film with a clever device. Sandra Bullock, and Dennis Hopper. But how did he make his way into Much Ado About Nothing, even if it was a bit part? And how did he get to play Hamlet in Toronto? He just doesn't know what he can't do; the problem is, neither does anyone else. Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure airs Saturday, March 15, at 12:05 p.m. on TBS, Channel 27.

What Is Life? According to a certain world view, religion and science are like John the Baptist and Jesus: one must decrease as the other increases. As science explains more and more about our world, we grow less and less dependent on religion. But a curious thing happens. Though they scoff at those who have taken the "leap of faith" and believed in the supernatural, science people end up taking their own leap of faith: once science has explained some things that used to be the domain of religion, they believe it will eventually explain everything. Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, another work in "The Great Books" series, tells a tale of those whose faith in science was absolute. Airs Saturday, March 15, at 3 p.m. on the Learning Channel, Channel 36.

Oh, the Bible has sold more copies in America than Margaret Mitchell's Gone with the Wind, and yet all some folks know about the movie, winner of eight Academy Awards, is Gable's "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn!" It's as if you were to sum up Citizen Kane with "Rosebud," or Casablanca with "Play it Again, Sam." This failure to look beyond catch phrases is what leads to films like Pulp Fiction, montages of memorable lines without much of a story behind them. See the movie. Get the story. Gone with the Wind airs Sunday, March 16, at 9 p.m. on TNT, Channel 34.

One of the Advantages of Being the Tough Guy's Tough Guy is that when you author, nobody snickers. Humphrey Bogart lets Katharine Hepburn talk him into doing the right thing in The African Queen, airing Monday, March 17, at 1:00 p.m. on TBS, Channel 27.

Nazis and Jewish Artifacts, Steven Spielberg and George Lucas may have been indulging their nostalgia for old swashbuckler-cliffhanger flicks when they conceived Raiders of the Lost Ark, but they ended up with one of the best movies ever made. Indiana Jones is a real American hero — a self-interested skeptic getting in over his head in the conflict between good and evil. It didn't hurt that they mined the Bible for a device of violent supernatural power, the Ark of C... Covenant, and that into the center's most nefarious villains, the Nazis, after it. God is not mocked, and an angry God makes for an exciting finale. The religious dimension is not heavy-handed, though. Jones is our hero, not the Almighty. Airs Monday, March 17, at 8:00 p.m. on TBS, Channel 27.

Speaking of Nostalgia for Swashbucklers, see the swashbuckler's swashbuckler, Errol Flynn, in The Adventures of Robin Hood. The moodiest and aesthetic alone make it required viewing for your inner child, and now that you're older, you won't be pressed out by the romance. Airs Tuesday, March 18, at 1:05 p.m. on TBS, Channel 27.

Shattering the Stereotype, poor PBS. It's tough being television's champion of culture. The medium may not be the message, but PBS does tend to lend a sharp, faded hue to whatever lofty sentiment you're trying to get across. A few shows rise above the muck, but for scary Civil War, there are a dozen Rudy Shoos. Weary of the burden of showing "important" documentaries and orchestral performances, PBS opted for a romp in the sims with John Tesh. The Avalon Concert, in which the hot-haired Tesh introduces pieces inspired by his trip to Italy. Board and Bow Classic, the Long Way. It's the theme for a bicycle ride planned by the San Diego Bicycle Touring Society on Saturday, March 15, starting at 8:45 a.m. at Doyle Park (8175 Regents Road, La Jolla). Leader Amy promises a 55-mile route including Poway, Escondido, Lake Hodges, and lunch in Del Mar. The ride is free, the food is not. For more information, call 483-3872.

Fishing Tips, every Saturday at 10 a.m., experts give beginners (kids and adults) advice on how to lure trout, bass, and catfish out of the waters of Lake Cuyamaca. It's particularly geared for the current weather and fishing conditions. The headquarters for the Lake Cuyamaca Recreation and Park District is at 15027 Highway 79, Julian. For more details, call 765-0515. Free.

The San Diego Bicycle Club spons bicycle rides every Saturday morning on an ongoing basis. A fast-paced 50-mile group ride begins at 8:30 a.m. At 9:45 a.m., a slower-paced 35-mile developmental ride begins, for those learning to ride in a pace line and in a group. Meet the riders at Costa Verde Center, located at the southwest corner of Genesee Avenue and La Jolla Village Drive (directly across from University Towne Center), in the parking lot just north of the Soup Exchange, in La Jolla. Free. For more details, call 495-2454. Helmets are mandatory.

Run for the Pot of Gold, the 17th annual Domino's Pizza St. Patrick's Day 10k run is set for Saturday, March 15, starting at 7:30 a.m., south of the Hilton Hotel on East Mission Bay Drive in Mission Bay Park. Organizers promise an "Irish" award for the best Irish-themed running cos-

ECSTATIC OCCASIONS, EXPEDIENT FORMS

READING

David Lehman

Editor: David Lehman was born in New York City in 1948. He graduated from Columbia College in 1970 and attended Cambridge University from 1970 to 1972. He received a doctorate at Columbia University, where he was Lionel Trilling's graduate assistant. He is the author of three books of poems, including Valentine Place (Scribner, 1996). His prose books include Signs of the Times: Deconstruction and the Fall of Paul de Man, The Big Question, and The Perfect Murder. He was recently named general editor of the University of Michigan Press's Poets on Poetry series and is on the core faculty of the graduate writing program at Bennington College. He also teaches at Columbia and the New School for Social Research. Lehman is perhaps best known nationally as founder and editor of The Best American Poetry, now in its tenth year. The series annually presents 75 new poems, chosen with Lehman's help, by the guest editor as his or her favorites of the previous year.

Lehman is currently at work on two books. The first is a book about the New York School of poets and painters. The second is a book titled The Best Days of the Year, a collection of the daily poems Lehman has been writing for the last year. Lehman, divorced, is father to a 12-year-old son. Lehman lives in Ithaca, New York, and New York City.

Ecstatic Occasions, Expedient Forms: 85 Leading Contemporary Poets Select and Comment on Their Poems; The University of Michigan Press, 1997; 266 pages, $16.95

The title, Lehman writes in his preface to this, the second edition (the first was published in 1987), recalls a line from Marianne Moore's poem "The Past Is the Present" in which Miss Moore noted, about the origins of a poem, "Ecstasy affords the occasion, and expediency determines the form." If you're been curious as to how poets "make" a poem, this is your book. As you read through the 85 poets' poems and their commentary on these poems' forms, you discover that the "how" ranges from simple as pie to knottily complex. Among poets included are A.R. Ammons, John Ashbery, Amy Clampitt, Alfred Corn, Rita Dove, Alice Fulton, Amy Gerstler (born and raised in San Diego), Dana Gioia, Anthony Hecht, Brad Leithauser, J.D. McClatchy, Heather McHugh (born in San Diego), W.S. Merwin, Molly Peacock, Robert Pinsky, Charles Simic, Mark Strand, Rosanna Warren, and Charles Wright.

When we talked recently, I asked Mr. Lehman how he happened to put together Ecstatic Occasions, Expedient Forms.

"It began in the early '80s. The book has since grown and evolved. But in the early '80s it seemed to me that one of the most radical and revolutionary things a poet could do in that climate was to write in a form. The academic orthodoxy of that time was a certain kind of free verse that was autobiographical, plaintive in tone, first person, maybe with a little surrealism to give it some edge. And it seemed as if a number of poets were considering writing in form but without the implication of being formalists."

Lehman then wrote scads of letters, asking poets to select one of their poems and send it to him, together with a commentary on how the poem began and grew and found its final form. "Or," he said, "if I knew of a poem that I particularly wanted, I would specify that. That, I think, ended by being the best method. If I had to do it over again, I would be very directive in choosing a poem or would ask people to submit a number of poems from which I could choose one."

About form Mr. Lehman said, "People are sometimes put off by the notion of form and craft because they associate it with hard work and dry-as-dust libraries and failing grades in school. But in fact forms are like games. W.H. Auden observed that a young poet who was interested in poetry because he or she had something to say was less likely to succeed than a poet who declared that his or her interest was in playing with words. I think that's true.

"One purpose of Ecstatic Occasions, Expedient Forms was to show some of the variety of forms and games that poets play and have played and use to generate inspiration. Because another fallacy, I think, is that inspiration hits you like lightning. But I think you can actually create your own inspiration. And you do that by collaborating with language, because language is the agent of the imagination.

"For example anagrams: we've all played with anagrams. Nabokov loved doing that. He would write stories in which there would be anagrammatic transformations from one sentence to another. The point is that if you make a linguistic game out of writing, then you are distracting your censorious superego so that the poem gets written without your having interfered with or steered it in the wrong directions. Also you're giving your unconscious a chance to have its say. This implies that sometimes people's conscious selves are in the way, are obstacles. Which I think is probably true."

I asked what Mr. Lehman would say to nonpoets about inspiration.

"The generally accepted view of inspiration is that it is something you wait for patiently. And then it arrives, if you have the grace of God. But I believe that inspiration is something that you can help make happen by cajoling it, and I think there are different ways of doing that. Writing in a form is one way. Writing a poem in the form of a sestina, you may find that you have inspired yourself. Inspiration comes when it can, and you have to give it a helping hand. I think if you're writing in a form like the sestina, you're so occupied with solving the puzzle that you surprise yourself with what comes out in your writing. Because you're not directing it."

— Judith Moore

David Lehman will read from his work at Bay Books, 1029 Orange Avenue, Coronado, on Tuesday, March 18, at 7:00 p.m.

TWO POEMS BY DAVID LEHMAN

Sixth Sense

Something told him she was near. In the same room,
Even. Wearing the blue polka-dot dress he'd given her,
With the pearl choker and the sapphire earrings,
Holding a Kir Royale. He looked at her left hand.
No ring. And knew he had to get out of there
Fast, before one of them did something irrevocable,
Like the time she slapped his face in the bus
And he wasn't sure why, or the day they stood
In front of the dress-shop window, and when
She said she liked the yellow kimono he went
And bought it on the spot. What an amazing day
That was. Everyone he met that day was someone
He had known before, a decade ago or more,
And the statue of Alice the gigantic girl
In Central Park turned out to be his sister
When they were small. Mama was in the kitchen
Waiting for the phone to ring, and Daddy was still On the road, checking the rearview mirror
In the old green Chevrolet, when the hurricane hit.
One of the other men drowned that night, but Daddy
Came back safely, with gifts for all the kids
If they agreed to go to sleep and dream of him.

Dutch Interior

He liked the late-afternoon light as it dimmed
In the living room, and wouldn't switch on
The electric lights until past eight o'clock.
His wife complained, called him cheerless, but
It wasn't a case of melancholy; he just liked
The way things looked in virgin growing darker
So gradually and imperceptibly that it seemed
The very element in which we live. Every man
And woman deserves one true moment of greatness
And this was his, this Dutch interior, entered
And possessed, so tranquil and yet so busy
With details: the couple's shed clothes scattered
On the backs of armchairs, the dog chasing a shoe,
The wide-open window, the late-afternoon light.

MORE THAN SUN AND SAND

LOST ANGELENO

PHOTOGRAPHS BY SCOTT LINDQUIST

Easterners who come to Los Angeles like to harp on the city's "artificiality."

"After all," they say, "this place used to be nothing but desert."

When pressed to clarify their point, they allude to the lush gardens in Brentwood and Bel Air, to the fact that the city depends on "all that water that has to be piped in from elsewhere."

They've seen Chinatown. They're vaguely familiar with the shady deals that brought water to Los Angeles. And this ugly history confirms the Eastern preconception of the city as a place uniquely tainted by vanity and greed. (Just how corruption in Chicago, say, or New York, failed to taint or undermine their legitimacy, or make these cities somehow less "real," is never explained.)

Chicago's history, however, knows something about greed. And like Los Angeles, Manhattan did not come into being as a full-blown metropolis covered in asphalt, concrete, and skyscrapers. There's a little something "artificial" about New York too. Few Manhattanites grow their own food or dig their own wells — it would be fair to say New York relies somewhat heavily on raw materials brought in from elsewhere. But Americans have a difficult time seeing through their expectations for the West.

It took a foreign eye to see Southern California as something more than a desert, moral or otherwise. Theodore Payne was only 20 years old when he immigrated from England to Southern California in 1893. When he looked around he saw more than sun and sand. He saw a broad variety of native plants and flowers that he loved and was disappointed to find that many were (already) disappearing from the local landscape. He set out to grow these plants and collect their seeds. After working on the estate of a Polish actress in Orange County, he started his own nursery. By the early 1900s his love for native plants had evolved into zealotry, and he was scattering native wildflower seeds on vacant lots in Los Angeles. In 1913, the Los Angeles City Council commissioned Payne to plant wildflower beds in Exposition Park. He went on to inspire the Santa Barbara Botanical Garden, Rancho Santa Ana Botanical Garden, and worked with landscape architect Ralph Cornell to develop Torrey Pines State Park. By the time Payne died in 1963, he'd brought almost 500 native species of shrubs, trees, and flowers into regular cultivation in Southern California.

More than 100 years have passed since Payne first squinted into our flat, broad sunlight, and the nonprofit organization that bears his name sits in an unsophisticated suburb northeast of this vast city.

A dreamy, antic staff maintains the 2½-acre Theodore Payne Foundation on a rutted dirt road in Sun Valley. On a recent hot and dry afternoon, no one there seemed to have a firm grasp of who Payne was or who the foundation's board members were. Questions about the past were met with confused smiles. Many of the drawers containing the foundation's nationally famous for-sale seed collection were empty. The place has a surreal and forgotten feel. But outside, Payne's plants thrive.

In the mid-1980s a volunteer, a professional gardener from Arcadia, planted an entire hill on the foundation's property with Payne's favorite plants and wildflowers. A rough trail built by the gardener winds its way to the summit. In spring, in years when there has been enough rain, the hill is covered with golden California poppies, purple and blue lupines, yellow hilltop daisies, scarlet buglers, fluffy popcorn flowers, wild marigolds, and whispering bells. All flowers Payne had feared would disappear completely from Southern California. In many places the name tags and markers describing the flowers and their importance have been bleached to illegibility by rain and sun. Others are lost in the hill's dense tangle of aggressive vines, branches, and leaves.

Command Museum of MCRD, artifacts from the beginning of the Marine Corps to the present are displayed, with special rooms dedicated to ribbons and medals and to the Boxer Rebellion. The museum is located in Building 26, just inside Gate 4, off Pacific Highway. 524-6038.

Creation Museum, a museum contrasting the evolution and creation world views is found at 10946 Woodside Avenue North, in Santee. For more information, call 448-0900 x231.

George White and Anna Gunn Marston House, this historic home sits on five acres of landscaped grounds with a formal English Romantic garden. Built for civic leader and department store founder

MUSEUMS

(Art museums are listed in the Reader's Guide to Art.)

Antique Gas and Steam Engine Museum, the museum's activities include locating, collecting, documenting, and preserving historical gas-, steam-, and horse-powered equipment related not only to agriculture, but to the general development of America. The collection is made up of equipment used on farms, mining, oil drilling, and construction industries. In addition, the museum has a blacksmith and wheelwright shop, a country kitchen and parlor, a steam-operated sawmill, and 1/3-scale train. Find the museum at 2040 North Santa Fe Avenue, Vista. For further details, call 941-1791.

Bonita Historical Museum, the museum features many historical photographs, artifacts, tools, and farming implements, the district's 1953 fire engine, and bound copies back to the 1930s of the Chula Vista State News. Find the museum at 4035 Bonita Road, in Bonita. Dial 267-5141 or 479-0678 for additional information.

Chinese Historical Museum, continuing exhibits include stories of local Chinese American war veterans; "In Search of Gold Mountain: The Photographic History of the Chinese in San Diego, California"; the Chinese lottery; and archaeological artifacts from old Chinatown sites.

The museum is located in a building originally built in 1927 for the Chinese Mission adjacent to the building is an Asian garden, including a statue of Confucius, a waterfall, stream, and a large Chinese gate. The museum is located at 404 Third Avenue (at J Street), downtown. 338-9888.

Chula Vista Heritage Museum features glimpses of Chula Vista's past; the opening exhibits include lemon packing crate labels, photographs of downtown Chula Vista, doors and adobe blocks from the original Star newspaper building, and relics from the Chay Watch Company. Find the museum at 360 Third Avenue, Chula Vista. For further information, call 420-6916.

Calendar LOCAL EVENTS

George Marston and his family by San Diego architects William Hebbard and Irving Gill, the Marston house design is in keeping with the early 20th-Century American Arts and Crafts period, which emphasizes simplicity, function, and natural materials. The museum is located at 3525 Seventh Avenue, Hillcrest; 298-3142.

House of Pacific Relations, International Cottages in Balboa Park, are open every Sunday from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. to present the history and traditions of 30 ethnic groups. Select cottages are also open on the fourth Tuesday of every mo.nth, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., and Children around the World videos are shown in the Hall of Nations on the fourth Tuesday of every month. 582-1316.

Museum of San Diego History, photographs, videos, artifacts, and packing crate labels make up the exhibit "Centuries of Sunshine," commemorating the 100th anniversary of Sunkist growers and the importance of citrus to Southern California. The more than 8000 distinctive label designs are said to have "marketed the California lifestyle as well as the fruit." See the show through Sunday, June 8.

"The Hundred-Year Road: Japan to San Diego, a Japanese American Journey" examines the Japanese experience in San Diego, beginning with the first migrations in the late 19th century, through a collection of photographs, art, and artifacts. The exhibition includes a reproduction of a room in a typical relocation center, and features equipment developed by the Japanese tuna fleet that began fishing local waters in the 1920s. The exhibition's photographs are said to cover "every facet of Japanese life." See this show through Sunday, August 10.

The museum is located in the Casa de Balboa building in Balboa Park; 232-6203.

Reuben H. Fleet Science Center, the center's permanent exhibitions present a variety of hands-on exhibits illustrating scientific principles, including "Signals." Explore the various methods of transmission and storage and retrieval of information, such as lasers, flashing lights, waveforms, and more.

The Science Center is located in Balboa Park. For other information, call 238-1233.

San Diego Automotive Museum, more than 60 automobiles and motorcycles from horseless carriages to future prototypes are included in the museum's permanent collection. "Puttin' on the Ritz" features a dozen elegant roadsters from the '20s and '30s, such as a Duesenberg, Bugatti, Rolls-Royce, Stutz, and Ruxton.

Find the museum in Balboa Park near the Starlight Bowl. 231-2886.

San Diego Maritime Museum, where have all the tuna boats gone? Find out in an exhibit entitled "Harvesting the Sea," displayed on the deck of the Berkeley, telling the tale of the rise and decline of one of the world's greatest fishing fleets and of the industry that left its stamp upon the development of San Diego as a maritime community. Look for images of the early whaling days off Ballast Point, the Chinese junk fleet near the foot of Market, cannery workers, and more.

The Star of India is also hosting Bob Grieser's Waterfront: A Photo Essay," a collection of more than 50 black-and-white sailing photographs with images on both the Chesapeake Bay and the West Coast of the United States. Also on view is "Living Traditions of Sail. The Artwork of Scott Kennedy," a gathering of traditional sailing images in oil, water color, and ink. Both shows continue through the summer.

The museum features permanent exhibits documenting the history of San Diego's waterfront and the building of the West Coast by sea, including exhibits concerning the old San Diego-Coronado ferryboats, the tuna fishing industry, and the military. The museum fleet consists of the 1863 bark Star of India, the 1898 San Francisco ferryboat Berkeley, and the 1904 Scottish steam yacht Medea. There are also nautical exhibits, ship carpenters, model building, ships in bottles, woodcarvers, and a complete research library.

The museum is located at 1306 North Harbor Drive, along the Embarcadero at the corner of North Harbor Drive and Ash Street, downtown; 234-9153.

San Diego Museum of Man, a traveling retrospective of more than 60 paintings from a remote Ecuadorean farming community are gathered in "Pintores de Tigua: Andean Artists of Ecuador." The paintings, all done on mounted sheep hide, represent an indigenous cultural expression characterized by rich detail and vivid colors. The focus is on communal events. See this exhibit through Monday, May 26.

The museum and the San Diego Opera have joined forces to present "The Legacy of Spanish Jews in the Americas. A Photographs, Essays," an exhibition of 30 black-and-white photographs documenting residual Jewish customs in the Southwest. The retrospective — photographed by New York Times photo correspondent Cary Herz — documents the hidden legacy of Jews who relocated to Mexico and New Mexico after fleeing Spain during the Inquisition of the 15th and 16th Centuries. The photographs are accompanied by replicas of documents from several trials of "secret Jews." View this exhibit through Sunday, May 18.

"Life and Death on the Nile: Sun Gods and Mummies in Ancient Egypt" is an ongoing exhibit that includes coffin and mummy masks, sacred amulets, falcon shrines, mummified falcons, and a human mummy of the Ptolemaic period, along with art and utensils of daily life in the Amarna Period, from 1368 to 1351 B.C.

Life in Egypt 3500 years ago is depicted in the museum's new Children's Discovery Center. "Time Travel to Ancient Egypt" features a walk through rendition of a nobleman's home, and organizers promise a specific theme each month: November's activity is "Egyptian Jewelry," so on weekends through the rest of the month, visitors can pay a fee to create a bead molded from the cast of a scarab from the museum's collections.

The museum is found in Balboa Park. 239-2001.

San Diego Railroad Museum contains an extensive collection of restored trains in several locations. At the Campo Depot, the museum offers vintage train trips on Saturdays and Sundays (and on many major holidays, excluding Thanksgiving and Christmas), departing at 12:01 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. for a one-and-a-half-hour trip to Miller Creek, in San Diego's backcountry. At the Campo location, there are more than 60 pieces of "rolling stock," a wide variety of cars, locomotives, and other train-related artifacts.

The Campo Depot is about a one-hour drive from San Diego (roughly 50 miles east). Find the depot at Highway 94 and Forest Gate Road. Questions? Call 478-9937.

The La Mesa Depot, 4695 Nebo Drive, La Mesa, is an authentic Victorian depot restored by volunteers. This wooden structure is the community's oldest building and served as passenger depot for the San Diego-Arizona Railroad from 1894 to 1927. Exhibits include photos and history of the Arizona Railroad, antiques, and memorabilia of the Southern Pacific line, alongside a 1920s locomotive and caboose, and a 1940s diesel engine. For more information on either location, call the main office at 595-3030.

San Pasqual Battlefield State Historic Park commemorates the clash (on December 6, 1846) during the Mexican War between the U.S. Dragoons, bolstered by sailors and volunteers from San Diego, and California militia. A narrated slide-show screens throughout the day, telling the story of the war in Mexico and California. A self-guided tour recounts the events of the battle and profiles the leaders of the forces and also describes the lives of the Indians indigenous to the valley. The museum is found at 15808 San Pasqual Valley Road, Escondido. Call 238-3380 for additional details.

Villa Montezuma, built in 1887 for internationally celebrated author and musician Jesse Shepard, serves as both a historical house museum and cultural center. Find the museum at 1925 K Street (at 20th Street), downtown. Call 239-2211 for more information.

William Heath Davis House Museum, said to be the oldest surviving structure in the new town area of downtown San Diego, is a well-preserved example of a pre-framed lumber "salt box" family home shipped from the East Coast to California by boat around Cape Horn in 1850. Find the museum at 410 Island Avenue (at Fourth Avenue), in the Gaslamp Quarter; 233-4692.

Roam-O-Rama

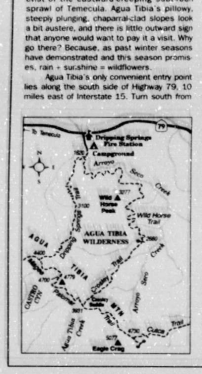
A Guide to Unexpected San Diego • By Jerry Schad

The Agua Tibia Wilderness, an obscure section of Cleveland National Forest, straddles the San Diego-Riverside county line just east of the eastward-creeping suburban sprawl of Temecula. Agua Tibia's pillowy, steeply plunging, chaparral-clad slopes look a bit austere, and there is little outward sign that anyone would want to pay it a visit. Why go there? Because, as past winter seasons have demonstrated and this season promises, rain + sunshine = wildflowers.

Agua Tibia's only convenient entry point lies along the south side of Highway 79, 10 miles east of Interstate 15. Turn south from Highway 79 at Dripping Springs Fire Station, and continue 0.4 mile through Dripping Springs Campground to the road end and trailhead. You'll need a wilderness permit to enter the wilderness area beyond the trailhead parking area. It's best to call the Forest Service (788-0250) well in advance of your visit to arrange for a permit and to ask about current trail conditions.

Agua Tibia

Just beyond the trailhead, you hop across Arroyo Seco Creek on stones and begin a switchbacking ascent through sage-scrub and chaparral vegetation, liberally sprinkled with a dozen or two kinds of wildflowers. After only 0.1 mile, there's a trail junction. Choose either way: the Wild Horse Trail, on the left, gains elevation relatively slowly. The Dripping Springs Trail, ahead, begins a steady and very crooked ascent of Agua Tibia Mountain's north flank.



The Vail Fire of 1989 burned much of Agua Tibia Wilderness to a crisp, but heavy winter rains in the years that followed promptly produced a fresh new crop of vegetation. For a long time both trails were smothered in overgrowth, but that has largely been remedied through the efforts of volunteer trail workers. Both trails head toward the crest of Agua Tibia Mountain, which is really a westward-extending ridge of what is commonly known as Palomar Mountain.

The 20-mile-roundtrip hike to the crest and back on Wild Horse Trail and its extension, Crossley Trail, is obviously too far for casual hikers. Perhaps better (and very much encouraged if the air is transparently clear) is the shorter, steeper summit climb on Dripping Springs Trail — 13 miles roundtrip. Don't let this distance deter you; just climb as far as you like. The higher you go, the better the view. At 2 to 3 miles up, you're treated to a spectacular northern vista of Southern California's highest mountains — San Antonio (Old Baldy), San Gorgonio, and San Jacinto — each wearing a snowcap well into the spring season.

At 4.5 miles, the trail descends a little and you'll spot the white dome of the 200-inch Hale Telescope at Palomar Observatory gleaming on a ridge about 9 miles southeast. Many hikers turn back at this point. The pine- and oak-fringed summit ridge of Agua Tibia Mountain lies in view ahead — fair game for energetic day hikers and backpackers.

But Why the Eggs?

We must understand Duarte's symbols through our own dreams and intuitions.

REVIEW: JONATHAN SAVILLE

Dalva Duarte, whose paintings are currently being shown at Gallery La Jolla, is a highly accomplished realistic painter, showing us with precise detail the way the world really looks.

So her paintings might appear, at first glance. Her portraits of Caribbean black people in a Miami suburb exhibit, to a superlative degree, the stylistic traits of the long tradition of European realism (as exemplified, for instance, in the early Manet): solidity of form, naturalness of lighting, rich differentiation of the textures of flesh and clothing, expressive posture, a lively embodiment of character, and the strong personal presence of her subjects. How vividly we see and know the playful yet aloof black girl of Remember Africa! Duarte's still lifes show the same qualities. And yet....

And yet, this powerful realism is in the service of a sensibility that goes far beyond any literal portrayal of visual reality. The realistic elements of Duarte's pictures are transformed by a constructive imagination for which space, light, color, and compositional form are visionary instruments. The supremely realistic and characterful pilgrim of Fina au Parado ("I Will Go to Paradise") — with his staff, his shoulder-pack, his skullcap, and his confident, beatific smile — is overlaid with abstract straight lines and framelike rectangles, ambiguously disposed on the surface of the canvas. The beautifully shaped head has its own frame, which might be of thin wood, or might be mere bands of paint, or might be a comment by some spiritual power on the young man's total, idealized commitment to his distant heavenly goal.

In her extensive oil-on-paper series titled La Nature et le Temps ("Nature and Time"), Duarte's expressive manipulations of realistic forms are complemented by an enigmatic personal symbolism. In the second of the series, the elderly woman reveals her state of being in the calm, resigned expression of her gentle, time-worn face and the equally serene, submissive posture of her hands. The chair, with its arcaded back, is similarly solid and real, even possessing a personality of its own. But the space in which the figure and the object exist is a medium of emotional meaning, determined not by what the artist sees but by her intuitive understanding of the elderly woman's inner life.

The head and upper torso are enclosed in an oval frame and are presented as reflections in a mirror, while the rest of the body, apparently contiguous, seems actually to occupy a quite detached space. This space, along with the mirror's surface, is shallow almost to flatness, in an enclosed surface area illuminated by diffused, blurring light, while the chair at the right stands in a room defined by a curiously unnatural, deep perspective and the shadows of its legs indicate a point light source incompatible with the lighting of the picture's left half. Perhaps this is the chair the woman is sitting on, seen simultaneously from a different point of view: it is the material chair, in material space, that will be all that is left when her process of dematerialization into image and memory has reached its end.

The mirror, the chair, the honeycomb-glass wall at the rear, and the rose floating against the woman's dissolving form — all these have the character of symbols, suggestive of further, deepened, enlarged meanings. But symbols of what? In La Nature et le Temps XII, the chair reappears, with three eggs reposing on its seat. The room with its exaggerated 15th-century perspective and its reticulated window is there too. At the left, in a circular medallion that is at once solid and transparent, floats a pensive image of the artist's own face, seemingly in contemplation of the chair and its unexplained occupants. A straight ruler leans against the wall, fully surrounded by space, another straight line, with no spatial referent at all, strikes diagonally across the picture surface.

These are persistent symbols in Duarte's work. The ruler, in the same position and defined by the same shadow, leans against the wall in the painting Rafe, where it is accompanied by a cluster of lemons, and by a doubled, boxed image of the excited face of the artist's young son, placed like a pair of framed photographs on a cloth-covered table. Similar boxes enclose the halves of a yellow melon in one of Duarte's small still life paintings, where the rectangular compartments are formally related to the moulded, self-framed shape of the picture itself. Elsewhere, there are pears, gloves, light bulbs, pocket watches, playing cards, all rendered with meticulous realism, yet equably refusing to explain their presence.

Although born in Brazil and now living in America, Duarte came to her artistic maturity in France and has exhibited frequently there. In typical Cartesian fashion, a French critic has attempted to give explicit definitions to the artist's symbols: the eggs are the preciousness of life, the roses are a symbol of age, the pears are bodily corruption, the boxes represent the compartmentalizing of character, and so forth. Such definitions suggest possible meanings, but it would be wrong to see Duarte's art as allegorical in this fashion, as though her paintings belonged to the late Middle Ages. Fifteenth-century Flemish pictures, with their peacocks ("resurrection"), water basins ("purity"), and billowing bed-hangings ("pregnancy"), have profoundly stimulated Duarte's artistic imagination, as well as influencing her sense of form. But her symbolism is of the 19th-century variety, suggestive, ambiguous, polyvalent, evoking vague reveries and dreamlike chains of association, rather than pointing directly and exclusively to doctrines and ideas. They belong to her personal experience, her own memories, the secrets of her dreams. We must understand them not by means of a mechanical table of equivalences, but through our own dreams and intuitions.

ART

In some of Duarte's most recent works, her realistic technique reaches an apogee of illusionism. The soft edges, earth colors, and warm, harmonious illumination are replaced by sharp contours, strong contrasts, dark backgrounds, intense highlights, and dramatic lighting and modeling so intense that parts of these pictures verge on trompe l'oeil. Such is the case in Ler vivid, joyous depiction of her two children (with the extreme relation of the draped bedclothes and the polished floorboards), and her exquisite still life of ballet slippers, so solid and so texturally real that you feel you could take physical hold of them. The children's portrait is virtually in the style of John Singer Sargent! But, even here, the artist's visionary imagination and formal authority are at work: in the sharp lime that truncates the little girl's right arm and throws doubt on the realistic nature of the space surrounding her, or in the fine vertical lines that reinforce the visual movement of the slippers, yet cannot be identified as laces or threads or wall edges or anything at all in the realistic world Duarte otherwise so convincingly evokes.

Dalva Duarte is indeed a realist. But her deeper affinities are not with the French, British, and American realists whose pictures hers so closely resemble, but with the magic realism of her native Latin America, with its debt to European symbolism and surrealism and to native visionary experiences. It is in her mastery of both the visible world and the world of dreams — and of the fusion of the two — that her great attractiveness as an artist consists. ■

ART MUSEUMS

California Center for the Arts Museum, the rebirth of Russian art after decades of repression is captured in an exhibition entitled "New Russian Art: Paintings from the Christian Kenser Collection." The 45 paintings in the collection represent three generations of Russian painting, tracing the vanguard's "search for identity in a post-Soviet Russia." The 33 artists included were decided upon by Kenser and curator Ion Burra after research trips to Moscow and St. Petersburg. See this show through Sunday, June 22.

Find the center at 340 North Escondido Boulevard (at Valley Parkway), in Escondido: 738-4120.

Mingei International Museum of Folk Art, man's oldest and smallest portable art form — the bead — is highlighted in "The Beaded Universe — Strands of Culture." The exhibition offers an awareness of the beauty of beads and the diversity of materials and techniques in beadwork. (Objects in the exhibit include a beaded globe made by a family of Huichols (from Jalisco, Mexico), stone and metal (from Japan, European purses, and an African Ndebele woman's wedding costume. See these beads through mid-October.

The concurrent exhibit, "Yurts — A Central Asian Nomad's Hearth and Home," focuses on the nomadic folk art traditions of the Kyrgyz, said to be one of the world's most ancient peoples. The centerpiece of the exhibition is a Kyrgyz yurt, a round, domed, tent-like dwelling. The designers and makers of this structure, Mekenbek Osmonaliyev and his family, journeyed to San Diego to erect the structure. The display also includes a collection of rare Kyrgyz rug weavers and Mongolian paper cuts illustrating folk tales of Central Asia. View this show through Sunday, July 6.

The Mingei is located on the square with the San Diego Museum of Art and the Timken Museum of Art. For additional information, call 239-0093.

Museum of Contemporary Art, La Jolla, celebrating the inaugural year of the renovated museum, "Primarily Paint" features some 60 paintings, works on paper, and polychrome sculptures from MCA's permanent collection. A number of works in the show have not been shown previously, or have been shown only rarely, ranging from Al Held's Untitled (1963) to Philip Guston's Settler (1977). This exhibit concludes on Wednesday, May 7.

During January, New York artist Gary Simmons — best known for his large scale "erasure" drawings executed in white chalk on dark-painted panels or walls and then smudged — curated Cazadero Clutch out the finished piece through Wednesday, May 7.

Find the museum at 700 Prospect Street, in La Jolla: 454-3541.

Museum of Contemporary Art, Downtown, more than 100 works of art have been added to the MCA's collection in the past four years, and many of them are on view for the first time in "New Additions to the Collection." Look for pieces by Gabriel Orozco, John Baldessari, and Carrie Mae Weems, along with works by regional artists Wick Alexander, David Bate, Johnson Collection, Stephen Curry, Mathieu Gregoire, Lyle Ashton Harris, and Jean Lowe. View this exhibition through Wednesday, March 26.

Find the museum at 1001 Kettner Boulevard (at Broadway), directly across from the Santa Fe Railroad Depot, adjacent to the America Plaza trolley transfer station, downtown. 234-1001.

Museum of Photographic Arts, discovery, loss, and the passage of time are defining themes in the two current exhibitions. Joan Myers' "Whispered Glances: Japanese American Detention Camps, 50 Years Later" and "Still Rooms and Excavations," a photographic installation by Richard Barnes revisit artifacts of the past. The 44 platinum-palladium photographs by Myers are accompanied by accounts from people who were confined in the camps, while Barnes's images pose questions about the functions of museums as contemporary society.

See both shows through Sunday, April 13. The museum is located in the Casa de Balboa in Balboa Park: 238-7559.

San Diego Museum of Art, the "Artist's Guild Juried Exhibition," the annual exhibit sponsored by the museum's Artist's Guild committee, promises works of art in all media by area artists. The juror was local artist Lynn Shaette. See the show through Sunday, March 16.

The museum's permanent collection includes Italian Renaissance paintings, Spanish old masters paintings, American art, 19th-Century European paintings and sculpture, the Weisman Gallery of Contemporary California Art, and the Interactive Multimedia Art Gallery Explorer (IMAGE). Find the museum in Balboa Park: 232-7931.

Timken Museum of Art, the museum's permanent collection includes European masters, 19th-century American paintings, and Russian icons. Find the museum in Balboa Park, and by calling 239-5548.

What If Things Don't End?

This isn't a world of either/or; it's either and or.

REVIEW
JEFF SMITH

In the past, when a local actor joined Actor's Equity it meant the kiss of death. Most San Diego theaters are non-Equity, and the union forbade professional actors from working in nonunion shows. Actors either had to leave town, change their names (and risk serious union reprisals if caught), or "showcase" themselves, investing up to $2000 to appear in nonunion productions without penalty.

Vantage Theatre's The Importance of Being Earnest: The Musical is the first local production operating under a change in Equity bylaws: the new Small Theatre's Code. For the next year, on a try-out basis, six nonunion San Diego theaters can cast Equity actors with impunity.

Now Equity actors can practice their craft at home — albeit at times for free — and hope that agents and casting directors will see their work. And as a Vantage Theatre program note says, "For audiences, lower ticket prices to see Equity talent onstage is always a plus."

It's startling. Yo a see a modest, low-budget set, turn-of-the-century interiors and large curtains masking blank areas of the stage. You see the unsung heroism of costume designers: clothes that look expensive but aren't, with their occasional tight or loose fit. Given these non-Equity visual clues, you expect a semi-pro, semi-amateurish melange of voices, some trained, some straining.

Instead, Eileen Bowman illumines the house with her clear soprano. Or she joins Danielle Forsgren in "The Tea Party," and their limpid voices dance a victory promenade above the ledger lines. If you prefer tubas and trombones to french horns, Vantage offers Ed Badrak's assured baritone and Duane Daniels' oceanic bass. The show's other five singers also merit the spotlight when it shines on them.

First staged in 1895, Earnest gives two-faced Victorian hypocrisy a local habitation and a name. Jack Worthing and Algernon Moncrieff practice "Bunburying." They are one person in the city, another in the country. This frees them from responsibility, until they meet Gwendolyn and Cecily, who want a man with a "safe" name, Ernest, that inspires "absolute confidence."

You'd think the combination of what critic John Lahr called the "most perfect of modern comedies" with the quality of voices at Vantage would make for an inspired mix. But even though many of their lyrics come from the play, the songs lull the pace and feel like intruders. So does hammy acting. The combined result is an irksome grafting of incompatible styles: Oscar Wilde's stately, slanderous prose and unsubtle, attention-grabbing shtick.

The actors feel compelled to do something all the time. They'll mug a little or make an exit more flourishing than expected. They'll heat up verbal exchanges and upstage Wilde's punchlines with sight gags. This is "notice me" acting, with almost everyone playing for their curtain call.

What happened to Wilde's urbanity, his sophisticated dalliance with language and the tarnished values of his era? The breezy, lightweight music, antsy acting, and unnecessary revisions to the book subsume the original into forced comedy. Whether, this is by directorial choice or because the actors feel the urge for tricks isn't clear. It is clear, however, that the producers of The Importance of Being Earnest: The Musical are right to label it a "work in progress."

Len Jenkins's ponderous and playful new drama, Like I Say, serves as an antidote to ruminations about endings, cessations, and millennial expectations. It replaces ideas of closure with a notion at least as grim: What if things don't end?

Playing through this weekend at UCSD, Like I Say begins where it concludes. Isaiah, a burned-out writer, wants to tell the history of the Hotel Splendide. He fixes instead on cigarette smoke curling up from a green ashtray. In the end, the play returns to this "now." The cigarette still smolders in the ashtray, and Isaiah repeats the opening lines and says, "You wait here, and I'll return."

So rundown it qualifies as a ruin, the Hotel Splendide's a multi-level honeycomb of dank rooms. According to Rose, Isaiah's caretaker, "Zombie and his zombies" hang out here by the sea. Rose brought Isaiah to the hotel to recuperate. He's been a wreck since his wife died in an accident three years ago. They meet Harold Schwarzberg, an artist who lost the right side of his face to fire. Schwarzberg's painting The American Dance of Death on the walls. In various panels he depicts the skeleton of death interrupting a wedding, a ballerina's performance, a politician waving in a parade.

Harold's proud of his work. "Say you go see the Mona Lisa," he boasts. "Five bucks, and she's empty-ic. Here you get great art, and a message." When we first meet him, Schwarzberg's drilling a rose tattoo on Rose's left shoulder blade. The "rose tattoo" echoes Tennessee Williams. As does the Hotel Splendide, which recalls Williams's eerie netherscape, Camino Real. But Like I Say is a whole echo-chamber: repeated songs (like "Big Rock Candy Mountain"), references to culture, and famous quotations populate the play. Yet into an atmosphere as bleak as Williams, the playwright plunks a harebrained, heartening tale.

Joseph Iskowitz, coconut buyer for the Universal Bake Shoppe (pronounced "shop-ee"), has more lives than a cat. When his boss opens a new line, the "Coconut Dee-Lite Cookie," he sends Joe to Germany, because, he says, they have the finest desiccated coconut flakes. But Joe's never been to Europe. He doesn't even "know the language." Nonetheless, he bounces out the door in a blue serge suit and goes on a Homeric odyssey. But where Odysseus was wily, Joe's, well, "naive."

He becomes "Coconut Joe from Kokomo" and "Mister U.S.A." He's locked in the hold of a ship for 47 days. He survives on rotting coconuts in 125 degree heat. He meets international industrialists, who could live forever — one's 148 years old — as long as the blue fluids of lemur monkeys don't run out. Joe falls for a female pirate and becomes a healer at the end of the world (if such a place exists).

Like the radio serials of the '40s and '50s, Joe hops from one cliffhanging episode to another, with certain death opening to new beginnings. The world of the hotel, by contrast, is static (which makes for a long first act in this three-hour drama). Some call it hell or "the dark end of the street." But both worlds, it turns out, don't permit easy classification.

Directed by Robert Egan, the UCSD production serves Jenkin's world premiere ably. Just as the play deconstructs the definite, the stage becomes the site for multiple atmospheres — bright sun and lurking shadow; vitality amid torpor. This isn't a world of either/or; it's either and or. One might even question which world is the fiction: Coconut Joe's or the guests at the Hotel Splendide? ■

Beau Jest
In less than a week after opening, the North Coast Repertory extended the run of Beau Jest. With good reason. The production's one of NCRT's best in some time, and James Sherman's comedy generates laughter at will. Sarah Goldman, "a nice Jewish girl who's not getting any younger," loves Chris, or thinks she does. But he's a gentile, and she's certain her parents'll hate him. So she hires an actor named Bob, from the Heaven Sent Escort Agency, to be a stand-in beau. But then she falls for Bob, who's also a gentile. What to do, hire another actor? Directed by Steve Gallion, with a keen eye and ear for the pulse of the play, the NCRT production could run way past its new endpoint. Dan Gruber's performance as Bob is a gem. Bob confronts the actor's nightmare — a role for which there's no script; he fumbles and yet shines. So does Gruber, with one of San Diego's best efforts in 1997. Natasha Nikolas, though she could temper some histrionics, matches Gruber's comic timing, and their tandem work is a delight. As is Sue Kaye's Miriam. Sarah's mother punctuates the evening with deadpan remarks and fills the theater with hilarity. The supporting cast has nary a slouch, and the design work — especially Judy Watson's costumes and Marty Burnett's vividly detailed set — should rank high in the NCRT's pantheon of quality work.

Forever Plaid
They're baaack. They still dare to be square. And if tickle sales are an indication, the four harmonizers in search of plaid sport coats will be at the Theatre in Old Town for a long, long time. Joseph Campbell urged everyone to "follow your bliss." Even if the tight harmonies of '50s "guy groups" aren't your particular bliss (I needed a quick fix of Otis and Hendrix after hearing them), you've got to admit the Plaids follow theirs with verve. They croon in lieu of having a life, but put life into the greatest hits of Your Hit Parade (which crowned the most popular songs of the '50s until Elvis drove it off the airwaves). Stuart Ross, who conceived, directed, and choreographed the original New York version, directed the Old Town production with the aim of endearing everything to everyone. The four performers — Late Daignault, Steve Gunderson, Rick Meads, and Bobby Smith — sing as well as any collection of Plaids (minor gripe: the opening night was crisp but made no distinction between where the rehearsed songs left off and the "spontaneous" sections began; everything felt rehearsed by the numbers). Terry O'Donnell plays an indefatigable piano and permits himself the occasional piece of always funny business. The set, which is either the Theatre in Old Town or a purgatory where the Plaids got stuck, is awfully drab for such a perky show, though Jane Reisman's savvy lighting knows when to tweak the brighteners.
Worth a try.
THEATRE IN OLD TOWN, THROUGH MAY 11; TUESDAY THROUGH FRIDAY AT 8:00 P.M. SATURDAY AT 5:00 P.M. AND 8:00 P.M. SUNDAY AT 3:00 P.M. AND 7:00 P.M.

42nd Street
Say it ain't so! Peggy Sawyer's just a show biz beginner. Sure, she can chirp like a bird and hoof with the best of 'em. But can she carry a show? Thirty-six hours from now she opens cold on Broadway. She must learn 25 pages of script, 6 songs, and 10 dance routines by 8:30 tomorrow night. Can she do it? Sure she can, if she's mega-talented Tracy Venner Warren at the Welk Resort Theatre. It also helps that director Jon Engstrom has staged 42nd Street internationally. He treats the musical as an extended production number. The vitality never flags, even when the band takes five. Plus, all the leads are solid. Jeffrey Rockwell (the stern of mien Julian Marsh), Nancy Sinclair, Eric Gunhus, Tracy Ray, Brenda Cox. They can't wait to "Shuffle Off to Buffalo" or get "In the Money." The production is particularly adept at 42nd Street's audacity. The musical thrives on show business clichés (with no irony hearsal, for example, 18 tap shoes click into routines so ornate as Busby Berkeley's). Another plus: Mike Buckley's scenic designs — minimal but always effective props — serve the show and recommend he make many a return engagement to the Welk. The net result: one of the best shows the Welk Resort Theatre's done in some time.
Worth a try.
WELK RESORT THEATRE, THROUGH MARCH 22; TUESDAY, AND THURSDAY THROUGH SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M. MATINEE TUESDAY THROUGH THURSDAY, AND SUNDAY AT 1:45 P.M.

Free Will and Wanton Lust
Sledgehammer Theatre reprises its popular production of Nicky Silver's comedy-drama. "It's just your usual, gentle, sensitive Nicky Silver fare," said Brian Bevell, who directed the show. Usual Silver fare? In his plays thus far, Silver's written about cannibalism, incest, a consummated Oedipal partnership, and every other interpersonal no-no Freud catalogued in Totem and Taboo. In Free Will (1990), for every liberation there's an equal and opposite repression. You get the sense that Silver loves all his characters, wants the best for each one. It's just that they keep getting in each other's way. Like the manic-depressive Claire, who just discovered sex, and her dour daughter Amy, who tells her mother "you only call me 'dear' when you can't remember my name." Act one's as funny as late 20th century comedy gets. Act two changes key and pace, as Claire and later her son Philip make private confessions in public. The physical inactivity of the second act requires an adjustment from an audience spoiled by the barbs of the first, but it's worth the effort. [note:Sledgehammer's Ethan Feerst restaged this version and made four cast changes from the original].
Worth a try.

The Mystery of Edwin Drood
A play within a musical within an unfinished novel. Charles Dickens didn't live to complete his final book in 1870. He left suspects, but no clues to the murderer, or even if a crime took place. Drood just disappears one dark — albeit stormy — eve. Rupert Holmes's musical lets the audience vote for the villain. Along with the mystery Drood doubles as a turn-of-the-century English music hall entertainment, and the cast plays a Dickens character and a performer. They break into song, then story. This shifting creates a schizophrenic scene: entertainments upstage the story (and kills suspense). But the story's real slight, so one appreciates the diversions. The Lamb's Players Theatre tackles Drood's multi-layerings with energy and labor. The cast relishes the melodramatic style (wide emotions, wrist to forehead angst). But the show never quite finds a comfortable rhythm. It moves in lurches and feels longer than it should. Surprisingly for Lamb's, whose hallmark is quality ensemble work, individual efforts rise above the group. Deborah Gilmour Smyth and Kerry Meads shine when in the spotlight. Paul Eggington's just right as John Jasper (is he the villain or wrongly accused?). And Lamb's newcomer Mary Miller makes a memorable debut as Droud. Her work has an ease the others could emulate. Mike Buckley's footlit set replicates a music hall effectively, as do Veronica Murphy's excellent costumes. (Note: due to popular demand, Lamb's extended the run of Drood.)
LAMB'S PLAYERS THEATRE, THROUGH MARCH 23; THURSDAY AT 7:30 P.M. FRIDAY AND SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M. MATINEE SATURDAY AT 4:30 P.M. AND SUNDAY AT 2:00 P.M.

Sexual Perversity in Chicago
THE SHOW THAT WOULD NOT DIE. The Fritz Theater has re-revived its immensely popular production of David Mamet's expose of the singles scene for the fourth — fifth? — time. The "sexual perversity" in the title isn't what you think. It's about the ways veterans of the scene erect barriers to prevent them from intimacy. Danny and Deborah are headed toward love. His friend Bernie and her roommate Joan, however, want to prevent it. Between Bernie's hatred of women, and Joan's of men, optimism hasn't a prayer. In the hour-long comedy-drama, they function like evil angels at the ears of Danny and Deborah. In a series of quick, often hilariously funny scenes, Mamet traces the slow rise and precipitous fall of Danny and Deborah's relationship. The Fritz Theater's production, thanks to some fine work by director Duane Daniels, moves at a briskly Mamettian clip. The modest set makes up in instantaneous scene changes what it lacks in detail. The latter is supplied by Allen Ogden's costumes and Marty Eldridge's sound design, part of which is mid-'70s disco music that catches the period (Chicago, 1976) and causes cringes of musical memories at the same time. The acting is solid and often most eloquent when no one speaks. During these moments we see how two very angry single soloists — and this is one angry play: in the characters and Mamet's anger at the condition — destroy something that might have turned out just fine.
Worth a try.

THE INSIDE TRACK

"I was just out in the parking lot, and I probably hit about 20 [cars with fliers for the Showcase Theatre's Helmet show]," says an individual who requested anonymity. He was flliering cars in the Office Depot parking lot, behind Bay Park's SOMA.

"A [SOMA] security guard," says the source, "was all, 'What do you got there?' Some fliers.' 'Give me one of those.' I handed him one.... He said it wasn't cool to flier there for another club. It was just so obvious they were upset that it was Showcase, because he [said to another guard], 'I told you they got the Helmet show.' This is a show that I'm sure they wanted.... [The security guard] sitting at the [backstage] gate was, like, 'If you don't leave and stop passing those out, I'm going to have to take them from you.' Another [security guard] was, like, 'Well, you're going to have to go.' The two of them and one other guy — the really big guy with a ponytail — made me go to my car.... One of the guys walked me to my car and said, 'I just got to make sure you get out of here.' "

The person fliering says he didn't feel physically threatened but saw no point in arguing.

"There is no fliering of any kind allowed on any private parking lots around SOMA because we have permissive use from Office Depot," explains Len Paul. "I have to pay for insurance and I have to maintain their lot. A couple of their concerns were things like graffiti and paper. Our agreement with them was that we would not allow any fliering of any kind so that we would diminate the potential for trash. Wherever there's public parking we don't stop people from fliering."

Does Len Paul believe the Showcase Theatre's presence has any impact on the all-ages market?

"Of course it does," he says. "We'll deal with competition of any type, shape, or form, but I find it inappropriate — especially with a place like Showcase that publicly comes out and states that it's not their intention to compete with SOMA and then shows up in our backyard to distribute fliers for shows that compete with us. Let's get real here, we're not down passing out fliers in their back yard."

EVERYBODY WANTED HELMET

"Donation $5." The label, taped to a goldfish bowl at the Intersection Gallery/Thomas Paine Coffeehouse in University Heights, suggested I could gain free admission to see reggae bands Rainbow Warriors and Zionis. I had $10 for the two of us.

"Is that five dollars each?" I asked the gray-haired man at the door. He nodded up and down. "Is it okay if I donate eight dollars — four dollars each?" I wanted to get us some coffee. He shook his head from side to side. I dropped my ten dollar "donation" into the bowl. Though five dollars is a modest price to see professional reggae (endangered) genre that it is in San Diego), I felt railroaded. Why not call it a "price" or "cover charge"?

"If they say it's a donation but you couldn't get in without giving that donation, that really is a cover charge," says Rick Bittner, an SDPD vice detective. Bittner says a $55 commercial recreation assemblage permit is required if public venues (that don't serve alcohol) care to charge an entry fee. Whether or not the Intersection Gallery has such a permit was indeterminable at press time.

A gallery employee says when Intersection people work the door, donations are voluntary, that they never turn people away. The employee surmises that it was band personnel taking the money that night, not an unusual occurrence. The employee also says management needs to control the way money is accepted at the door.

A lot has and hasn't been happening for the Shambles. The five-year-old band's discography boasts more than 45 releases. Since September, the Shambles have released two full-length albums, three singles, and have been on nine compilations. Yet the band realizes they are destined to keep playing small local gigs as an opening act.

"For the amount of work that I have to do to get a show here on a Tuesday night, I might as well put the same effort into doing something up in LA where we're actually going to draw [a crowd]," says Shambles front man Bart Mendoza.

The Shambles have played and released music in Spain, Japan, England, and Sweden. Of the band's most recent releases, seven of nine have been on foreign labels. Of those releases, six have been tribute compilations to bands such as the Who, the Undertones, the Jam, and Spain's Los Brincos. Tracks on Beatles and Cardigans tribute CDs are on the way.

"[Foreign labels] are actively looking to put stuff out," says Mendoza, who has helped local artists (Broken Dial Radio, Cosmo, Ray Brandes, and Milan of Noodle) get tracks on Spanish releases. "I keep telling people, 'If you've got a tape sitting around the house, send it out. It will happen.' There's a market for it. Power pop, mod, 60s rock, there's a niche market for it. Same thing with folk, roots rock, or whatever."

BART MENDOZA KNOWS WHERE TO GO FOR APPRECIATION

Mendoza says many labels pay royalties on the first pressing in advance. Radio airplay, which also pays royalties, sometimes comes in the form of an eight-cent check. Royalty checks for smaller acts in the U.S. are not common. The downside is that taxes are deducted immediately from the country of origin, then are taxed for the full amount by the U.S. government.

"The first check I got, I looked at the stub and saw it was in the hundreds and thought, 'Whoa, this is great,' then the actual check was for $27," says Mendoza.

Local disc review: Peggy Minafee, I Wish You Love, Devoiner, Records.

It's always nice to hear new and bearable readings of "Moody's Mood" and "Good Morning, Heartache," but how often do you get a WOMAN singing "Nessun Dorma" from Puccini's Turandot? Benjamino Gigli, Giovanni Martinelli, Giacomo Lauri-Volpi, and Jussi Bjorling have all recorded hotcha blowouts of this 1920's showstopper, not to mention each of the Three goddam Tenors more than once each (Caruso never cut it 'cause he died before it opened), but opera recital protocol tends to keep sopranos off the case.

Oh wait a sec, Peggy isn't singing, it's the piano guy....no big deal (it pays to listen when you review).

My Country Has Been Through a Lot of Sad Stories

"Just think, 25 years ago we were shooting these people's parents."

REVIEW
JOHN BRIZZOLARA

Cohants of "Tuấn Anh! Tuấn Anh!" fill the dance floor. "Tuấn Anh! You turn me on!" "Well, you turn me on too," answers the throaty, androgynous, and international pop star.

The dance floor cries come from Vietnamese women. They dance and squirm in childlike parodies of Parisian sensuality and sophistication. Some smoke cigarettes as they dance. Many of them are dancing with other women because their boyfriends are sitting at tables drinking beer, also smoking incessantly. A man in the front row wearing glasses shouts with contempt at the Vietnamese performer. "You look like girl!"

Tu'ấn Anh may look like a woman, but one with a Magic Marker-thin mustache, like my aunt Rose. Watching the Vietnamese singer strut the stage with black leather pants, high heels, pompadoured shoulder-length hair, painted, arched eyebrows, lipstick, and silver starburst earrings, an Asian Little Richard or Wayne Newton comes to mind. The refugee singer-songwriter's lyrics are sung in Chinese, French, some Spanish, and Vietnamese. I can't understand a thing he's singing until he does Tom Jones's "I Who Have Nothing" in English.

This scene takes place in the DreamCatcher Showroom at Viejas Casino. It is the monthly Vietnamese Night, a promotional and successful gimmick to lure the sizable Vietnamese population (and other Asian groups) to the gambling tables and the lounge's bar. Possibly 350 to 375 people fill the DreamCatcher. The women drink a lot of Cokes or rum and Cokes or bourbon and Cokes, and the men mostly drink beer. A middle-aged Anglo guy turns to me at the bar and says, "Just think, 25 years ago we were shooting these people's parents."

"These people" are of a wide range of ages. It is difficult for me to gauge, even the 40-year-olds look to be in their early 20s. The ones in their early 20s look 14. This may be a racist cliche but seems more like a compliment to me. Another seeming generalization is not: some version of black and white is worn by both men and women in the lounge and/or casino — white shirts or blouses, black pants or skirts, vests or jackets. Another possible cliche is uttered not by me but by Bob Bates (an entertainment manager) and Tom Tran (the shift supervisor), and that is, "Orientals are big gamblers."

Tran, a middle-aged Vietnamese, came up with the idea of Vietnamese Night.

"Vietnamese music," says Tran, "can be very sad. I try to get entertainers (who perform) more disco, more happy, (who) make everybody happy like Tuấn Anh."

The band behind tonight's performer and another singer (who will go on later, named Hai Phong) is Trung Nghia, the name of the band leader. Trung Nghia is the house band for these monthly shows, backing whatever artist is booked.

Tran goes on to explain where the bulk of the clientele for these evenings is drawn from. "They come from East San Diego, mostly," he says. "They have shops along El Cajon Boulevard. Restaurants, hair salons, nail salons. Some come from as far as Escondido."

"Americans sing very well, don't get me wrong, but some singers just talk with a beat and it still sells."

Entertainment room director Don Davis usher me backstage to meet Tuấn Anh between sets. The singer is larger, bigger-boned than I had expected. He is taller because he wears a pair of ivory and gold high platform-heeled disco shoes. His pants are baggy white silk and his collarless shirt is a blinding blue-sequined job with trumpet sleeves. He hands me his recent CD, and I notice that the only English on the liner notes is "Fashion: CHRISTIAN DIOR." He sees me eyeing the phrase and says, "I designed this." He gestures toward his clothes. "I design a lot of my own wardrobe."

"Uh, no offense," I ask discreetly, genteelly, with the delicateness that is indicated by his presence, "are you gay, or what?"

He laughs. He sounds like Eve Arden. "I'm straight."

"None of my business, just asking."

Tuấn Anh has just returned from performing in Australia. I apologize for my ignorance and ask him if he is famous. He answers with a lift of his chin. "I am very famous in my community." He says he was born in Vietnam but will not say when. Age is a touchy issue. He could be 25 or 40. "I escaped from my country when I was a young boy. I've been through a lot of dangerous things where if I had been caught I would have been killed. I came to Thailand by boat and, through the processing of the U.S. government, I was approved as a legal citizen of this country."

Tuấn Anh has been performing for 20 years. His career began in the United States. He describes his influences, Paul Anka-like as, "No one. I just did it my way." He writes most of his own material.

"It," I suggest, "I were to talk to some of my Vietnamese friends here in San Diego [my dry cleaner and a waiter on University Avenue], would they know of you?"

Again with a lift of the chin, "Of course. I perform all around the world." When asked about the nature of Vietnamese pop-music culture, Tuấn Anh also mentions sadness as a recurring theme. "This," he says, "is because, based on my knowledge, my country has been through a lot of sad stories. A lot of suffering."

The song titles on the CD Tuấn Anh 7, which depicts the singer on the cover holding a glass of wine, wearing a tuxedo, leaning against a flower arrangement, are, for example, "Thuc Ay Co Em," which means "They Were You, Then," and "Tinh Say," which means "A Drunk Guy", and "Cuoi Tinh Da Mất," or "The Love That Lost." Then there is "The Love Story Never Ending," "Cho Ngoài Tình Lo", and "The Sadness That Never Forgets," "Nỗi Sầu Chưa Ngủ." The album title (other than 7) is Ruira Dung Tinh Cay, which means, roughly, "The Liquor Is So Bitter And Love Is So Horrible." I couldn't wait to get some friends together, maybe a keg, put a lamp shade on my head, and get down with this one.

"These records sell well," says Tuấn Anh. "I own my own record and distribution company. I live in Huntington Beach — when I am there. I am on the road most of the time." At this point, the singer Hai Phong enters the brightly lit dressing room. He is diminutive, elegant, delicate without being effeminate. He wears a kind of Nehru jacket with gold piping.

"Hai Phong?" I ask. "I like the harbor."

"No," he tries to explain, "it is pronounced this way: Hai Phong. The harbor is pronounced this way: Hai Phong." I can find no distinction between the two pronunciations. Hai Phong, he tells me, means "Ocean Wind."

"I went on earlier," says Hai Phong. "And I will go on later tonight." When asked about influences in Vietnamese pop, he cites, "The French, you know. A lot of ballrooms music, cha-cha, tango. Before the French invasion, though, the music was more cultural, non-dance music. People listened more to the voice than the music. Almost [east] Indian, you know? Now, after the French invasion we started using their instruments, their sensibilities, the romanticism. Our language is now influenced by the French, our alphabet is almost French."

Hai Phong says he is 20 years old and has been in the U.S. most of his life. "I chose to go with Vietnamese music [he pronounces "Vietnamese" as "Vitnamese"] instead of American music for a couple of reasons. Vietnamese music has a lot of feeling, it's very deep. People listen to the voice rather than the music. In American music too much of the instrumental is relied upon. Americans sing very well, don't get me wrong, but some singers just talk with a beat and it still sells. I use my voice to express sadness or happiness."

"This world sadness keeps coming up." I turn to both Tuấn Anh and Hai Phong. "Does this sadness have anything to do with the war in the '50s, '60s, and '70s?"

"Oh yes," they both agree. Hai Phong says, "There are songs, one that I will sing later, a twist song."

"A twist song?" I interrupt and start doing a Chubby Checker. "You mean like this?"

"Yes. With the beat of a twist dance. But it is about the Vietnamese soldier. This song was written to make Vietnamese soldiers more willing to fight. It talks about how a Vietnamese soldier is very romantic and poor in money but rich in love. In English, the title would be 'Love of a Soldier' or 'Soldier Love.' It expresses, in a happy sort of way, why a soldier is willing to go through it all to return to his lover or his wife."

It is time for Tuấn Anh to go on again, and he excuses himself. He takes the stage to resounding girlish cries. He opens with an apparently well recognized song, Upbeat, '60s cornball bubblegum, compared to some of the songs on his CD; songs for which you do not need to know the language to feel its effect on the back of your neck or in the pit of your stomach. The song is in English and the chorus is, "Hey, hey, hey, what's goin' on?" For the casino or the crowd or for some existential relief and license to silliness, Tuấn Anh strains for the trivial, the mindless, or some recollection of innocence. ■

BLO NOTE

By William Crain

Go to a rockabilly show, and you'll see men with slicked-back hair swing-dancing with women in ponytails and hoop skirts. Go to a Phish show and you'll see 18-year-olds who look like they stepped out of a 1969 photograph. Go to Goth night at your favorite dance club and, looking at the patrons, you'll swear you're at a 1983 Sisters of Mercy show. Save your flannel shirts, because your nieces and nephews will rinse them when the neo-grunge scene takes off in 2007.

Those of us, who brought the whole notion that punk rock was a revolutionary force — out to transform society or die trying — have a little trouble accepting that punk is now just another one of these rock and roll subcultural lifestyle options. And, even stranger, it's as retro as any of them. Today's teenage punkers model themselves after a scene that is as ancient to them as rockabilly was to first-generation punks. The critic Johnny Angel once looked at Rancid's mohawks and bandage pants and labeled them "the punk Sha Na Na." New York's D Generation, who helped launch the glam-punk club Coney Island High, probably deserve the derisive tag of nostalgia act even more than the Berkeley boys, but to say so is not fair to either band. D Generation may never sell as many records as Green Day or the Offspring, but they do punk rock right. Nostalgia is a way of reinventing the past, but punk rock, when it's done right, encourages people to change their lives for the future.

Pretty and Phenomenon open.

D GENERATION, Brick By Brick, Tuesday, (March 18, 8 p.m. 279-6403 or 220-0497. $7.

ON NOTE

By Gina Arnold

While I was in England last summer, there was a brief media-fed mania for a band that came from Wales. (I can't remember who they were and they've already disappeared.) The Manic Street Preachers (still huge in Britain, despite the presumed death of their guitarist, Richey Edwards) are Welsh. So, too, are the 60 Ft. Dolls, leaders of this unheralded school of rock.

Readers of Evelyn Waugh's novel Decline and Fall will recall that the English like to make fun of the Welsh. They consider them dirty and mean and stupid. Although that's a racist stereotype that has been proven wrong (both Richard Burton and Tom Jones were born in Wales), the 60 Ft. Dolls seem to be out to aggravate the accusation. Their music is an uninspired and uninspiring amalgam of glam and hard rock — AC/DC meets Free, but not as joyous or imaginative as either, and that's saying something. I like to think of the Dolls in Solana Beach, however; maybe it will mellow them out and make them less mean — though I doubt it.

60 FT. DOLLS, Daily Up Tavern, Thursday, March 13, 9 p.m. 481-9022 or 220-0407. $7.

Bandjacket and Nickelbag headline.

ON NOTE

By Richard Meltzer

Poets by the truckload have been known to attend Hanson Brothers shows: their lyrics, "attitude," and all-round musical integrity inspire ponies. Last time they appeared here, I found this nifty pair o' stanzas scribbled on the back of a Portland Trailblazers program (distance is no obstacle for serious verse folks wherever and wherever the Hansons do their thing):

if i only had to wash
the upper half or lower half of my body
i would take more showers
(i bet you didn't know i only take one
every other day)
That is one fine pome. (Wish I could write that good.) Hopefully the verse brigade will be back in force this week at the Casbah. I'll let you know what I find.

The Roughsters, Kasoos, and the Furious IV open.

(To hear a sample of the Hanson Brothers, call 233-9797, wait for the prompt, then punch in ext. 4206.)

MOVIE LISTINGS

All reviews are by Duncan Shepherd. Priorities are indicated by one to five stars and antipathies by the black spot. Unrated movies are for now unreviewed.

Absolute Power — After The Bridges of Madison County, after A Perfect World, after Unforgiven, Clint Eastwood the director opts to relax a little. But not right off the bat. The first half hour or so (of a characteristically unhurried two hours) is at focused and concentrated an opening stretch as anything this side of Jean-Pierre Melville's Le Samouraï: a master burglar (Eastwood himself) interrupted in mid-caper by ills it lovers, sexual sadism, homicide, and a cover-up involving the President of the United States. Thereafter, the movie submerges itself inch by inch into a pot-boiler sensibility, and it gets sillier as it goes. Even in a state of relaxation, however, even in a state of silliness, Eastwood in his mature phase has a lot to offer to anyone who truly believes that movies are a visual medium — music for the eyes — and who values them in and of themselves, not just for what they have to "say." (The entire movie will be beautifully quiet, with an ear cocked to the muted percussion of keys and locks, cups and saucers, pencils and paper, footfalls, doors, the instruments at hand: music of a more literal sort.) The top-grade cast, not heavily taxed, includes Laura Linney, Gene Hackman, Judy Davis, Scott Glenn, Dennis Haysbert, Ed Harris, and E.G. Marshall. 1997.

Beverly Hills Ninja — A shipwrecked foundling raised by ninjas grows up to be tubby Chris Farley. Whence commences a steady barrage of clumsy-loud-stupid jokes: jokes, that is, about clumsiness, loudness, and stupidity, clumsily, loudly, stupidly told. With Nicollette Sheridan, Chris Rock; directed by Dennis Dugan. 1997.

City of Industry — Basic, bare-bones crime film about a double-crossed jewel that with a score to settle ("I'm my own police"). John Irvin's no-nonsense direction is a little short of style (the credits sequence — grainy black and white imagery of the snaky lines of L.A. freeways — raises false expectations), but it pushes the action steadily onward, and even out into areas of broader social interest (African-American bonds, Chinese-American bonds), and Harvey Keitel in sunglasses certainly looks like he means business. With Stephen Dorff, Timothy Hutton, Wade Dominguez, and Famke Jansen. 1997.

Dante's Peak — Formula disaster film, with only the tiniest ingredient of human interest and (like Independence Day, like Daylight) an overriding dash of canine interest. Because the agent of disaster is a volcano ("She's just clearing her throat. She hasn't even started to sing yet"), there is considerable delay before the big effects, not counting the preludial rain of mud, fire, and boulders in Latin America. When at last they come, they are an anthology of earthquake, flood, fire, and nuclear holocaust imagery, and they are (rawn) spectacular. Director Roger Donaldson tries to keep things lively in the meantime with a loosey-goosey Steadicam. He instead keeps things merely unsteady. Pierce Brosnan, Linda Hamilton. 1997.

Donnie Brasco — Inside the Mafia, on the elbow of an FBI infiltrator. And all of a sudden Lefty from Mulberry Street won't go anywhere without Don the Jeweller. The factual basis adds little in the way of interest or excitement, although it seems to inspire a desire to instruct "mustaches are "against regulations," you never mention the name of a rat, etc.). Al Pacino, who has already been in the shoes of an undercover man (Serpico, Cruising), here takes the part of the loyal mob soldier with "twenty-six fuckin' hits" to his credit. His final scene of resignation to fate and responsibility to family is quite touching. With Johnny Depp, Michael Madsen, Bruno Kirby, Anne Heche; directed by Mike Newell. 1997.

The Empire Strikes Back — Wherein we learn a little something more about The Force and a big something more about Luke Skywalker's parentage, but the main point seems to be to lay the groundwork for the other Star Wars sequel rather than make a real headway. The moviemakers pretty much establish, all narrative in a rumpus room atmosphere of war games, Halloween costumes, model spaceships, and toy monsters — one of which, sort of an armor-plated mastodon, would be worth the price of admission all by itself, if the price were forty-five cents. Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher, and Billy Dee Williams; directed by Irvin Kershner. 1980.

The Empire Strikes Back

The English Patient — A kind of anti-Casablanca wherein there is no nobler cause than the fortress of love. It has mystery, romance, two romances in fact, a period setting, desert scenery, a backdrop of war, though none of these in sufficient quantity to overcome nearly two and three-quarters hours of screen time. Neither of the romances — that of a dashing Hungarian count and the wife of a British spy in pre-WWII Africa, or that of an Italian nurse and a Sikh bomb-defuser near the end of the war, while the Hungarian count now lies dying, hideously disfigured by fire, slowly doling out his secrets, in a ruined Italian villa — is very well developed or interesting. Both have blatant bits of female bait that border on the oily and the sappy: the count's sensitive, aesthetic appreciation of what we learn to call the "sensitive notch" at the base of a woman's throat, and the Sikh's candle-lighted pathway to a nocturnal trysting spot. The movie, in addition to its mystery and romance and so on, has a literary pedigree: the Booker Prize-winning novel by Michael Ondaatje, said by some to be unfilmable, found by others to be unreadable.) And at least some of the extreme length in this intricate film narrative can be attributed to mere time killing in order to attain the sort of scope that commonly distinguishes an epic-scaled work. Or commonly disguises a unimportant one. The ending no doubt is its payoff, but the pickings en route are rich. Ralph Fiennes, Kristin Scott Thomas, Juliette Binoche, Willem Dafoe; written and directed by Anthony Minghella. 1996.

Everyone Says I Love You — Woody Allen's excavation of the musical genre — not the backstage variety, which is still extant and needs no excavation, but the everyday people variety. He does not take naturally to the conventions of the genre. He takes academically to them. Philosophically to them. Archaeologically to them. And the butterscotch candy wrapper in front of the camera lens (Carlo DiPalma, cinematographer) bluntly underscores how remote he is from the brightness and vibrancy of his Minnelli-Donen-Walters models. Still, there are plenty of parts/alas to savor in addition to the general air of waywardness and perversity. Lukas Haas has a funny part as a National Review-reading teenager and terrible embarrassment to his Left-leaning parents (Goldie Hawn, Alan Alda). Tim Roth has a funny one, too, as a lasciviously ogling, groping ex-convict, and liberal cause célèbre, for whom the aforesaid parents had lobbied to obtain an early parole. The opening number, in which the lyrics of "Just You, Just Me" are passed from Edward Norton (who, in his dialogue scenes, falls very gracefully into the familiar Allenesque rhythms) to bystanders on the New York City streets, sets a nice mood. And the closing number, a slow-footed Astaire-Rogers simulation by Allen and a gravity-defying Goldie Hawn on the banks of the Seine, allows you to take that mood out the door. (Not much beyond.) The topper, though, to the tune of "Enjoy Yourself (It's Later Than You Think)," is the dance of sex through ghosts at a funeral parlor, joined in progress by a pixie-dust animated figure formed from an ursful of sprinkled cremains. Not in the least a danse macabre. A danse, quite contrarily, sans souci. With Julia Roberts, Drew Barrymore, Natalie Portman, Gaby Hoffman, and Allen. 1996.
★★ (LA JOLLA VILLAGE)

Evita — Madonna's big ego trip: subsuming the legend of Eva Duarte Perón into her very own. "Local girl makes good," as one of her lines sums up the rags-to-riches fairy tale. Or as the one-man chorus of Antonio Banderas grudgingly puts it: "She had her moments, she had some style." In honesty, she looks a little shopworn, a little care-worn, for the role, at the early stages of it if not the final, physical-disintegration stages. But that just enlarges the scope of the trip. Andrew Lloyd Webber's pop opera is sufficiently big even without Madonna's ego. And in between the two or three nice melodic turns of pb+ase, we have to endure the interminable rush and jumble of expository lyrics by Tim Rice. Maybe the human intimacy of a stage production makes all that hard work more sympathetic; on screen, it's just a grind. Directed by Alan Parker. 1996.

Horse Creatures — The cast members of A Fish Called Wanda — John Cleese, Jamie Lee Curtis, Kevin Kline, Michael Palin — reassemble in different characters (Kline in two characters: son and snowy-haired father) and in an English zoo, and count on the fond remembrance and good will of the audience to pull them through this wheezy farce about crass commercialism and cuddly critters. Directed by Robert Young and, for post-preview re-shoots, Fred Schepisi. 1997.
● (RANCHO BERNARDO 8)

First Strike — Jackie Chan ("This guy can move like a monkey!") and his weapons of convenience: folding table, aluminum ladder, broom, umbrellas, stilts. A cheerful and cheesy James Bond spoof — ski chase from On Her Majesty's Secret Service, man-eating shark and underwater combat from

Good Luck

Good Luck — Comedy starring Gregory Hines and Vincent D'Onofrio as a pair of handicapped rafters; directed by Richard Labrie.
(MISSION VALLEY 20)

Hamlet — The Kenneth Branagh incarnation (blond like Olivier's). The prime selling point for this vulgarly overscaled remake of Shakespeare's revenge tragedy is that it presents for the first time on screen, at a length of four full hours, the uncondensed text, for which Branagh demonstrates his reverence by pouring buckets of mood-controlling music over it at drowning-out levels of volume, and by turning big chunks of the dialogue into narration through the "cinematic," device of cutting away to activities performed elsewhere or earlier (including a previously undisclosed nude lovemaking bout between Hamlet and his fair Ophelia — what a scoop!). The main outcome, meantime, of this textual completeness is the powerful case it makes for the wisdom of judicious editing. With Kate Winslet, Julie Christie, Derek Jacobi, Richard Briers, Nicholas Farrell, Michael Maloney, Rufus Sewell, Jack Lemmon, Charlton Heston, Gérard Depardieu, Billy Crystal, Robin Williams, Richard Attenborough, and (utterly speechless) John Gielgud. 1996.
● (GUILD; UNIVERSITY TOWNE CENTRE)

Jerry Maguire — Tom Cruise, in the role of a high-flying sports agent who belatedly finds some scruples ("Who had I become? Just another shark in a suit?") and in consequence loses all his clients but one, is more tightly wound than usual. And he comes more thoroughly, rapidly, and frequently unwound than usual, too. Hence, or partly hence, the critical rumble about his Best Performance Ever. (Most Rotations Ever, at the least.) Newcomer Renee Zellweger as the romantic interest — a schoolgirlish single mom — has her moments of charm, and she even has her vestiges of innocence, despite a resemblance to former porn star Traci Lords: lips in constant readiness for a kiss. Neither Cruise nor writer-director Cameron Crowe, whose specialty is refrigerated goo (Say Anything, Singles), comes across as the sincerest spokesman for human values above filthy lucre. Human values before filthy lucre perhaps, but filthy lucre sooner or later, please, and plenty of it. Scruples, it would appear, are all very well for plot complications, but not for happy endings. Cuba Gooding, Jr., as the hero's sole remaining client, an undersized wide receiver with an oversized ego, is aggressively ingratiating; and Bonnie Hunt, as the heroine's wise and wistful older sister, is unaggressively so. 1996.

Kama Sutra — Indian-born director Mira Nair (Salaam Bombay) returns to her native land for a tale of romantic intrigue in the 16th Century.
(HILLCREST CINEMAS; LA JOLLA 12)

Kolya — Czech heart-tugger about a lecherous old cellist who agrees, for a fee, to a mock marriage with a Russian, and then gets stuck with her five-year-old son when she joins her true love in West Germany. (This is 1988.) Schmaltzy, but full of lifelike detail and sensitive observation: e.g., the terrors of an escalator from the viewpoint of an unaccompanied toddler. With Zdenek Sverak, who also wrote the script; directed by Jan Sverak, son of Zdenek. 1995.
★★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

The Last Seduction — Another (after Kill Me Again and Red Rock West) homage to film noir by John Dahl. More narrowly, an homage to the resident femme fatale (Linda Fiorentino, with hooded eye, clamped jaw, uninflected voice — a cartoon figure). So awed is the filmmaker that he can throw up no resistance to her in the form of credible supporting characters or plotline. And an homage-to-jazz score by Joseph Vitarelli provides an unabating tailwind. With Peter Berg, Bill Pullman, J.T. Walsh. 1994.
★ (KEN, 3/13)

Lost Highway — The excitement of David Lynch's return to the bag screen, ending an absence of five years, starts to taper off steadily after the breathless credits sequence of automobile headlights gobbling up an infinite dotted yellow line underneath the retro pulp-paperback lettering. It — the excitement, such as it is — does not drop off sharply. An indefinite, indefinable noir-ish mood of malaise, paranoia, Angst, tension, strain, and general heebie-jeebies is strongly established. A consistency of tone and texture, technically very adept, is cultivated through the visual ambience of chi-chi color (chocolate, salmon), interior shadows which in places approach the specifications of an extraterrestrial black hole, and almost Kubrickian, almost Antonioni-an expanses of empty space and blank walls around an isolated, alienated figure. And the spectator who is prepared to keep his part of the unwritten bargain, and meet the artist halfway, has several junior-detective questions to chew on. For openers: What the hell is going on here? By the time the jazzman protagonist (a five-o'clock-shadowed Bill Pullman) metamorphoses inside a prison cell into an altogether different person (Balthazar Getty), the junior detective should be ready to resign from the case. The trademark Lynchian atmosphere of seaminess and sinfulness remains strong throughout (bolstered greatly by generous helpings of Patricia Arquette's flesh), but there is nothing to keep you guessing, pondering, wondering. You give up. The nightmarish vein of thriller carved out by such fictionists (and film noir fountainheads) as William Irish, Fredric Brown, David Goodis, John Franklin Bardin, was always most profitable when there was a waking up, a clearing-up, in the denouement. That was a major plank in their end of the bargain. Lynch honors no pact with artistic He follows his own course of logic or illogic, a loop-the-loop path that spirals outward into ever deepening confusion, pretension, and tedium. Suggested better title: Lost Bearings. With Robert Blake, Robert Loggia, Gary Busey. 1997.
★ (MISSION VALLEY 20)

Love Jones — Larenz Tate and Nia Long star in a romantic comedy written and directed by Theodore Witcher.
(CAROUSEL CINEMA 6; CINEMA STAR 8; CINEMA STAR 6; GROSSMONT TROLLEY; GROVE 9; MIRA MESA 4; MISSION VALLEY 20; SPORTS ARENA 6; SWEETWATER 9; TOWN AND COUNTRY; UA GLASSHOUSE 6; UA HORTON PLAZA 14; UNIVERSITY TOWNE CENTRE, FROM 3/14)

Marvin's Room — Sticky sentimental comedy, from a second-rate stage play by Scott McPherson, concerning the reunion of two middle-aged sisters after one of them is diagnosed with leukemia: all of the characters are at least half cracked; most of them more than half. Meryl Streep, as a chain-smoking cosmetologist and single mom, is typically able to make a lot out of very little; and Robert De Niro is amusing in the minor role of a caring doctor with a clumsy bedside manner. Diane Keaton, Leonardo DiCaprio, Gwen Verdon, Dan Hedaya; directed by Jerry Zaks. 1996.
★ (CAROUSEL CINEMA 6; CINEMA STAR GALAXY; CINEMA STAR 6; CINERAMA 6; FLOWER HILL CINEMAS; HILLCREST CINEMAS; LA JOLLA VILLAGE; LA PALOMA; OCEANSIDE 8; PLAZA BONITA; SANTEE VILLAGE 8; UA GLASSHOUSE 6)

Maximum Risk — Van Damme as twins again (remember Double Impact?), but mainly as a morose French cop who doesn't meet his mirror image until the latter is under a sheet, and who then sets out to get to "know" his brother and simultaneously to find his killers (Russian mobsters, rogue FBI men). The trail, unexpectedly dark and bumpy, is congested with routine stunts, chases, mano-a-manos. At least the hero is evenly matched against a blond muscleman reminiscent of Robert Shaw in From Russia with Love: several inconclusive skirmishes before their fight-to-the-finish in a stalled elevator. Further evocation of that Bond film: instead of a knife coming out of the toe of a shoe, we get a knife going into the toe of a shoe. With Natasha Henstridge, Jean-Hugues Anglade; directed by Ringo Lam. 1996.

Jungle 2 Jungle

The Mirror Has Two Faces — Streisand the star has so enslaved Streisand the director that she — the latter — is no longer free to make the movie that cries out faintly to be made. That movie perhaps already did get made, in France, in the late Fifties, by André Cayatte, under the same name but in soap-operatic mode rather than comic. It told of an unattractive woman who loses her allure for the man in her life after her transformation through plastic surgery. The notion, however, that she could ever under any circumstances lose any allure, to say nothing of the notion that she could use any plastic surgery, is apparently unsupportable to Streisand, who has diverted the storyline instead into a you-can-have-it-all (at least if you are Barbra Streisand-you-can) egomaniacal daydream. Certainly for viewers of a mind to play couch doctor, the movie offers a more interesting kind of badness than the average badness of movies. A kind of badness you can chew on. And in the performance of Jeff Bridges, as a Mr. Prius who hopes to prolong Platonic love into married life, it approaches actual goodness. The goodness of the good sport, and the goodness of the good soldier. Playing against his natural tendencies, dressing up in bow ties and woolly pullovers and tweedy jackets, squeezing out a pinched, squeaky, stammering voice, Bridges is smugly in the tradition of the Cary Grant of Bringing Up Baby and Monkey Business, or, extended into Streisand's radius, the Ryan O'Neal of What's Up, Doc? With Lauren Bacall, Mimi Rogers, Pierce Brosnan, George Segal, Brenda Vaccaro. 1996.
★★ (RANCHO BERNARDO 6)

Mother — Albert Brooks back behind the camera (as well as in front of it) after his customary sex-real-year hiatus. His faithful fans can hardly begrudge him the shrewd publicity move of casting in the title role a former Hollywood leading lady long out of the limelight. It didn't have to be Debbie Reynolds (names ranging from Doris Day to Nancy Reagan were bandied about in the press), but our surprise in the result could not have been greater. Reorchestrating this actress from a blaring brass instrument into a mellow woodwind (that creamy, reasonable, pleading tone, that smooth, flat, New Englandish glide at the ends of sentences) is surely as masterful a job of directing as it is of acting. On the other hand, it is possible to notice — to sense — to suspect — an increased desire for the audience to identify and sympathize with the Brooks protagonist (on such points of contention, say, as his mother's pathological thriftiness or her uncertain grasp of his vegetarianism: "Can you eat lamb chops?"), and an increased willingness to reward the audience with a conventional Happy Ending, however far-fetched and facetious. And — to sum up any reservations in the most shorthand way — this is the first of Brooks's movies that might easily be imagined as a TV sitcom: the twice-divorced middle-aged man moving back home with his widowed mother in hopes of understanding his relations with the opposite sex. Of course Brooks neatly resolves the situation in barely ninety minutes, though not without sitcomesque moralizing: "For the very first time I don't see you as my mother. I see you as a failure." And it could also be fairly argued that the movie is more "interesting" than eruptively funny. From that angle, one of the more interesting things about it is the recurring theme of people not "getting" other people's jokes, especially Brooks's own (first his designated-driver buddy, then an airheaded first date, then his mama's-boy younger brother, then a gas-station attendant, then — and more than once — his mother, then a store clerk, then a nosy neighbor). Is Brooks trying to tell us something? Or is he telling us something without trying? 1996.

The Preacher's Wife — Penny Marshall transplants the half-century-old The Bishop's Wife into the present-day black community, but not in quest of greater and grittier social relevance. A dapper angel in pearl gray, name of Dudley ("Don't call me Dud"), comes down to Earth in answer to the prayers of a beleaguered ghetto clergyman, then spends most of his time flirting with the fellow's wife, sans choirmaster before buckling down to business. Whitney Houston is a cool drink of water, and Denzel Washington and Courtney B. Vance are a couple of warm baths, and the combined effect is restful if not soporific. Don't call it dud. 1996.

Private Parts — Biography of (apologia for, propaganda for) radio "shock jock" Howard Stern, who turns out on screen to have a somewhat pale and wisp-y presence. He's unselfconscious, too, and perfectly relaxed, as if he fully expects attention and adulation regardless. (The title, incidentally, has already been taken, by a much raunchier Paul Bartel film.) Ransom — Full-throttle kidnapping thriller, with sufficiently neck-wrenching rigs and rags. The pivotal zig (or zag) is the underdiscussed decision to turn the two-million-dollar ransom into a two-million-dollar reward: a tempting carrot for the criminal turncoat. Mel Gibson, perhaps setting his sights on the Best Actor Oscar after salting away the Best Director (in other words, he cries), is allowed into too much of the action as the fat-cat father of the kidnappee, while the very cool and smooth Delroy Lindo, as the FBI man, is allowed into too little of it (in other words, the movie is strictly a star vehicle). Gary Sinise, as the bad cop, delivers a startling smash to the windpipe in addition to a poetic metaphor drawn from the Flos and the Morlocks of H.G. Wells's The Time Machine. What he is getting at with that metaphor is a rough equivalent to the titular metaphor of Kurosawa's kidnapping thriller, High and Low: equally poetic but, in its visualization on screen, infinitely more cinematic. With Rene Russo and Lili Taylor, directed by Ron Howard. 1996.
★ (VINEYARD TWIN)

Red Rock West — John Dahl's neo-noir thriller, a combustible compound of honest unemployed ex-Marine, professional hit man, unfaithful wife, and vengeful husband (Nicolas Cage, Dennis Hopper, Lara Flynn Boyle, and J.T. Walsh, respectively) is as much farce as thriller, and an air of cinematic hipness will have to stand in for the deeper kind of knowingness of classical film noir. It took an odd route to American audiences: first HBO, then video stores, finally theaters. It looks well on the big screen.

Scream — Deliberately, diligently, self-contentedly conventional dead-teenager thriller: the deeds are done by a serial killer in a Grim Reaper-by-Edvard-Munch mask. The relentless allusions to film and television ("You can only hear that Richard Gere gerbil story so many times until you have to start believing it") are supposed to lift it above its companions. They don't lift it high. With Neve Campbell, Skeet Ulrich, Courtney Cox, David Arquette, Drew Barrymore; directed by Wes Craven. 1996.

Secrets and Lies — It might be slightly difficult to think of a two-hour-twenty-two-minute movie in terms of a handy summary, but there was a lot to be summed up from the dozen or so prior entries in the filmography of Mike Leigh: the wide range and the sudden shifts of emotion (the excruciating hilarity, the aching tenderness, the unbearable embarrassment, and points in between); the focus on family, on society, on class; the revelation of character through environment and vocation; the ear for the vernacular; the social gathering as formula for combustion; the dyspeptic musical accompaniment, with its flatulent brass and its groaning lower strings; above all, the unique combination of caricature and compassion (the contradictory combination of snobbery and liberalism). But to get down to cases: Secrets and Lies, for all its breadth of scope, is focussed closely on one smallish family and satellites. Cynthia and Roxanne, mother and daughter, factory worker and street cleaner, live together in cloyingly disharmony in London's East End. Cynthia's younger brother Maurice, a studio portrait photographer, is in a childless marriage in a middle-class suburb, more specifically in a frilly Laura Ashley dollhouse, with the barren, stay-at-home Monica. Maurice, feeling bad about his estrangement from his sister and niece, petitions his dictatorial wife with a plan for a reunion barbecue on Roxanne's imminent twenty-first birthday. The Leigh fan, recollecting the seventieth-birthday bash from High Hopes, will have started immediately to rub his palms together in anticipation. He will not be disappointed. There remains to be mentioned one other major family member, whose existence is unknown to Roxanne and unspoken of by the others, an earlier daughter of Cynthia's given up for adoption at birth. No-one, not even Cynthia, knows that this other daughter is black. The latter, a well-bred optometrist by the name of Hortense, having just put her adoptive mother in the ground in the movie's opening scene, gets it into her head to track down her birth mother. At that point, Hortense likewise has no idea of her real mother's different color. The palms of the Leigh fan will be getting quite warm. Timothy Spall, Brenda Blethyn, Marianne Jean-Baptiste, Lesley Manville. 1996.

Shine — The true-life story of David Helfgott, an Australian musical prodigy who suffers a total mental collapse after his "the sis" performance of Rachmaninoff's D-minor piano concerto at the Royal College of Music in London ("No one's ever been mad enough to attempt the Rach 3!" "Am I mad enough, professor?"), spends years as the personification of the Blithering Idiot, and ultimately, with a couple of key helpers, puts enough pieces of himself back together to have a career and a marriage. What's most impressive about the movie is simply the solid, old-fashioned craftsmanship of the storytelling, its clear, direct, pointed manner of expression: pared down and packed tight without seeming either oversimplified or overstated; brisk and selective without seeming underdeveloped. Noah Taylor, growing up before our eyes from The Year My Voice Broke through Flirting, and stage actor Geoffrey Rush, a facial amalgam of James Woods and Nicol Williamson, split the role of the protagonist down the middle (a small fragment going to yet a third actor), with the usual physical discord of such arrangements: nothing to unite them but a pair of glasses. (A receding chin will not be something a person grows out of.) In voice and mannerism, they blend more smoothly, with Taylor laying sturdy groundwork for the older actor's virtuoso blithering. Armin Mueller-Stahl, Lynn Redgrave, John Gielgud; directed by Scott Hicks. 1996.

Return of the Jedi — Another genealogical revelation, very much in the same line as the sole revelation in The Empire Strikes Back. Numerous other pursuits and skirmishes and creatures and contraptions — again in the same line as those that came before. The third and final chapter in the adventures of Luke Skywalker and his pals ties up all loose ends, but the initial chapter, Star Wars, remains the only one of the three that can stand on its own. Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams; co-written (with Lawrence Kasdan) and executive produced by George Lucas; directed by Richard Marquand. 1983.

Rosewood — Big gulp of castor oil: John Singleton's re-enactment of the torching of a black community, and massacre of its citizens, in Florida in the Twenties. Simple in presentation; graphic; grueling; dramatically crude. But it makes its point. Over and over. Only Jon Voight, in a truly tortured performance as the white storekeeper in town, occupies a sizable gray area between good and bad. (And maybe Michael Rooker, a smaller, darker-gray area, as the powerless lawman of the district.) Ving Rhames, a laconic stranger on horseback, fills the larger-than-life hero's shoes, and his startling escape from a lynching enlarges him for a moment to the size of superhero. With Don Cheadle, Esther Rolle, Elise Neal. 1997.

Rhyme and Reason

"Gang" comedies after his pubertal voice change, something like a dubbed Italian muscleman grunting with the effort to topple a pillar or roll a boulder, something like the grinding gears of an eighteen-wheel semi on a steep downgrade. This frightful growl is punctuated at intervals with a throat-clearing "ammm-hmm" or, less affirmatively, more ruminatively, a mere "mmm." All of which is quite fascinatingly and entertainingly original, but at the same time is too much of a stunt to be taken entirely seriously. The humor and pathos around this character (e.g., his habit of standing outside a door without either entering or knocking, just waiting to be found there) are really pretty easy to come by; and Thornton, who also wrote and directed, comes by them in bucketfuls. The central situation — the befriending of Carl by a young boy whose single mother is victimized by an abusive lover — is dripping with sentimentality. The writing often sounds a lot like overwriting — stilted and literary. The directing, even more often, looks a lot like underdirecting — a dimly illuminated image and a disinterested camera disposed toward time-saving and money-saving long takes. Still, a sufficiently likable little movie, notwithstanding the two-and-a-quarter hour duration that raises the boundaries of littleness. With Lucas Black, Natalie Canerday, John Ritter, Dwight Yoakam. 1997.

Space Jam — More fun to look forward to than actually to look at: a feature-length ending of the TV commercials combining a live-action Michael Jordan and an animated Bugs Bunny, here reunited under the same director, Joe Pytka, along with other Looney Tunes luminaries, and at the last minute Bill Murray, for a basketball game against cartoon extraterrestrials. (Don't ask why.) The 1973 prologue conjuring up a juvenile Mike and his — in real life, murdered — father shows questionable judgment. The loud and flashy reprise of athletic-career highlights then wastes time explaining who Michael Jordan is. The cons start shuttling back and forth, early on between the natural world and the cartoon world, creates considerable mess. (It's fun, for a second, to hear Tweetie try to enunciate Jordan's name, but Daffy doesn't sound much like himself, more like Richard Dreyfuss.) The aliens, whether in their diminutive form or their bulked-up Mean Team form, are crudely drawn. And the movie never really finds its legs, never escapes the shadow of Who Framed Roger Rabbit (the three-dimensional shading of the formerly flat Looney Tunes, the curvaceous Lola Bunny for rabbity romantic interest); never is rescued by the old Warner Brothers wit and quickness. All in all, the furthest thing from a slam dunk. An absolutely air ball. 1996.

Star Wars — George Lucas's homage to Flash Gordon embraces, too, some of the beloved clichés of cowboy, swashbuckler, and aviator movies. The story is set in a remote galaxy in the remote past, so that it can't be mistaken as a reflection of anything in modern-day society except Hollywood hokum, and it can be recommended warmly to any one with a mental age of under twelve. The miniatures and special effects are the best that money can buy, the wholesome heroes, Mark Hamill and Harrison Ford, look as though they've been recruited from a volleyball court on the California coast, the anthropomorphized robots, especially the crotchety one who

Scream

Trees Lounge — Steve Buscemi's debut as a writer and director, an almost shrinkingly modest independent film about and around the clientele of a Long Island neighborhood watering hole, a shaden-of-gray corner building with a spindly sapling planted in the sidewalk out front. In his directing hat, he is meticulously observant of the faces, the postures, the gestures of barflies: the epicene slug and his well-suited mate perched on stools at the end of the bar; the brooder with the deteriorating hygiene (his wife has just walked out on him with their child, at the other end); the vacant, quasi-mystical stare of the most religiously devoted drinker, a prune-face who can waste no word or motion on matters unrelated to his regimen of alcohol consumption. In his writing hat, Buscemi is a bit more fitfully observant of the banality of bar talk ("Pretty name for a pretty girl"), more prone to poetic and comic license ("Now I got it embedded in my head"). The accumulation of little truths and little amusements in the lives of little people never amounts to more than a little. And the implied fate of the protagonist (Buscemi himself) at the fadeout seems rather heavy in relation to the overall weight of the previous events: a case of too much, too late. That apart, the movie is something of a marvel of nonjudgmentalism, neither sentimentalizing nor stigmatizing its hero (or anybody else). It would be understandable if, around closing time, Buscemi felt he had not said quite enough about his character, and forgivable if he attempted all at once to make up for it. With Mark Boone Junior, Anthony LaPaglia, Elizabeth Bracco, Carol Kane, Daniel Baldwin, Mimi Rogers, Chloe Sevigny. 1996.

Walking for Dollars — Christopher Guest, former member of Spinal Tap, goes off on his own to direct a mock documentary, as well as to play the lead role of Corky St. Clair, Broadway refugee, homosexual, stereotype, and the creative mastermind behind the original musical revue in celebration of the sesquicentennial of Blaine, Mo., "Stool Capital of the World." (No film crew is evident on screen, as in This Is Spinal Tap, to justify the talking-head interviews, but never mind.) Guest has brought with him to America's Bread Basket several skillful, sophisticated comics (Eugene Levy, Fred Willard, Catherine O'Hara, Parker Posey, Bob Balaban) to make fun of the untalented self-deluded rubes: the Jewish dentist who does Johnny Carson impressions and is always careful to announce the fact when he is doing them; the husband-and-wife travel agents whose involvement with community theater has worn them the moniker of "The Lunts of Blaine"; the Dairy Queen carhop mecca for better things, and the humorless Mr. Holland music teacher in command of the orchestra pit. The prerequisite for viewers is to have a mean bone in their bodies, in addition to a funny bone. For them, the laughs ought to be rib-cracking. 1997.

Men in Italian Silk

I was grateful that I was having a good hair day.

REVIEW
ELEANOR WIDMER

The sky was dark and angry, it rained intermittently, and I almost backed out of driving to Tijuana. As it happened, the gloomy day worked in our favor: we zipped across the border with no wait.

We took the road for Zona Rio and came almost immediately to Paseo de los Heroes, which is the main thoroughfare in the Rio section. At the statue of Lincoln we made a right, to El Zaguán, a new and beautiful restaurant whose name means door or entryway, usually to a mansion. Valet parking is available at no cost. When you get ready to leave, you hand your ticket to the waiter and the car is brought to the door of the restaurant.

The day we visited, the peso was approximately 7.5. The easiest way to determine your bill is to divide the cost of the entrée by 7. The most expensive item on the menu at El Zaguán was 75 pesos or $10.00. Breast of chicken, prepared in three styles, was 45 pesos, or about $6.50, and grilled beef filet was a little over $9.00. The menu is the same from opening to closing. It's printed in Spanish, but waiters speak sufficient English to help you.

We arrived shortly after the doors opened at 1:30 p.m. The interior is striking. In one room, archways cut into the walls are painted yellow or deep blue, and dark blue plates with yellow swirls decorate tables. The plates are whisked away when food is served, but the initial effect when you enter the dining room is that of opulence. Paintings by a Guadalajaran artist hang everywhere, and the bar lounge is lined with banquetes in expensive fabric.

I always wear my best clothing to Tijuana, a fashionable outfit and heels. In good restaurants in Mexico, women are expected to be well turned out. I'll never forget my first meal at Tour de France. The women were dressed as for a fashionable bistro in Paris. Many of the diners at El Zaguán were men in dark business suits, some of Italian silk. They proved to be local businessmen,

Love's Like the Rain Forest

Carla and I did the dreaded deed on the banks of the San Diego River.

TIN FORK
ED BEDFORD

Did it! Got married! Now we're eating. Wedding breakfast at three in the afternoon. Calico fish, poor devil, is still wiggling. Just been tossed up from the boat on the beach. Ka-chang! Pedro chops its head off. In a moment he has sliced it open, fingered out the guts, scraped the scales off, washed it, and kokoshoh! He slides it in the dish of bubbling oil.

We've bounced down here to — well, it's a chance I'm taking. It's a wedding breakfast — of sorts — at Popotla, a jerrybuilt squatters' fishing village on a rocky point just south of Rosarito. Pedro's place. Pedro Garcia Barcelo. The nearest person to Zorba the Greek I've met in my life. His place, Mariscos el Locochon, sits in a cove, hidden from the 20th Century. And the party's about to begin.

Carla and I did the dreaded deed on the banks of the San Diego River — a cluster of us, barefoot in the wet gravel, breezes blowing, sun scudding in and out, waters licking past. Friend of ours performed the honors. He's from a Texas commune. Rose by natural fermentation to become their "spiritual adviser."

"Now this is where the real work begins," he says to us. "Love's like the rain forest. It's full of life as long as you keep feeding it with rain. Don't fight too much. Fights are like logger's coming in with chainsaws." We nodded. That was pretty much it. Among friends with their pants rolled up, we stated our intentions. The simplicity was powerful. Devastating, actually. I burst into tears. But there she was. Carla. Big tres marres eyes ("three seas," a blue-aquamarine green color you gotta see to believe) searching for hope in mine. It was too much.

The river ceremony was her idea. Popotla was mine. Now we're at rough tables on platforms, looking out onto the cove's deserted beach. Yellow boats with names like Elisa and Isabel are tied to turquoise poles by the tables. No cars. No TV. No radio. No echo. Just the calls of white gulls and the crash of the blue sea.

"First cabrilla [calico fish] coming soon!" It's Pedro, sun-wrinkled, filleting fish on an upturned cable drum, while a tortoise-shell kitten leans against his leg and a young gull lirups close to catch fish guts. No electricity or water here. On a halved, 44-gallon drum with a bottle-gas burner laid across its top, Pedro fries the fish in a wok. Turns out the "wok" is a tractor's plowing disk he found. He fries two large fish at a time in it.

"Derling," says Carla, quiet but firm. "There's just one thing. You have remembered Mr. Boniface doesn't eat fish..." I look at Mr. Boniface. Oh, God. "Ana," says Carla. "Nor do I really want to either."

I swallow, but I don't miss a beat. My best man Ted catches my eye. He's got fast wheels. I flash him a Lincoln. "Taco Feliz, main drag in town. Senior Ambrosio and his wife Gabriela. Best tacos al pastor [pork] in town. Get some tacos de lengua [tongue] and carne asada too."

It seems hours before Ted gets back. Pedro's been keeping the toasts going with continuous cans of Tecate. Soon he's bringing out plates of fish, half of them herb-steamed in aluminum foil, half deep-fried, laid out flat, surrounded by oil-fried corn tortillas and clumps of cilantro and tomatoes and radishes and fried orbollas (spring onions). Suddenly Ted rushes in with a bundle of meat tacos and carne asada. Pedro brings spare plates for the carnivores, and we dig in. Naturally I'm having the deep-fried calico, and it tastes rich, crunchy. It goes well with the cilantro and orbollas — and the Tecate. Everybody's using fingers. Even Carla. We talk with our mouths full. We laugh with our mouths full. It's like a medieval feast.

Something about this place prints on your memory: the gulls and the waves and the speeches and the laughs in the fading light — and Carla, shyly accepting all the compliments. Pedro supplies a few lanterns as the sea darkens. It's enough to make a man fall in love.

"Here's to the happy couple!" It's Boniface toasting. In the lantern light he looks ruddy and cheery. "Ed, you've just made the best move of your life. Now I may even get that rent on time..." ■ very sharp, very handsome. I was grateful that I was having a good hair day (at last you know I am vain about my appearance!).

The menu offers appetizers, soups, salads, poultry, fish, seafood, and beef. My acquaintance who recommended El Zaguán referred to it as gourmet Mexican, but a more accurate assessment would be Mexican with Continental sauces.

I regret that we didn't order any of the three soups — Mexican soups are invariably interesting and flavorful — but we concentrated on the entrées. The soups are bean with consommé and spicy shrimp; lentil with tomatoes, garlic, and bacon; and mushroom soup prepared from chicken consommé. The chicken dishes, which we also overlooked, were prepared with a mole made with three chilies, "bathed in peanut salsa," or covered with Jamaican spices.

We shared an order of calamares rellenos en salsa sake, or stuffed squid in sake sauce ($7.50). The squid was tender and, according to the menu, it was stuffed with crab. Crab, however, is flaky, and this filling resembled surimi, or crab substitute, because it was formed into a long strip and was dense. No matter. The squid was cooked perfectly at El Zaguán, and compliments should go to the sauce for the sauce of butter, cream, sake, and a dash of soy. The squid is accompanied by rice. As an appetizer, it was more than ample for three or four people.

My escort had the pez espada al achiote, grilled swordfish in achiote sauce (about $10.00). Achiote refers not to a chili but to a seed, which has a mild flavor and when ground, imparts a red color to food. At first glance you may think you've been served tomato sauce. The fresh swordfish was accompanied by sautéed purple onions, rice, and mixed vegetables: broccoli, cauliflower, string beans.

The best dish by far was camarón tequila, jumbo-sized shrimp in a sauce made with green bell peppers, red and yellow onions, butter, and cream. The sauce is flamed with tequila. It's a great dish and in San Diego would be at least $15.95 rather than $10.00.

Least satisfying was the filete achiote ($9.00 plus charge). It was a thick flank steak, chewy and stringy. A good filet mignon is marvelous, but this filet lacked tenderness and flavor. It was topped with nopoles and onions. It couldn't compare to the cafeteria at El Taurino (7957 South Street off Revolución), which is still one of my favorite Tijuana restaurants.

I still lament the closing of Casa de Alfonso, with its intricate Basque and Spanish cuisine. The food at El Zaguán is straightforward, fresh, and, by San Diego standards, inexpensive. The restaurant isn't exotic or mysterious, but it does fulfill one's need for luxury.

Notes of interest. One of my favorite Italian restaurants, Pizza Bozza, in Encinitas, closed in mid-February. Ironically, it was not a question of poor business. Steady customers flocked there. But owner Tom Bozza was exhausted from working days as a painter and nights as a restaurateur. He promises to return at another location after a rest.

Do you remember the bombay Bicycle Club? The site on Shelter Island will be occupied by Michelangelo's, a pleasing Italian family restaurant that used to be on Rosecrans Street. ■ casual setting. Great pastries. Open daily, lunch, dinner, brunch. Low to moderate.

DEL MAR PIZZA 211 15th Street, Del Mar, 481-9088. If you've heard about, dreamed about, or were merely curious about New York pizza, the best local practitioner is now in Del Mar complete with New York manners. The hot sandwiches are good, but the pizza is in a league by itself. The art-set lies in the crust. Lasagne and stuffed eggplant also available as well as cannoli for dessert. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Low.

D'AZUTTI'S SOUTHWEST RESTAURANT 1555 Camino Del Mar, Del Mar Plaza, Del Mar, 259-9966. Exciting Southwestern style tapas, spit roasted items, and extensive entrée list bring in the crowds. Sunday brunch a la carte includes complimentary Champagne or mimosas. Sister restaurant of Claritos. This place is always crowded. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate to expensive.

LE BAMBOU 2634 Del Mar Heights Road, Del Mar, 259-8138. Nouvelle Vietnamese cuisine is prepared here that's fresh, light, delicate. But the portions are small and two people should order three entrees for a satisfactory meal. Soups are outstanding and the imperial rolls, lemon grass chicken, soft-shelled crab, vegetarian rolls, and char-broiled pork do well here. The menu list includes 40 items. Fast service and aesthetic surroundings. Closed Monday. Lunch Tuesday to Friday; dinner Tuesday to Sunday. Low to moderate.

WEIMARS 300 Carlsbad Village Drive (corner of Carlsbad Boulevard), Carlsbad, 729-4131. The peaked dining room has been refurbished and looks like a circular country inn. All-you-can-eat buffet brunch with all-you-can-drink champagne, mimosa, orange juice, and coffee. Traditional offerings include fried chicken. Sunday only, 9:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. Expensive.

NOBAHAM RESTAURANT 731 South Highway 101, Solana Beach, 481-5929. If you've never tried Persian food — which consists mostly of charbroiled chicken, meat and fish — you should try it here because mini-portions cost $5.50 to $9.95. Mini-portions include salad and rice. Full portions are enough for two. Persian music Friday and Saturday nights. Same menu lunch and dinner. Closed Tuesday. Lunch served to midnight Friday and Saturday. Low to moderate.

PACIFICA DEL MAR 1555 Camino del Mar, Del Mar Plaza, Del Mar, 792-0476. Select the fresh fish prepared in the simple manner and you'll do fine here. The setting and view remain delightful and the service excellent. Wok items available. Open daily for lunch (Sunday lunch includes some brunch items) and dinner. Moderate to expensive.

PISCES DELICACIES OF THE SEA La Costa Spa, 2100 Costa Del Mar Road, Carlsbad, 438-9111. This long established and still excellent restaurant is located at the spa itself, in a gorgeous mesa one flight down from the lobby. The menu includes fresh Maine lobster, lobster Thermidor, and Dover sole. Abalone and Maryland soft-shell crabs are seasonal. Please call for directions. Open nightly for dinner. Expensive.

VILLAGE WILL BREAD COMPANY 12845 El Camino Real, Carmel Valley (Del Mar Heights), 794-2900. Sixteen varieties of bread, all fine for sandwiches. Best bets are honey sunflower and cinnamon swirl, which makes excellent French toast. The bread is soft with soft crusts; children love it. Open daily, Monday through Friday from 7:00 a.m., Saturday and Sunday from 8:00 a.m.

NORTH INLAND

ATHENS MARKET CAFE 11646 Carmel Mountain Road, between Paseo Lucia Theatres and Sportsmart in Carmel Mountain Plaza (close to Rancho Bernardo) off I-15, 679-2225. The same recipes that you know and love at Athens Market downtown are even more lovingly prepared here. All entrées with sugar snap salad. Excellent mousaka, baked chicken, lamb kebabs. Most dinners $6.95 to $9.95. Excellent value and tasty product. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Low.

CANYON GRILL 9823 Carmel Canyon Road, Scripps Ranch, 271-4052. You'll be pleasantly surprised by the attractive setting, which includes a glassed-in patio that's open to the sky and a Southwestern interior. The food is delightful. Everyone seems to love the pastas, fresh fish, and "surf-and-turf" as well as Pecan-crusted pork chops. Open daily for dinner, continuous service, Monday through Friday. Saturday, dinner only. Low to upper moderate.

FISH HOUSE VERA CRUZ 360 Via Vera Cruz, San Marcos, 744-7346. This family style restaurant serves seafood and fresh fish that changes daily. Simple but honest preparation, good value. Open daily for lunch and dinner (dinner menu is served from opening to closing on Sunday). Low to expensive.

THE FORTUNE COOKIE 16475 Bernardo Center Drive, Rancho Bernardo, 451-8958. We are fortunate to have a Chinese restaurant of such quality in North County. The chef, Henry Yang, comes from a five-star resort, Grand, and his cooking may be characterized as Chinese with French influence. Open daily, lunch 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m., dinner to 10:00 p.m. and to 11:00 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Moderate to expensive.

MILLE FLEURS 6009 Paseo Delicias, Rancho Santa Fe, 756-3085. There's no doubt that in Rancho Santa Fe, this restaurant walks away with the prizes. The a la carte menu, which changes daily, provides exquisite appetizers, soup, and entrées. First-rate seafood dishes may include dover sole. The wine list is stunning, and the host owner is Bertrand, who adds a special cachet to the proceedings. Count on $65.00 per person for dinner. Open daily: Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner nightly. Expensive.

THE QUAIL'S INN 1635 La Bonita Drive, San Marcos, 436-2845 or 744-7645. It's worth the ride to dine in this charming location on a picture-postcard man-made lake. Invariably crowded and for good reason, the inn offers fresh American fare: fish, seafood, prime rib, steaks. Dinner entrées include an all-you-can-eat seafood salad bar. The copious champagne Sunday buffet includes the seafood bar. Dine here as early as possible for all meals, but especially for the Sunday brunch. Lunch, Monday through Saturday. Sunday brunch. Dinner nightly. Lunch, low; dinner, moderate to expensive.

SAN DIEGO ARTISAN BAKERS 1551 South Escondido Boulevard, Escondido, 740-9963. The grains are ground daily for this wonderful European-style bread. Every bread has dense consistency and an amazing crust. Among the best bets are the baguette, the sourdough with Greek olives, and the country sourdough. Recipes come from France, Italy, Germany. Closed Sunday; open Monday through Saturday. Low.

WINESELLAR AND BRASSERIE 9550 Waples Street #115, 450-9557. This is the sister restaurant to Laurel, and the food is a delight to the palate. Lunch, Saturday 11:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. by itself or in conjunction with the wine tasting held during the same hours. Dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Lunch moderate, dinner expensive. Wear call for instructions to get there.

LA JOLLA

BAI RESTAURANT 7660 Fay Avenue, 454-4546. If you've been searching for an Indonesian restaurant, here's the one and only. It offers great soups, salads, chicken kebabs, and beef satay, as well as rijsttafel, which means rice table. It's an Indonesian feast with about 15 items, and it costs $19.95 per person, prepared only for two. The mini-feast is less costly and has less food. Lovely surroundings. Open for lunch Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Dinner nightly. Moderate.

BERNINI'S 7956 Fay Avenue 454-5015. This cozy place has full service and will provide you with breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Lunch and dinner menus are the same and offer four kinds of soup, several salads, including grilled chicken Caesar, and pasta dishes. A variety of desserts is available all day. Open daily to midnight (closes at 11:00 p.m. Sundays). Smoking at tables outdoors. Low.

THE BIRD ROCK CAFE 5656 La Jolla Boulevard, 551-4090. Don't miss this small cafe that serves delightful food prepared by the former chef of Jake's Del Mar. Dishes are divided into small, medium, and large plates, and the top price is $14.50. Many large plates are $8.00. Try the free-range chicken, tuna, risotto, crab cakes, or salad. Unpretentious but worth seeking out. Patio available for outdoor dining. Dinner nightly. Low to moderate.

CAFE JAPENGO 8960 University Center Lane, Aventine complex, 450-9595. The decor is smashing and the Pacific Rim food — with influences from Japan, China, Hawaii, Thailand, and California — is beautiful to behold. Outstanding appetizers. For entrées, try roasted duck with crisp, vegetables or shrimp and scallops with spicy peanut sauce. The sushi bar is one of the city's best. Please make note of the prices — if you get carried away you may be in for a large bill. Open daily. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinners nightly. Sushi bar open to midnight Friday and Saturday nights. Expensive.

DAILY'S 8915 Towne Centre Drive, Renaissance Towne Centre, 453-3112. The restaurant is owned by a doctor who has devised a menu that's low-fat, low-calorie, low-sodium. The dishes look and taste wonderful, and the top price is $9.99. All items available for takeout. Same menu lunch and dinner. Open daily. Low.

MAITRE D' 5925 La Jolla Boulevard, 456-2111. Two separate dining rooms, an elegant ambience, and the presence of the owner himself (formerly with the Plaza Hotel in New York) contribute to a fine dining experience with faultless service. The half lobster appetizer is a house specialty, and the rack of lamb or fresh fish are always outstanding. Excellent place for large parties and Russian specialties when available. Closed Sunday and Monday. Dinners only, Tuesday through Saturday. Expensive.

MISSION COFFEE CUP CAFE 1109 Wall Street, 454-2819. American, Latino, and Chino-Latino breakfasts and lunch have catapulted this cafe, which closes at 3:00 p.m., to instant success. Pricey but bagnificent. Open daily. Low to moderate.

PANDA COUNTRY 4150 Regents Park Row #196, University Towne Centre, 552-1345. Gorgeous surroundings and stunning presentations carry the day here. The extensive menu does particularly well with its 11 appetizers and its 30 seafood and fish dishes prepared Mandarin or Szechuan style. Scallops and shrimp receive special treatment. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Low to expensive.

THE PANNIKIN CAFE 7467 Girard Avenue, 454-5493. The outdoor seating area is always always crowded with tea and coffee drinkers who use themselves, read, or chat. Light meals, including breakfast (steamed eggs, bagels, fruit plates) and sandwiches, soup, salads, as well as beverages and sweets are served. Open daily, 8:00 a.m. weekdays and 7:00 a.m. weekends. Close at 10:00 p.m. It is a well-known hangout and always crowded.

PAPALEU'S 5368 Governor Drive, University City, 453-4844. If you're searching for an eclectic menu, try Papalulu's. Dishes have Mexican influences, Southwestern flavors, Jamaican flavors, or there's plain vegetarian. Massive portions may be shared. This neighborhood family restaurant gives good value. Open daily for breakfast and lunch; dinner Tuesday through Saturday. Low.

STAR OF INDIA 1600 Prospect Street, 459-3555. The Indian food is good. The best bet is the all-you-can-eat buffet lunch or the Saturday and Sunday champagne brunch. The tandoori chicken and lamb dishes are outstanding, and vegetable specialties are recommended. Somewhat pricey. Open daily, lunch and dinner; brunch Saturday and Sunday. Moderate.

TUTTO MARE RISTORANTE 4365 Executive Drive, The Plaza Towers Group, 597-1188. The new chef performs wonders at this fashionable restaurant which specializes in fish and seafood. Pasta, food, and wine are prepared as well. The nightly specials are a bit more costly than menu items but are worth it. Lovely interior and food to match. Open daily. Lunch, Monday through Friday. Dinner nightly. Moderate to expensive.

CLAIREMONT & KEARNY MESA

THE GOOD EGG 7947 Balboa Avenue, Kearny Mesa, 565-4244. The menu offers omelets, gourmet pancakes, waffles, and several different kinds of frittatas. Freshly squeezed fruit juices are available, and for lunch there are burgers, salads, and a long list of sandwiches. Good value here. Open approximately 6:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. Low.

HIDEYOSHI JAPANESE RESTAURANT Hazard Village, 9340-B Clairemont Mesa Boulevard, Kearny Mesa, 569-9595. A delightful restaurant tucked away at the far end of a small shopping center. Fine sushi bar, and unusual appetizers. A feast named "Taiko special," for two or more, is worth ordering. Visually and gastronomically a treat. Closed Sunday. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner, Monday through Saturday. Low to expensive.

KOREA HOUSE 4620 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 560-0080. This remains one of the best Korean restaurants in the city. Three types of seating are available, of which the most popular is at a table with a cooking unit where diners may barbecue their own food. Apart from the barbecue, dumpling soup, short ribs, and noodle dishes are recommended. The menu is extensive and includes a sushi bar. Interesting decor. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Low to moderate.

SAN CHOY SEAFOOD AND BAR-BQUE DELI 4664 Convoy Street, 560-8788. Open daily and serving dim sum from 10:00 a.m. (from 9:00 a.m. weekends) to 3:00 p.m. daily, this Cantonese restaurant offers many exotic dishes prepared as they are in China. Pork and seafood are highly recommended. Twenty-one vegetarian dishes are available. Economy lunches and dinners. Open daily. Lunch Monday through Friday, dinner nightly. Low.

SORRENTINO'S RISTORANTE ITALIANO 4724 Clairemont Mesa Boulevard, Diane Shopping Center, 483-1811. Excellent gourmet pizzas, pastas, and outstanding soups are the hallmarks of this Italian restaurant. Good dining dishes. Separate banquet room available for large parties. Please note the deli to the rear, called Pizza and More, which offers to-go items. Deli open daily 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m., to 10:00 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Restaurant, dinners only, Tuesday through Sunday. Low to moderate.

THE BEACHES

EL CIELO 1812 Garnet, Pacific Plaza II, Pacific Beach, 581-1919. Very fresh, tasty, low-fat, low-calorie Mexican (and some Spanish) dishes served here. Best bets: Andalucian gazpacho, ceviche (prepared daily), salmon tacos, seafood tostadas, and fresh fish. Great Spanish flan. Same menu, lunch and dinner. Low.

KONO'S 704 Garnet (end of street towards ocean), Pacific Beach, 483-1669. The "Big Breakfast" consists of eggs, pancakes, potatoes, bacon, and English muffin for $3.75. It's served from 7:00 a.m. to 3:00 -4:00 p.m. Paper plates and plastic utensils are used. On weekends, arrive early to avoid a wait. A lunch menu (salads and sandwiches) is also available, and hamburgers are cooked from none to doing. Charming owners. Open daily. Low.

QWIGS BAR & GRILL 5081 Santa Monica Avenue, Ocean Beach, 222-1101. A splendid ocean view, a good sushi bar (Tuesday through Sunday, 5:30 to 10:00 p.m.), upright salads, and fresh fish are the main attractions here. Friendly service. Long flight of stairs to the dining room, with an elevator for wheelchair access. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner, nightly. Sunday brunch 10:00 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Moderate to expensive.

SUSHI UTA 4529 Mission Bay Drive, Pacific Beach, 270-5670. This fine-rate Japanese restaurant deserves your attention especially for its excellent sushi bar and the 30 appetizers. Combination plate entrées are offered but none is as exciting as the appetizers. Unless you arrive when the doors open for lunch or dinner, there's a wait at the sushi bar. Costs can mount quickly if you abandon yourself. Open daily. Lunch Tuesday through Friday; dinner nightly. Low to expensive.

TOSCA'S PASTA AND PIZZA 3780 Ingraham Street, Pacific Beach, 274-2400. The soup, served in a hard roll, is delightful and so are the pasta dishes, especially the pasta with fresh spinach. All pizzas are available on semolina dough crust. For a filling, healthy meal, try the antipasto-in-a-roll and half a salad. All portions mammoth. Open for dinner nightly (and for Saturday and Sunday only). Low to low moderate.

THE VENETIAN 3663 Voltaire Street, Loma Portal, 223-8197. For bargain hunters who like vast portions and hearty, rich Italian cooking, try this family restaurant. The pizza is marvelous. For entrées, try shrimp scampi over linguine or eggplant parmigiana. Our dining room is partially outdoors. Complete menu to go. Open daily. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner nightly. Low moderate.

WORLD FAMOUS 711 Pacific Beach Drive, Pacific Beach, 272-3100. Located directly on the boardwalk with an unobstructed view, this casual restaurant offers patio or indoor dining. Food preparation is straightforward — nothing fancy, but fresh, wholesome, and offering large portions. Thirty appetizers available in the bar. Combination dinners with steak and seafood are expensive. Brunch is served Saturday and Sunday, 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Breakfast, lunch, and dinner daily. Low to expensive.

MIDWAY, OLD TOWN & MISSION VALLEY

CAFE COYOTE 2461 San Diego Avenue, Old Town, 291-4695. Cafe Coyote is a good spot for a light Mexican meal with Southwest influences. Best bets à la carte are black bean chili, quesadilla with papaya relish, carne asada, carnitas, and Margarita chicken. Breakfast includes blue corn pancakes and American dishes. Young adults gather here. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Low.

EL TORILOFE 6130 Friars Road (between I-163 and Sea World Drive), 295-2087. Popular for over a decade, this Mexican restaurant with two seating areas serves Mexico City-style food that's not too spicy and uses 100 percent vegetable oils. Best bets are the fine preparations of carne asada and the sensuous, many layered pastel Aztecs. All vegetarian dishes filled with cheese. Very tasty food. Lunch, Monday through Saturday; dinner nightly. Low to moderate.

FABIOLA'S CAFE AND GALLERY 3556 Midway Drive, 225-0308. Seek out this family-owned-and-operated restaurant for an alerful Lebanese and Greek food. The owner, a noted artist, displays his paintings on the dining room walls. The extensive menu offers excellent lamb, stuffed grape leaves, and a wide selection of exotic vegetarian meals. Copious all-you-can-eat buffet available at lunch or dinner in addition to the regular menu. Open 24 hours, the cole will prepare an astonishing Lebanese feast at low cost. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate.

RUSTY PELICAN 5010 Mission Center Road, 291-4974. This is a very good spot for fish and seafood. The menu is the same as at the La Jolla branch. The barbecue dinner for $8.95 to $11.95 (soup or salad, entrée, vegetable, dessert, and tea, coffee, or soft drink) is served daily, starts at 4:00 p.m. and ends at 6:00 p.m. Open daily, lunch and dinner Monday through Saturday. Sunday, all-you-can-eat buffet brunch from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. and dinner from 4:00 p.m. Moderate to expensive.

EAST COUNTY & STATE COLLEGE

ALPINE a.a. 2225 Alpine Boulevard, Alpine, 445-5472. If you're a beef lover, arrive on Sunday after 2:30 p.m. for the mountainer cut of prime rib of beef, available the day only, for $12.95. Also recommended is the Texas burger served on a Kaiser roll with steak fries. Stay with beef here. Dark interior with large booths. Very crowded for both brunch and dinner on Sunday. Early bird dinner Monday through Saturday for $7.95. Call for hours. Open daily. Lunch Monday through Saturday, dinner nightly. Brunch Sunday. Low moderate to expensive.

CASA BLANCA 7956 La Mesa Boulevard, La Mesa, 466-9375. This contemporary Mexican restaurant with its low-fat sauces serves dishes that are prepared for you individually. Combination plates that include steak offer great value. You'll love the owner, the two fireplaces, the fresh food. Closed Monday. Lunch and dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Same menu lunch and dinner, but lunch specials available Tuesday through Friday. Low to low moderate.

CLAIM JUMPER 5540 Grossmont Center Drive (across from Montgomery Ward), La Mesa, 469-2622. The portions are so large they elicit gasps (the prime rib served weekends is 24 ounces). The food isn't memorable, just more than any one person can eat. Among the attractions, every day are the huge salad bar, barbecued chicken, ribs, and turkey dinners. Open daily, call for hours. Count on wait on weekends. Low to expensive.

LA MESA OCEAN GRILLE 4589 SEAFOOD MARKET 5465 Lake Murray Boulevard, La Mesa, 463-1548. Fish and seafood of good quality served in large white roses with huge TV. Food is served fast but it's not fast food. Fine for quick meal or takeout. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Low.

THE LIVING ROOM 5950 El Cajon Boulevard, 286-8434. This cafe/coffee house, a favorite of university students, is a cottage painted yellow inside. Interesting menu offers scrambled egg, quiche, salads, and chicken in a cream sauce places in a crust and served by the slice. Desserts and all other items are prepared on the premises. Top price is $6.25. Open daily, 6:00 a.m. to 2:00 a.m. Branches in La Jolla, at 5010 Prospect Street, 459-0187, and Hillcrest, at 1417 University Avenue, 295-7911. Open daily.

SYALA RESTAURANT 6962 University Avenue, La Mesa, 464-7745. Authentic Ethiopian food is served in a large dining room by loving owners.

We're going to be the same new store we've always been, and more.

We're always looking for ways to make our stores more fun and exciting. So, we've decided to change our name from Juice Club to Jamba Juice. Jamba means to celebrate. But don't worry, even though we're changing our name, our smoothies will still taste great.

Calendar RESTAURANTS

The best bets are sambousa or stuffed pastries, the chicken stew with hard-boiled egg, and sliced beef. Or, order a sampler platter. All food served over injera, a spongy bread. Lunch, Saturday and Sunday; dinner, nightly. Low

CENTRAL SAN DIEGO

CANYON SEAFOOD RESTAURANT 4134 University Avenue, 281-6008. The dim sum, served Monday through Friday from 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m., is outstanding, but the variety increases on weekends. Be sure to arrive early Saturday and Sunday for dim sum from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. At dinner, try whole fish in ginger, fresh clams and scallops. Open daily, lunch, dim sum, dinner. Low.

RED SEA RESTAURANT 4757 University Avenue, East San Diego, 285-8722. This Ethiopian restaurant of 8 is a charming bar and authentic Ethiopian cooking. All preparations are served over injera, a sponge-like bread. Chicken fares better here than beef, which tends to be chewy. Chicken wat (stew) with hard-boiled egg and the veg sampler plate are among your best bets. On weekends students congregate here, and it's very lively. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Low.

ZIA'S AFGHAN CAFE 4118 30th Street, 295-9671. This storefront cafe with only eight tables serves inexpensive but very well-prepared Afghan food. Try three-bean soup, stuffed pockets appetizers, banana squash with spicy yogurt sauce. Lunch and dinner buffet of Jasmine rice with six toppings for $4.95. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Top price $4.99. Low.

UPTOWN

BAKED BY ETTA 3635 India Street, 291-4074. All the baked goods that you loved are at the new location. Especially noted for special orders of rugelach, cookies, or million bars. Orders may be faxed (291-4686), and delivery is available. Fabulous chocolate chip cookies and apple muffins. Open Monday through Friday 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. and for special pickups Saturday.

BANZAI CANTINA, NOC 3916 Street, 298-6388. The menu offers Japanese specialties as well as Mexican dishes. Service is fast, the atmosphere is soothing, and you may dine here at affordable prices. This place is full of surprises. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Moderate.

BIG CITY BAGELS 3030 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 574-7878. The big attraction consists of about nine variation of light cream cheese: vegetable, sun-dried tomato, strawberry, and cinnamon walnut raisin. Lunch specials are $4.39 for sandwich and drink plus chips. Open daily.

BOMBAY EXOTIC CUISINE OF INDIA 3975 Fifth Avenue, Hillcrest Cinemas complex, 298-3155. Don't miss the elegant food, the lovely setting, the loving service. Owned by the former proprietors of Monsoon. You will find the food subtle and sophisticated. This Indian restaurant is a blessing to our community. All-you-can-eat buffet lunch $5.95 daily. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Low to upper moderate.

CAFE ALSACE 3628 Fifth Avenue, Hillcrest, 295-8880. Very fine Thai food is served here, and the decor, service, and cuisine are uniformly appealing. However, the food tends to be very spicy. If you want milder dishes, be sure to say so. Note that you can make a meal from appetizers, all of which are mild. Closed Sunday. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner, Monday through Saturday. Moderate.

COTTAGE CAFE 2321 Fifth Avenue (corner of Juniper), 696-0071. Russian and Polish dinners are served: excellent soups, which include borscht; good chicken Kiev; stuffed cabbage (also vegetarian style); perogi and pulmeni (stuffed dumplings). All dinners prepared home-style by loving mom and pop. Simple but pleasant surroundings. Russian and Polish items as well as sandwiches at lunch. Lovely garden patio, breezy food. Open daily for breakfast and lunch; dinner Friday and Saturday. Low to low moderate.

EXTRAORDINARY DESSERTS 2929 Fifth Avenue, 294-7001. If you've been searching for a place to have dessert after a movie or other cultural event, keep this dessert cafe in mind. The baker-owner prepares sensuous cakes, tarts, cookies, and all manner of chocolate goodies. Teas and coffees are uniformly good. In the summer, the patio is especially charming. Please note the late hours: Sunday through Thursday to 11:00 p.m. and Friday and Saturday to midnight.

THE GATHERING 902 West Washington, Mission Hills, 260-0400. The lunch menu, which is served all day to closing, is an especially good bargain. Lunch items served with soup or fries or fruit. Select soup for hearty meal. Dinner special: change nightly. American food. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Low to moderate.

THE PARKHOUSE EATERY 4574 Park Boulevard, Hillcrest, 295-7275. Small house provides charming setting for dining. Eclectic menu is prepared with average competence. You can make a meal from list of appetizers. Closed Tuesday. Open breakfast, lunch, and dinner, Wednesday through Monday. Low to moderate.

DOWNTOWN

ALIZÉ 777 Front Street, Paladion building, downtown, 234-0411. Don't miss this luxurious dining room at the top of the building with its fixed price, four-course French-Caribbean dinners. Excellent a la carte lunch has less exotic items. Dinner includes appetizer, choice of soup or salad, dessert. Stunning presentation and excellent value. Open Monday through Saturday for lunch and dinner; Sun-Tue., dinner only. Expensive.

BELLA LUNA 748 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp Quarter, 239-3222. This delightful restaurant serves recipes from the isle of Capri, Italy. The entrées, with their light sauces, are quite stunning, especially the bread of chicken and the rack of lamb. The room is decorated with pictures of the moon, and the cooking demonstration (8 at 10am) is something new under the beautiful moon. Open for lunch Monday through Saturday; dinner nightly, to midnight Friday and Saturday. Moderate.

BISTRO BACCO 420 J Street (Fourth and J), 235-3937. Although the decor is somewhat glitzy and the high ceiling does little to muffle the noise, you'll find excellent French and Italian food here. Sauces are subtle, light, and nostalgic. Pastas are especially good, but don't overlook the fresh fish or the bouillabaisse. For more privacy, ask for the room in the rear. Open daily, lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner nightly, from 5:30 p.m. Moderate to expensive.

BLUE POINT COASTAL CUISINE 365 Fifth Avenue (at Market), 233-4623. Very clean atmosphere and menu — mostly fish and seafood — to match. You can eat appetizers at the bar, but best bets are eight-fish entrées or seafood and crab cakes served with lots of organic vegetables. A welcome addition to downtown. Dinner only, from 5:00 p.m. Expensive.

CROCE'S RESTAURANT AND JAZZ BAR 802 Fifth Avenue, 233-4355. If you enjoy premium soft drinks open to the street and nightly jazz in the adjoining room, try Croce's. The chef prepares excellent appetizers, pastas, salads, and entrées. Menus change seasonally. Outdoor as well as indoor seating. Nightly jazz. Dinner only. Moderate to expensive.

KARL STRAUSS' OLD COLUMBIA BREWERY AND GRILL 1157 Columbia Street (between B and C Streets), 234-2739. The star attractions here are the ales and beers brewed on the premises. Up to a dozen beers may be available. Food includes burgers, pastas, soup and salad, fish and chips, grilled sausage. Dining worldwide the movie can be shattering, but it's fun. Lunch and dinner daily. Low to low moderate. Branch at 9675 Scranton Road, Sorrento Valley. 587-2739. Call for hours.

LA GRAN TAPA 611 B Street, 234-8272. Here is a good spot for a light meal, especially before or after a cultural event. Tapas, Spanish appetizers, are prepared hot or cold, and the seafood, such as shrimp in sherry sauce and fresh octopus, is always fine. Try tortilla espatola (cold potato and egg "pie") and paella. Lively, casual atmosphere. Lunch Monday through Friday. Dinner nightly, late hours on the weekend. Low to expensive.

LA ESTRADA 702 Fifth Avenue (at Fifth and G), 239-3400. The setting is lovely, but the Northern Italian food preparation may be uneven. Stay with pasta dishes and low-priced items. Open daily for lunch and dinner, continuous service. Late hours weekends. Moderate to expensive.

LE FONTAINEBLEAU Westgate Hotel, 1055 Second Avenue, 238-1818. The newly redecorated room is both romantic and elegant. Considering the sumptuous surroundings, the food is fairly priced. Finest quality fish and meat. Impeccable service and unobtrusive piano player. First-rate for a romantic evening. Open Monday through Saturday for dinner only. Elegant Sunday brunch. Upper moderate to expensive.

SPUZZI (pronounced Fuzzi) 340 Fifth Avenue, 231-2323. At this cafe, you'll find light Italian dishes. Early bird dinner daily, 4:00 to 6:30 p.m. Happy hour Tuesday through Friday includes free buffet. Must make reservations Friday and Saturday. Lunch, Monday through Saturday. dinner nightly. Moderate to expensive.

TARA 555 Fifth Avenue, 338-0555. This restaurant is a knockout. Gorgeous food and beautiful setting. A full sushi bar is presided over by Fuji (formerly at Cafe Japengo). Entrées, which combine Asian and Continental elements, can be ordered in half portions. Don't miss lemgrass and scallop, filet mignon, salmon sauté. Highly satisfying food at prices you can afford. Open nightly; dinners only. Low to expensive.

SOUTH BAY & CORONADO

CENTER CUT RESTAURANT 534 Broadway, Chula Vista, 476-1144. You'll enjoy the building and the appealing decor, as well as the excellent service. The American cuisine is straightforward and well-prepared. Prices of entrée includes soup or salad — or lettuce salad. Fish and seafood are fine. Open daily for lunch and dinner (breakfast items on Sunday lunch menu). Expensive.

JAKE'S SAN DIEGO BAY 570 Marina Parkway, Chula Vista Marina, 476-0400. The romantic setting is a major plus for this restaurant. The vistas are stunning; from any table you'll have a view. The menu is mostly fish and seafood, competent in preparation. But you can't count on too many culinary surprises. Lunch, Monday through Saturday (Saturday lunch in bayside grill only), dinner nightly. Sunday buffet brunch, all you can eat with free-flowing champagne, $13.95. Moderate to expensive.

PEDRE'S, the Landing, 1201 First Street, Coronado, 437-4474. This waterfront fish and seafood restaurant offers a gorgeous view and interior waterfalls. The menu changes daily. The portions are huge. Reservations recommended. Open daily, lunch and dinner; Sunday brunch includes items from menu. Expensive.

TIJUANA

(The prefix for all Tijuana numbers is 011-52-66. From the United States use the prefix 011-52-66 and the city code 'Tijuana' when calling in Tijuana; use only the restaurant's six-digit number.)

CHIRO IM No. 1050, Avenida Revolución (corner of Seventh and Avenida Revolución), 85-49-55. Noted for its Basque-style food, this restaurant offers squid in its own ink, broiled mushrooms, hot crusty rolls served with blue cheese, paella, and fresh fish. The setting, tables, and silverware are simple and unpretentious, and, for many years, this restaurant has not capitulated to Americanization. Closed Wednesday. Open Thursday through Tuesday, 11:30 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. Low to moderate.

EL RODEO 1647 Blvd. Salinas, 86-56-40. Steak lovers will have a field day here with a variety of cuts, some cooked right at your table. The accompaniments are wonderful: an appetizer and quesadilla, a crisp salad, beans served in their own liquid — even a dessert is included in the price of the entrée. Cheese soup, burritos, and crêpe are also available. Viaporte decor, wood-paneled rooms. Good value if you like beef. Open daily. Take Avenida Revolución until it bends to the left to become Agua Caliente, proceed past the twin high-rise towers. Turn left, and left again, onto the one-way street, Blvd. Salinas. El Rodeo is on the right side of the street. Highly visible and easy to find. Moderate.

LA ESCONDIDA Santa Monica #1 in Fraccionamiento La Palmas, 81-44-58. "The Hidden One," located in a converted mansion, hosts two gardens and patio dining, and is especially beautiful at night. The roasted kids, goat and roasted quail, and the Chateaubriand (for two) are all worthwhile. Very civilized experience, complete with piano player on Fridays and Saturdays. Take Revolución until it bends to the left to become Agua Caliente. Proceed on Agua Caliente past the racetrack, approximately one half mile. Turn right at Las Palmas. Two short blocks up, turn left at the "Pescadería Playas" sign. The entryway to La Escondida is straight ahead. Open daily, 8:00 a.m. to 1:00 a.m. Moderate.

PALMIRA RESTAURANT AND BAR Cantamar (halfway to Ensenada), 14-12-03. The A-frame building looks like a thatched hut and has two interior floors and an upper- and lower-level patio. Food is American, French, and Continental with a few Mexican dishes. Lots of atmosphere and fine service. Beefs are daily fresh fish. Watch your costs here as prices rival good American restaurants. Open for breakfast Saturday and Sunday, lunch and dinner daily. Take Ensenada Cuota road to Cantamar exit. Turn right. Two toll charges. (Free road 46-1/2 km Carretera Ensenada.) Moderate to expensive.

OFF THE CUFF by Ernie Grimm

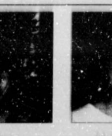
Have we lost our sense of decency?

Karen Utley
Bookseller
Normal Heights

No, I'd say the standards have changed. I think things have changed according to the level of technology that we have and having information more readily available. People tend to grow up a little bit quicker. People want to experience things at an earlier age and they experience more things. Does that lower our decency? No, not really. I think decency is just a matter of a person's experience. It's no different now from, say, 10 years ago. If people aren't shocked at things as much as they used to be, it's because we have access to more information. These days and most of the time when I read a policeman until you found out that one raped and murdered a girl. It's a product of the information age. Sometimes too much information is not good. Modesty is not upheld these days either, but I think most people still have a sense of it. In our society, we've taught girls to be free and not be bashful so they wear as little as possible. Whether that is decent or not is really hard to say. As we've gained more freedoms like that, we've lost the structure we used to have.

Jennifer Andersen
Human Resources
Tacoma, Washington

I don't think today's society has lost its sense of decency. However, I do think we ignore our innate sense of what is decent. I believe people know right from the start what is right and what is wrong. Relief in God nurtures this sense, but our selfish choices block it out. I do have hope that one day our society will again dress modestly, communicate respectfully, and show our decency more often with selfless pursuits. This return to what is decent can only come about through each individual's choice to adhere to his sense of the good and decent.



J. Chaddock
Retired
Loma Portal

That's not an easy question. You can't keep the same values you had in 1930 with the world the way it is now. The values have changed, the structure has changed, everyone's life has changed. There's a lot looser now. Just they were. Nobody wants to go back to the way it was but I think a lot of people would like to have more structure and standards in their lives. We have very few authority figures today because all authority figures have been pulled down: politicians, police, judges, even parents have all been pulled down by people who live exposed them. It used to be the man treated a policeman until you found out that one raped and murdered a girl. It's a product of the information age. Sometimes too much information is not good. Modesty is not upheld these days either, but I think most people still have a sense of it. In our society, we've taught girls to be free and not be bashful so they wear as little as possible. Whether that is decent or not is really hard to say. As we've gained more freedoms like that, we've lost the structure we used to have.

Molly McNamara
Law Student
Cleveland, Ohio

Yes, I think we have. No one expects people to conform to standards of behavior anymore. In the past, a bit of scandal could ruin the career of a politician, an actor, or any public figure. Now, it seems like no behavior is indecent enough to hurt someone's reputation or popularity. Ingrid Bergman's career was damaged by her having an illegitimate child while, recently, Madonna's popularity surged when she had an illegitimate child. Our vice president, first lady, and especially our president are all accused of things that in the past would have constituted major scandals and public relations nightmares. Now, the newspapers talk about these things as if there is a little public outcry but that's it. They keep their jobs and even get reelected.

Carolyn Prentice
Piano Teacher
El Cajon

I think society has lost its sense of decency. I think people can't sense whether they are decent or not anymore. We're going through something like the last days of ancient Rome when people began to think that anything was cool and all right and it's okay to have everything out in the open, and we've become like savage beasts. I have four sons and I think they are committed to preservation of their status, a preservation of their own ideals and morals, but they are certainly the exception to the rule. I think that people nowadays think that's not something that is terribly important yet it really is. We've been deceived, and I don't know what deceived is. There is this sense these days that freedom means acting in any manner you want to act, but to really be free one must be committed to a set of ideals.

RESPOND TO PHONE MATCHES
1-900-844-6282
$1.49/minute, $1.99 first minute (18+ only)
To respond to Reader Phone Matches™ ads call 1-900-844-MATCH (844-6282) any time, 24 hours a day!
If you choose an ad from the Phone Matches™ column, use the 5-digit mailbox number printed in the ad to listen to the person's introduction and leave a response. (An advertiser may not have recorded an introduction by the time you call. If not, you can still leave a message in his or her mailbox.) The date at the end of the ad is the last day to reply to the mailbox. Or you can "browse" through all the introductions and respond to the ones that suit you. You must have a touch-tone phone. Use of cordless phones should be avoided as some models may cause the system not to respond.
The charge for using Phone Matches™ will appear on your phone bill under "DATING." If you have any questions, call 935-8900, x268.
If you're calling from a rotary phone, you cannot listen to box holders' introductions. To use the system, stay on the line until you hear the rotary phone instructions. After the tone, leave your message including the number of the mailbox you're responding to. Rotary phone users can only respond to one ad per call, you must call back to respond to another ad.

Place your Reader roommate ad today and get responses tomorrow!

Call 235-2415 day or night.

For just $16 per week, you receive:

- A 25-word printed ad in the Reader
- Use of a 24-hour voice mailbox service
- Placement on the Roommate Hotline

1. Pay with Visa, MasterCard, Discover, check, or cash. The cost is $16. No matter which payment option you choose, you must first call 235-2415 to place your ad.

2. Write your 25-word Roommate ad on the following worksheet and be ready to dictate it when requested. You will have one minute of recording time. Begin with the neighborhood, then describe the property and last the rent. After dictating 25 words for your printed ad, continue to further describe your available roommate situation. When you are finished recording, press 2.

3. Your print ad may not describe you or the person you are seeking.

1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10
11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20
21	22	23	24	25

4. The system dictates a mailbox number and security code.

MAILBOX NUMBER _____ SECURITY CODE _____

5. To retrieve your messages call 235-2415. You may get responses on the Hotline before your ad is printed, so call frequently. Messages are erased after you hear them, so have pen and paper ready. Your mailbox will expire at midnight Wednesday, six days after publication.

6. The deadline for placing voice mail ads is Monday at 6 pm; however, print-only ads can be placed until Tuesday at 6 pm by calling 235-8200. All voice mail ads will be placed on the Hotline within 24 hours. So call today! No cancellations accepted.

7. Renew your mailbox and ad if you don't need to make any changes in your ad copy or mailbox recording. Call 235-2415 and choose the renewal option. You may renew your mailbox any time Thursday through 6 pm Monday.

8. Advertisers are responsible for checking their Roommate ads for accuracy and reporting errors by 6 pm Monday, following publication. Call 235-6200.

Mail-in payment: Reader Roommate Line P.O. Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186

Take That Stupid Thumb Out of Your Mouth!

By Anne Albright

Kid Stuff

Rebecca sucks her thumb. She didn't always. Some babies find their thumbs early. Lucy started sucking her fingers five months ago, almost as soon as she was born. When Lucy slept through the night at two months, I would creep into her room and gaze into her basket to make sure she was still breathing. I would find her lying on her tummy, eyes closed, face to the side, tiny, dimpled fist drawn up to her pink mouth, sucking, sucking, sucking.

Rebecca never sucked her thumb as a baby. She wouldn't even take a bottle. I breast-fed Rebecca until she was a year old. Then she drank from a sippy cup. Last summer, when Rebecca was three and a half, she started sucking her thumb. One day I found her lying on the couch staring into space. Her right hand worried her earlobe. Her left thumb sat snugly, wetly, inside her mouth. I hated the sight of my bright, articulate girl pretending to be a baby. I ignored Rebecca's thumb sucking and hoped she would stop.

She didn't. I found myself physically repulsed. One late summer morning, Rebecca got out of her bed early and climbed under the covers with my husband Jack and me. I lay on my side, my seven-month-pregnant belly nestled like a round duffel bag in the curve of my body. Rebecca curled herself against my back and stuck her thumb in her mouth. The soggy "thup thup thup" so close to my ear made me pull away. Rebecca scooted closer. The sucking sound grew louder. I turned back to her the covers and heaved my great bulk out of bed. Rebecca rolled to the other side and snuggled against Jack. Jack doesn't care. Jack sucked his thumb until he was seven.

When Rebecca started preschool in September, I thought she might stop sucking her thumb. "She won't see any of the other kids sucking their thumbs," I told Jack. But even day when Jack or I drove to school to pick Rebecca up after lunch, we saw all the other children swinging, sliding, climbing on the monkey bars. Rebecca sucked her thumb, played with her ear, and walked around the playground behind her teacher Anna.

Jack and I asked a therapist friend about Rebecca's thumb sucking. "Don't worry," he told us. "Thumb sucking is a self-comforting behavior. When she gets enough peer pressure to stop, she'll stop. In the meantime, don't bug her about it. The more you bug her, the more she'll feel the need to comfort herself, the more she'll suck her thumb."

I tried not to say anything that would make Rebecca self-conscious. Even when her thumb sucking drove me crazy. Even when we were in public and I wanted to scream, "Take that stupid thumb out of your mouth! People will think you're insecure and I'm a bad mother."

Older people, friends of Jack's parents, teased Rebecca. "What's that in your mouth?" they would ask, touching Rebecca's arm. "Taste pretty good?" Rebecca just put her head down, sucked harder, and gazed up at them from under her long eyelashes.

Rebecca tried to get her two-year-old sister Angela to join the thumb sucking. One day I drove Rebecca, Angela, and Lucy over to my parents' house for lunch. Angela sat in her car seat in the minivan's back seat. Rebecca sat next to her. Lucy sat facing backward in a car seat strapped to the middle seat. Halfway to my parents', Angela dropped her bottle and let out an anguished cry. "Mo bobbo, mo bobbo."

Jack doesn't care. Jack sucked his thumb until he was seven.

"Sweetie, I can't reach your bottle," I explained maneuvering through traffic. "You'll have to wait until we get to Grandma and Grandpa's."

"Angie," Rebecca piped up, "just suck your thumb like I do. Watch." Rebecca popped her thumb into her mouth. Angela watched Rebecca for a moment, then awkwardly tried to imitate her sister.

"Great," I thought, watching the girls sucking away in the rear-view mirror. "That's all I need."

Rebecca's peer pressure finally arrived. Last week, I sat on the edge of the bathtub and watched warm water and bubbles engulf Rebecca's and Angela's naked bodies. When I turned off the water, Rebecca leaned toward me. "Mommy," she whispered. "I have something to tell you."

"What is it, sweetie?" I dunked a washcloth in the warm, soapy water and sobbed bubbles into Rebecca's back.

Rebecca put her head down and paused for a few seconds.

"What is it?" I asked again. "You can tell me."

I could barely hear Rebecca's voice. "My friends at school make fun of me when I suck my thumb."

I squeezed more warm water on Rebecca's shoulders and washed under her neck. "I'm sorry, sweetie. Who makes fun of you?"

"David."

"What does he say?"

Rebecca imitated a smarmy boy's voice, "Ooooch, Re-BEC-ca."

I rung out the washcloth and passed it gently over Rebecca's fine, high forehead. Her saucer blue eyes looked up at me. "Well," I said, "do you tell David that it's not nice to talk that way?"

"No."

"Next time, just say, 'David, that's not very nice. Don't talk to me that way.'"

"Okay," Rebecca seemed satisfied.

"Or, you could not suck your thumb at school and just suck it at home."

Rebecca didn't say a word.
