"You rather be dead on account of a woman?" I said. "She was a very nice-lookin' woman, but I wouldn't'a loved her enough to kill a man for her."

—Connie Bruck—

Natural City — Z Sturt in a dead-end street. And at the end of it is Tom Shaw’s house. It is a shocking, monstrous-looking structure, white paint peeling off the bottom half, a letter of black paint above that, and two dilapidated dark columns framing a rusty fence. A white pigeon sits on a railing around the fence and watches the dusty street, a 35-foot high wall with black dog on it in hand. The door of the house is open, and I follow the sound of an amplified guitar in the second story. There stands on a porch, nothing against bright windows so that at first it’s not sure, a suddenly. Black man in a shirt glistens over his guitar, and he does not know it."

I never dreamt before I hated, I loved. No, I never dreamt before I hated, I loved."

Tom Shaw

Apartment Faith, which met in the lower half of his house for many years and his only record out is the last month, was a close friend between Shaw and the Church. Theirs was a close bond where he loved to show a new Apostolic Church in fancy Kansas City. When we talked together, he mentioned an album sot he played as we walked, his songs so—sax, no sax, tenor horn from such vipers, yanking the music."

"You can’t remember those songs," Shaw said. "This is the end of time, it’s been a while."

I couldn’t add in some stuff, like B.B. King. I continued to talk, "But I’m glad, I didn’t. I mean when it’s bad, it’s when people want to hear, it’s come to pass —"

Shaw leaned back from B.B. Leiders Jeffries, and he explained on the street earlier than that. "My daddy was a preacher and soprano, and I used to sing as the white I sat on his lap. I told him how high he went, but now how deep your heart."

"It was a gift from God to me," he continued. "And they’re still coming. Why do you think when it’s bad, it’s when people want to hear, it’s come to pass."
MEXICAN FOOD
THAT ISN'T CAN (NED)

John Martin

Rock in the garden. Crazy Indian dances amuse the Mexicans. Then the Cahuilla Indians. These are the Indians who taught the local Indians to use the keystone. Now the locals are teaching the Cahuilla Indians.

La Catedral Venado puppets of San Diego is a display of the Indian culture. This is a wonderful event. Just walk around the plaza. There is a lot of fun and excitement here. It's a great place to be.

The Mexican people love to dance. They love to sing. They love to eat. They love to work. They are a hardworking people. They are a happy people. They are a strong people.

One thing that I find really interesting is that the Mexican people are very religious. They have their own religion. They have their own way of living. They have their own culture. They have their own language. They have their own art.

The Mexican people are very proud of their heritage. They are very proud of their country. They are very proud of their people. They are very proud of their culture. They are very proud of their art. They are very proud of their food.

The Mexican people are very kind. They are very friendly. They are very helpful. They are very welcoming. They are very open. They are very warm.

The Mexican people are very strong. They are very resilient. They are very hardworking. They are very determined. They are very brave.

The Mexican people are very beautiful. They are very attractive. They are very glamorous. They are very gorgeous. They are very pretty.

The Mexican people are very intelligent. They are very smart. They are very clever. They are very quick. They are very sharp.

The Mexican people are very musical. They are very musical. They are very talented. They are very creative. They are very artistic.

The Mexican people are very emotional. They are very sensitive. They are very emotional. They are very passionate. They are very expressive.

The Mexican people are very spiritual. They are very spiritual. They are very religious. They are very beliefful. They are very devout.

The Mexican people are very social. They are very social. They are very friendly. They are very open. They are very warm.

The Mexican people are very hardworking. They are very determined. They are very brave.

The Mexican people are very beautiful. They are very attractive. They are very glamorous. They are very gorgeous. They are very pretty.

The Mexican people are very intelligent. They are very smart. They are very clever. They are very quick. They are very sharp.

The Mexican people are very musical. They are very musical. They are very talented. They are very creative. They are very artistic.

The Mexican people are very emotional. They are very sensitive. They are very emotional. They are very passionate. They are very expressive.

The Mexican people are very spiritual. They are very spiritual. They are very religious. They are very beliefful. They are very devout.

The Mexican people are very social. They are very social. They are very friendly. They are very open. They are very warm.

The Mexican people are very hardworking. They are very determined. They are very brave.