What did you do in the war on inflation Daddy?

-Jane Weisman Stein-

While waiting for the latest inflation figures, I decided to call my father, an economist, to get his perspective on the situation.

"You know, inflation is a complex issue," he said. "It's not just about prices. It's about how much real income people are losing. It's about policies. It's about expectations."

I asked him if he thought the government was doing enough.

"I think they're doing what they can," he replied. "But it's a challenge. It's a constantly evolving situation."

We talked about the importance of being informed about economic issues and how to make sense of the news.

"It's all about perspective," he said. "We need to look at the big picture, not just the headlines."
Sisterhood Before Its Time

Jane Fox

The first two games of the San Diego State basketball team were like those of a high school team. The girls played with the zest and spirit that has characterized the program for three years. They were good, but not great. They played with a degree of excitement and enthusiasm that was evident throughout the season.

The team's performance continued to improve as the season progressed. Their skills and strategies became more refined, and they started to dominate their opponents. The team's success was due in part to the leadership of their captain, who always put the team's interests above her own. This leadership was evident in her ability to motivate her teammates and to make smart decisions during games.

The team's victory in the final game of the season was a testament to their hard work and determination. They played with a relentless intensity and aggression, and they never gave up, even when the odds were against them. Their success was a source of pride for the entire team, and it was clear that they had achieved a great deal.

In conclusion, the team's performance during the season was impressive. They showed great skill and teamwork, and they demonstrated a strong commitment to the sport. Their victory in the final game was a just reward for their hard work and dedication, and it was a fitting end to a season that will be remembered for years to come.

THE KENTUCKY THOUSAND
A Basic Library of Kentuckiana in Microfiche

Kentuckiana will celebrate her bicentennial in 1774 and 1973. An official commission has recently been appointed to organize the celebration, and societies and educational institutions are actively beginning to make plans to observe the 200th anniversary of the settlement at Harrodsburg and Boonesborough.

Schools and colleges are thinking in terms of special exercises for students, and local civic organizations and study clubs will have luncheon and dinner groups on the history of the Commonwealth. Essays by a few great writers such as Lexington, Louisville, and Bowling Green, courses for the study of Kentucky history are relatively new. For over fifteen years the Lost Cause Press has been developing a basic library of Kentuckiana in microfiche, and it will be our contribution to the Bicentennial to make these materials available in a form which are a convenience for study and research in our history.

Here is a comprehensive library of Kentuckiana which cannot be duplicated elsewhere. Nearly all of the titles are out of print, and many are unique copies of documents such as the Library of Congress, the University of Kentucky, and the archives of private individuals. Not only the history of the Commonwealth is covered, but also the literature, the geography, the politics and government, the economics and all other aspects of our culture.

And it cannot be too strongly emphasized that Kentuckiana, the future for investigation of the Commonwealth and the new world, indeed, to the entire west, is literally the mother of the west.
