Step Right Up, Folks!

— Anne Hutchison —

With the fair in full swing, the Stanley Palm Garden has become a bustling mecca. The air is thick with the scent of flowers and the sounds of music. People of all ages gather to enjoy the rides, games, and attractions. The streets are alive with the energy of the crowds.

But behind the fun and games, there's a darker side. A man known only as the "Kitchen Magic man," who is said to be far more dangerous than a Kitchen Queen could ever be. Beware entering the grounds by the west gate. You'll walk right into the arms of the Kitchen Magic man, who is far more dangerous than a Kitchen Queen ever could have been.

The fair is a breeding ground for all manner of things, both good and bad. And the Kitchen Magic man is one of the worst. He preys on the people, taking advantage of their fears and weaknesses.

But don't let him scare you. The fair is still a place of wonder and joy. So come out and enjoy the rides, the games, and the music. But be careful. The Kitchen Magic man is always lurking, ready to strike at any moment.

Beware the fair. Beware the Kitchen Magic man. He's waiting for you.
