The temple sits on the bluffs at the southern edge of Encinitas, perched beside the ocean and the community like a kind of temple to the sea itself. From the observation deck, you can see halfway around the world and dropped back surprisingly, like some form of home in The Wizard of Oz. In a way, it’s an easy reminder that boundaries, geographical, philosophical, or otherwise defined, aren’t so neat as we might imagine.

In the center, the Self-Realization Fellowship temple is a landmark. Its gleaming white walls and gold, outdoor-like ambience serve as a marker for their playground below—one of the first points of attraction in California—“Haven.”

In the garden, the SRF is a temple of gods who run a daily ad in a local newspaper but Paule explains why they are opposed to such marketing as the essence of any religion is understanding and the teachings of the masters were distinct from such consumption.

To the taxpayer, the SRF is a fellow taxpayer.

To other churches, it’s competition.

And to the countries who flock to North County beaches, the temple is something to point out to the kids in the.\\ Self-Realization Fellowship, founded by Yogananda, is a spiritual organization in India. Today there are several Self-Realization Fellowship temples around the world, including in California and India. Yogananda is well-known for his teachings and his works, which include A Pathway to God. Yogananda himself died at the center in California in 1947.

In 1970 he committed suicide at the center in California and his body was cremated. His remains were sent to India for burial in a ceremony attended by thousands of his followers. After his death, the SRF continued to grow and today has centers and temples around the world.
