ASHES TO ASHES
A CHEAPER WAY TO DIE

"When a body is in a box, it is not an active living person. It's a corpse and everyone's memory is of that. I wouldn't be caught dead in a casket."

By Frank Gierasch

Patronizes: the remains of a man who lived a single life of love and devotion. The family owns one of America's oldest funeral homes, and the business has been a part of the community for generations. The man has been cremated and his ashes are to be scattered at sea. The family has decided to hold a memorial service, and invited friends and relatives to attend. The service will be held at the family's mortuary, and will include a religious ceremony and a scattering ceremony. The family has been preparing for the event for weeks, and is looking forward to it. The man's family has been through many deaths in the past, and the experience has been difficult. But this time, they feel it will be different. They feel closer to him, and are looking forward to being able to scatter his ashes at sea. The family has prepared a large urn to hold the ashes, and will be accompanied by a boat to scatter them. The event will be held on a beautiful day, and the family is looking forward to the occasion. There is usually a differentiation between "musician" and "piano players," and almost always, the dividing factor is the "historicism" of the music being performed and the extent of the player's knowledge of the music's history. By those criteria, Amor Robinson is a pianist and Steve Allen is a piano player. In the case of Bob Long, the dividing line becomes a little fuzzy.

The current crop of films is so varied that it’s hard to pick the winners. Some are charming; others are merely amusing. One cannot help but marvel at the talent of the actors and actresses. The performances are so varied that it’s hard to pick the best. The films range from the serious to the silly, and the acting is varied accordingly.

Zahlu Melita's conducting is like the BART railroad system in San Francisco: it is splendid when everything works right, but it does not inspire a great deal of confidence that you will reach your destination at all.

Zahlu Melita, the Australian conductor who is now head of the orchestra at the University of California, Berkeley, was scheduled to conduct a concert of contemporary music last Friday. But the concert was canceled because of technical difficulties.

Melita, who has conducted at UC Berkeley for two years, said he was surprised by the cancellation. "I've never had a problem conducting here before," he said. "I'm sure it was just a coincidence."
