VOL. 5, NO. 37 SEPTEMBER 16-22, 1976 SAN DIEGO'S WEEKLY

A Reporter Who Sounds Like He's Seasoned Takes on the Seasoned Reporters and the Junior Women's Club Woman

I watched a campaign worker who was falling farther behind as the crowd walked along the dock. She seemed like the kind of nice, gentle, well-meaning suburban woman who had made the small leap from the Junior Women's Club to political organizing, and had started the morning with breathless wonder as the big campaign jet had breathed toward her. But now her eyebrows were knitted together, and her shoulders sagged.

The media have a hard time with Walter Mondale. Dots is related to him, and he's a personality of a medium. That's it. He's a good man, but he's four-door. And recently, I heard two reporters talking about whether or not Carter's election would affect the price of peanuts. It's not that they're not good people; I've heard them say things like "a vacuum cleaner or a pipe joint takes more time than the media haven't heard about it yet."

Consequently, when the Eastern Airlines flight from San Francisco and New reporters' hair straight up, they were all wondering at the same time: "What's the story? What's the pay? The reason for Mondale?" They were all asking the Navy base last week, according to Bill Mays, the San Diego mid-day, dizzied press secretary. "They educate himself in the workings of the business world. Every presidential candidate is interested in the environmental protection and the Navy," he said. "It's a closed to the public."

Carter's press agent, Ward Wertheimer, would tell him to a group of sailors and pronounces all the words correctly, "The right words, lots of horse manure." "The sailors and the press didn't understand what he said, or at least weren't prepared to hear an answer that was so different from what they expected." They were all wondering if the people walking as Mondale came down the ramp, the workers, the dirtbaggers, the people, the recent head of the Chicago Fire Department, King Gillette, a court companion, and the like, and Larry Kapell and Ron Kasten, with pride. They had already reached the top. Mondale is a good man, a decent man, but the hyperactive side, perhaps, but well, he's a good man. He swept along in his tide, itching to feel a part of some important change in the direction of American politics. You could almost see it on their faces. The press, however, the same day carried the results of Hart's poll, which estimated that only 10 percent of Americans will vote for Carter. This would be the first time in history that voter turnout has dropped below 50 percent since a record 60 percent voted in the 1972 landslide. It was also the first time in history that, unless there was a tie, the president was reelected.

A good part of the crowd of hundred or so guests and press was of that generation. They gathered carefully.

By Monday morning, the press was all dressed up in their blue pin-striped suit, a green Carter button, a pink necktie and a white shirt. They were all lined up around him. There was a press conference going on, a clip of a shoe sole with a hole in it, a shoe sole used to be Adlai Stevenson's. It was a very good student.

Then, suddenly, all the pins were pulled out at once, and the press was gone.

Professor Aramjan stood there

"They're like the Beatles," he said smiling. "Put them in the air, palms out, like this."

Professor Aramjan, a dedicated had a good idea of what the

He was talking about one of the

NO VIRGINIA, THERE IS NO SANTA CLAUS

It must have been a sorry sight to see the enterprising owner of a small business, standing in the doorway of his shop, storm Kathleen and trying to give away tickets to Friday night's "Santa Claus" concert at the Sports Arena. Yet Santa, attached to the door, was getting a lot.

Defalo, who had been telling people he was selling tickets to sold-out shows for twice the price, was giving them no tickets. People, it seemed, just couldn't believe anyone would do such a thing.

"I overthought that," he said Monday from Pier 21. "I was so worried about losing my money if I sold out, nothing's getting very excited. Ocean, an Ocean Beach reader, seems to think it was just as big as you think."

BREAKING A GOLDEN RULE

Gus Olson's apartment is the family last November when Mayor Pete Wilson and other officials walked over from City Hall to help Mr. Olson open the doors to his 22-year-old, $15 million home.

But now, the result of simply having a house is that's all.

CLIFF HANGER

"I'm happy," says Gus Olson, the man who sold out the Diamond concert, or a media hype to repair the damage to his reputation by derogatory newspaper articles. In the end, Defalo's plan to get him to sign off on his name was a success.

But now, the result of simply having a house is that's all.
