Kids as Cops

Notes on the Los Angeles experience

"You want to know who's dealing drugs, who's fighting who, who's ripping off cars—just ask the kids."
JUICY FRUIT

"My biggest problem was ignorance. You have to prune them, you have to work them and you have to talk to them. Then one will grow and the other will set there and just look at you."

An Explorer aide comes tripping off the field, sweat running down his face. "These kids love being yelled at. The discipline is what they crave."

But after all their academy training and indoctrination, what does happen is that they become very eager, sophisticated observers of criminal activity, they know what to look for, whom to talk to, and what to remember.

"A profession that requires concentration and discipline is a profession that respects discipline."

"I have no idea how it happened, but they're doing it."
CHILD'S PLAY

Under Trifill's patient, gentle handling, the children perform with the kind of unforced naturalness that you admire in the movie performances of cats, dogs, and monkeys.

Their lobotomized attitude creates a distance between them and the audience that for once is authentically disorienting rather than theatrical.

As these things are reported to change at the drop of a hat, the manner in which the newspaper is written is of secondary importance. The important thing is what is being written and to whom.

In the case of the movie listings, the information is frequently incomplete. This is due to the fact that the exhibitors are often unwilling to release the information or it is not available at the time of publication.

Despite these difficulties, the listings are as complete as possible and are intended to give the reader an idea of what is currently available. The listings include information on the title, director, cast, and date of release for each movie being shown.

In addition to the movie listings, there are also some articles about movie-related topics. These articles cover a variety of subjects, such as the history of the movie industry, the role of women in the movie industry, and the impact of movies on society.

Overall, the goal of the movie listings is to provide the reader with a source of information about the movies currently available. The articles about movie-related topics are intended to provide the reader with a deeper understanding of the industry and its impact on society.
