HECK ON WHEELS

MARIA TAXIOLI

Noon Sunday at Blake's Restaurant on Otay Lakes Road, an unexpectedly chilly wind is blowing across the moderate-weather landscape. Such moderate weather, however, is not to be expected, however, in San Diego, because the locals on the big shiny Harley-Davidsons, BMWs, Hondas, etc., individually and in groups, are headed to the restaurant's parking lot. Blake's is the final destination of the "surprise run" sponsored by the San Diego Road Cruisers motorcycle club. What's currently worrying the club members is the subject of the emerging suspicion that they have driven themselves too far for the 160 members who signed up in San Diego, Kawasaki in El Cajon, more than four hours ago.

Sure, it was estimated that even if we should make it by noon and get there, we'd have to wait another hour at checkpoint because of the expected peppered ducking the first of a series of good-natured jokers about organizing abilities. This was the second of Gene Gottheber's first try at organizing these things, it is explained, and fellow club members were setting up the P.A. system and double-checking the order of fixtures to follow.

"I don't know what I have to do after high school?" he asks, looking expectantly for the automatic answer. When none comes, he says, "North. You'd send your kid north if you're a Yankee." Then he laughs. "Maybe people don't know what a Yankee is anymore."

Nobody cares if things get started one hour or so late out at the restaurant. Only it's a bit embarrassing for the club if clues such as those sending bewildered motorists all over the county.

By 2:30 all but ten have made through the 82-mile course and are hunkered down, inside where it's warm, clutching beers and merrily bickering with much head-scratching and cross-room banter.

A black and white photograph of a man standing next to a vintage motorcycle. The man is wearing a cap, a dark jacket over a light shirt, and trousers. He is standing on the right side of the frame, looking towards the camera. The motorcycle is positioned on the left, facing forward. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.

What these clubs have in common, besides a love of riding and a desire for good, clean fun, is a sense of mission. It is to change the image of motorcyclists in the public eye.
