Top Cat

Vince Miranda, king of the Pasycat Theaters, had blown into town and was visiting his new home in Balboa Park. It was past 9:30 p.m., little for the show, and Miranda, rapt as a kid at a movie, was watching the entertainment. Then came an interruption: two customers wanted to see "Topper," so he turned it into publisher Helen Copley and mayoral aide Bob Black. "I told them, 'I'm the darnedest man,'" Miranda noted. Then he sat quickly through the show, and when the lights came on, "White-lipped" over to Miranda, extended his hand, and said, "Thank you and your companion. But the anticipation of waiting for the visitors to come in must have turned sour." Copley's papers circumscribed Miranda's theater business, and he now wants to condemn Mirada properties, yet here they were, running to Vince for entertainment.

Lots of other upper crust in the lower depths, turn to Vince, like a one-man department store, seven rooms all. He's probably not making money for his Pasycat chain, the 30-some theaters he created which make him the last independent operator in the country (in San Diego he has the two Pasycats, three in Encinitas, one in La Jolla, and one in National City). However, he also owns about 15 percent of the newest movie theaters, including the Plaza, the Capitol, the Balboa, and the Coronado. And he's plowed the profits into other blinds of real estate, and he again has been invited to San Diego, some of his properties being sold, but others still old buildings such as the Hotel San Diego, the Hotel Peacock, the Hotel New Yorker, the 314 Hotel, one of San Diego's oldest houses, and turned it into the Off-Broadway Theater. There, he has staged legitimate productions, reportedly losing $20,000 a night, and he's reportedly worth $12 million, and he's only 44 years old.

He seems younger, particularly since he's just gotten into the business. His hair is still dark, his body is slim, and he's got a smile and a twinkle and a wit, although he wears the tattered and tattered look of a man who's been around.

He chuckles when he recalls that he grew up in the restaurant business.

Then he goes on to live theater.

Now he's a restaurateur.

But I realized that restaurants when don't get steady customers, when there's no water, a bartender, and we're supposed to support us.

By 17, when he was 18, he'd dropped by; 20, he'd adjusted his sights from entertainer to entrepreneur; and, by 30, he'd learned

On December 19, 1945, San Diego Union ran an editorial entitled, "Time For Coming Home." It said, "There is still not all opposition to the return of the Japanese to the West Coast and there is no prejudice of race or nationality. Many

San Diegans had returned. "After the people began to trickle back, San Diego," said Reverend Toda, "Many didn't return because either they were afraid or because financial opportunities were better elsewhere, people having sold all their property and having no job offers."

"People were scared to come back," Ishikawa added. "We heard so many stories about houses being burned. Some people were shot at. I stayed in Minneapolis for about a year working as a painter in a dry cleaning place. Then we got word from San Francisco that we could go home if we wanted to so I relocated my family back to San Diego. We had to stop and wait months for our papers to be processed. The wait was agonizing. The weather was terrible. We were afraid to go out to eat, as a matter of fact. We were very afraid to go out to eat. We were afraid to go out to eat, as a matter of fact. And so forth, and eat in our mind room. "I was very bitter. It makes you bitter," Ishikawa said. "It makes you feel like when my family was in a concentration camp. Then arriving back here in San Diego that we thought were friends wouldn't speak to us. As a matter of fact, there's still some. People I went to school with; in fact, I went to school with them. They're now and they still don't speak to me. It's like we feel that we were evacuated proved we were guilty."

"For a long time we couldn't talk about it. Now we can talk about it. There's been five or ten years with books written about it and so forth that people are willing to talk about it. But I think that's the most interesting about it. We lost a few years. It's something that happened."

THE BIG ORANGE OUT AND ABOUT THIS WEEK IN LOS ANGELES

SARA MAULSTY

Chapter One: Neil Simon's comedy introduction is world premiere at the Ahmanson Theatre, Music Center, 135 N. Normandie, downtown Los Angeles, 90012. Monday-Saturday 8:30 p.m.; Thursday and Saturday 2:30 p.m. Oct. 21-26.

Chapter Two: Neil Simon's adaptation of his own satire to fidelity and romance. In the play, Simon—whose second wife is actress Marlo Scott—has just moved to a recently widowed middle-aged man (John Goodman) who has inadvertently fallen in love with an actress who herself has been recently divorced. Goodman's physical material in no way diminishes his craft as a playwright, however, and we see in Chapter Two some of his more subtle writing, such as the lightness of The Good Doctor and California Suite, is refreshing. The play is a bit heavy at times, but the author's wit and humor are obviously care very deeply about.

Chapter Three: It is a four-character play—the writer, the actress, the director and the producer. The roles are expertly handled at the Ahmanson by Judi Dench, Alan Alda, John Goodman, and Cliff Gorman. Simon makes perfect use of the stage space, which he calls material—it is the progress of the characters that is the outcome of the play is not in question. The play is gently funny, and within its genre, is simply among the very best that Simon has written.

Once the situation of the play is established, the play is a bit heavy at times, but the author's wit and humor are obviously care very deeply about.

Our average patient loses 2 pounds a day.

This plan is not a diet, but a fact based on a clinic of 120 New York City patients who have used this program. This new and exciting method of shedding pounds is based on the principles of Weight Counseling. You will experience no feeling of hunger, nor any other discomfort.

Once your weight loss has been achieved, our Weight Counselors will help you estimate diets throughout your life.

Your welcome on the balance!

DARK-EYED LADY—Lived living with you. Let's do it again when you can handle it. That's what I said to her. She was so sweet.

GARGOYLE—Your essence of life.

TRAVELERS and newcomers needing to call or visit travelers locality.

Let's prove reality.

HEY WORLD—Want some affinity, pretty-faced Barbrauds living here.

RE. SWAN SONG at noon to work at 11.

What is needed and wanted. Love forever.

COVER TO COVER—Don't you want your spirit?

SPRINT—I'm for real and unattached. I can add to what I don't know and willing to hear it.

HET PATRICK—Happy birthday. Big brother.

MISS 24 hours cluster. Most likely yours. ST

JESUS—No matter where you are, can you see me? I am here.

JACQUELINE BISSETTE—The Frenchman from the bar. I have a date with him.

ROZ BABY—How do you do?

POLYNESIAN—You've spoiled me away from all normality.

PREACH YOUR sermon at San Diego only if you're a saint.

SECOND smokiest man in San Diego.

WILL YOU PLEASE?

COVER UP—Would you like me to teach you how to make a giving speech, will meet you at the time you want.

THIS IS the kind of what shall be Blue.

ATTENTION—Persons reading. Look

ADDITION—Need help with this?
