A Pinch of Porn

"Larry was so nice at first," Mary said, recalling the nights she spent in his warm embrace. "But then he started getting weird. He bought a big German shepherd and brought him to bed with us. He built a torture chamber in our basement — whips and chains and branding irons. He brought his friends over for orgies. He tied me up and beat me and raped me."

"Oh, Mary!" Kathryn consoled her. "That sounds terrible!"

"Well, it wasn't that bad. I just thought I'd better leave before it got worse."

JANET LANE

I hadn't planned on becoming a porn book reader. I had just lost my previous job, and all the disposable portions of my mind were tearing out through my fingers the longer I worked as a typesetter. Between appointments at the welfare office, I dreamed of serving the literate world with a brilliant original relating those minds to viscerally authentic men in America's dust. I outlined my novel, the gripping tale of a woman driven to nearly by madly gory events.

I was counting my cash when a friend and former porn ad writer showed me the job. "Erotic Fiction," I told her, "not even the intellectual challenges. I just need a steady income to contribute toward the eventual purchase of the speedboat they've been lusting after." Nevertheless, my monthly cash was never enough. I arrived at work. The address in Claremont turned out to be a dark, deserted warehouse with a small office in front. A dark-haired man, looking to be in his early thirties, answered my knock on the glass door. He locked the door behind me and smiled.

"Greg," I said.

"Yes," he replied, "and we do have a decent deal on a two-bedroom, two-bathroom in a quiet neighborhood."

"I'd like to make a couple of offers," I said, producing a stack of offers. He held me a stack of offers. "First, a spooling piece. I decided to craft the offering 'occupied' and 'unoccupied,' 'business' and 'neighborhood.'"

"And now, I would like you to edit this."

The two double-spaced paragraphs contained a dark-haired doctor using the hypothesis that women say "yes" what they really mean is no.
Lovely Rita

Fancy, or San Diego drivers have never experienced rage at finding parking spaces under the windshield wipers of others. Indeed, there are twelve roaming twentysomethings who are now known to police for parking space thefts. The average fine is $25,000 for parking a ticket on a car.

But as usual, things are getting out of hand. Last month, a San Diego police officer was called to the scene of a parking dispute. The officer saw a group of young men, all wearing the same dark clothing, standing around a car, all of whom were smiling and indicating as parking space thefts in the area. The officer asked them if they were experiencing problems of any kind. They assured him that they weren't.

The next day, the owner of the car returned to his vehicle to find that his windshield wipers had been removed. He reported the incident to the police, who arrived at the scene.

Adolescents are not always normal. Take "Sale of a Death Mask." (The Review, May 29, 1979) The editor of this poem is described by "her associates as normal in thought and behavior." If a psychiatric hospital turns her in for a civil rights act, "her associates" are perhaps the psychiatric hospital. At least, she appears to be normal to the editor of The Review. I'm sure she must have gone through something.

Pose A Problem

The writer of the article, "Lessons From a Smart Species" (The Review, March 14, 1980), apparently believes that there is only one species on Earth: Homo sapiens. However, I believe that there are at least two species on Earth: Homo sapiens and Homo sapiens. If I'm wrong, I'm afraid that I'm the only one on Earth who believes that there are two species on Earth. My associates apparently believe that there is only one species on Earth: Homo sapiens. I'm not sure why.

Can't Wait

I saw your article, "Lessons From a Smart Species" (The Review, March 14, 1980), and was most interested in the section about the evolution of language. I have long been fascinated by the evolution of language, and have conducted extensive research on the subject. I have found that language is a crucial factor in the evolution of intelligence.

Dr. John Smith

Sore Throat

I am writing to express my concern about the recent article in The Review, "Lessons From a Smart Species," which discusses the evolution of language and its role in the development of intelligence. As a language teacher and researcher, I believe that language is a critical factor in the evolution of intelligence. I think it is important to emphasize the role of language in the evolution of intelligence, as it is often overlooked.

New Department of Scandinavian

I was delighted to see the announcement of the new Department of Scandinavian Studies at The University of California, Los Angeles. As a student of Scandinavian literature, I have always admired the rigorous and comprehensive approach of the Department of Scandinavian Studies. I look forward to seeing the exciting new courses that will be offered in the upcoming academic year.

John Nilsen

It's a busy world out there, folks. The world is full of challenges and opportunities. As we navigate through this complex environment, it is important to stay focused, stay determined, and stay positive. Only then will we be able to achieve our goals and reach our full potential.

The San Diego Shakespeare Festival opened last week with a performance of "The Winter's Tale" by the Shakespeare Theatre Company of Chicago, which has headquartered in San Diego since 1963.

The production was staged at the Festival Theatre and directed by the company's artistic director, James H. Modern's, who is also the theater's general manager.

The play, which opens tonight, is the second of four productions planned for the festival season, which runs through July 12.

The other productions scheduled are "As You Like It," "Othello," and "The Tempest.

The festival, which is the first of its kind in San Diego, was founded in 1963 by the late Paul W. H. W., and is supported by a grant from the San Diego Community Arts Council.

The festival's first production, "The Winter's Tale," was staged in 1966 and has since become a staple of the festival's repertoire.

The festival's 1973 season is the first to be produced under the leadership of H. Modern, who took over as artistic director in 1972.

The festival is housed in a newly constructed theater on the campus of San Diego State University, which is located on 12th Avenue between Park and College streets.

The festival is open daily from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., and admission is free.

The festival's 1974 season is being planned for a return to its original location on the campus of San Diego State University.
