Locked Up and Let Loose

Jail in San Diego isn't bad, but jail in Tijuana isn't jail.

Joe Applegate

Nobody's jail is the best to serve time in. The best is the month of the Mexican Correctional Center, the federal prison in Tijuana. It's where 130,000 inmates serve sentences in downtown San Diego. The city that has one of the worst reputations in the world. We are all told to stay away from there. But when you are there, it's a different story.

And yet, for some reason, people still go there. They go for the experience, for the adventure. They go because they want to see what it's like to be in jail in Tijuana. And for some people, it's worth it.

But what about the rest of us? What about those of us who don't want to go to jail? What about those of us who want to stay out of trouble?

Well, there is another way. There is another option. And that is to go to prison in San Diego. It's not as bad as people think. It's not as dangerous as people say.

So, if you're thinking about going to jail, think about it. Think about what you really want. Do you want to serve time in Tijuana? Or do you want to serve time in San Diego? The choice is yours.

And if you really want to be free, then you should consider going to Tijuana. After all, it's not as bad as people think. It's not as dangerous as people say.
City Lights

Sit On It

The hundreds of thousands of people who staggered into the Cannery Building in San Diego last spring year after an 18-month hiatus from their regular "highs" were probably in a jubilant mood. The staff of the renowned San Diego-based magazine was preparing for its most ambitious endeavor yet: the launch of a new magazine called "City Lights." The project was one of the most ambitious ever undertaken by San Diego's publishing community, and the staff was determined to make it a success.

The new magazine would be a monthly publication featuring articles on local art, culture, and entertainment. The staff had put in months of hard work to create the first issue, and they were excited to see how their efforts would be received by the public.

The launch party was held at the Cannery Building, and the atmosphere was electric. The crowd was packed, and the energy was palpable. The staff had worked tirelessly to make the party a success, and it showed.

The launch of "City Lights" was a huge success, and the magazine quickly gained a loyal following. The staff was overjoyed to see their hard work pay off, and they were committed to continuing to produce high-quality content for their readers.

City Lights has since become a leading voice in the San Diego music and arts scene, and the magazine continues to thrive today. The staff is grateful for the support of their readers, and they look forward to continuing to bring them the latest in local culture and entertainment.
Letters

Blowout the streak: The sight of the streakers at the San Diego County Fair was the most depressing and disgusting sight I have seen in San Diego. At the fair, I was treated to a visual assault on my sense of normalcy that was unbelievable.

I believe I am not alone in feeling this way, and I think that the fairgrounds should be closed down permanently.

Not caught with grants down: I am writing in response to the letter from the San Diego Union that mentioned the lack of grants for local artists.

I am concerned about the situation and believe that the city should do more to support local artists.

Tom B.

Let's get loaded: I am writing to express my strong concerns about the issue of alcoholism in San Diego.

I believe that the city should do more to address this problem.

John Smith

Tell 'em we just saw Patty Hearst in OB: I am writing to report that I saw Patty Hearst in OB today.

I believe that this is a significant development in the case and that the media should be kept informed.

Jane D.

Come in for a test walk: I am writing to express my appreciation for the service provided by the test walk staff.

I believe that the staff did an excellent job.

MATTHEW ALICE

Dear Matthew Alice,

I don’t see a cold war, either, but what I do see is a great deal of change in my own environment. I get the sense it’s not the war, but rather the people involved who are changing. It seems that everyone is moving away from each other, creating new communities. It’s hard to say if this is good or bad, but it’s certainly different.

Sincerely,
[Signature]

Dear MATTHEW ALICE,

I was at a party last night and met a very interesting person. They told me about a new recording they just made and it sounded incredible. I think you might be interested in hearing it. Please let me know if you would like to hear it.

Sincerely,
[Signature]

Dear MATTHEW ALICE,

I’m writing to ask your opinion on a new technology that has recently been developed. It’s called “virtual reality” and it’s changing the way we interact with the world. I believe it has the potential to revolutionize our lives and would love to hear your thoughts.

Sincerely,
[Signature]

Very busy was their rented house. She took her little daughter's hand, the older girl in a strange corner, attended when she was there from the noisy, bustling street. But when the children played or listened to something, she noticed something extraordinary. The question, however, was the worst, in her opinion. There were so many things in the settlement, and the noise was really loud. Her daughter was looking at the street corner, and the children were walking around the settlement. They were playing in the street, and the children were shouting.

When she asked her daughter if she noticed anything unusual, she said, "not really. But she noticed something strange when she walked through the settlement with something visible to her.

Her daughter pointed at something that was really unusual, and the children were playing around it. She asked her daughter if she knew what it was, and the children were playing in the street. The settlement was crowded, and the noise was really loud.

Cynthia remembered her daughter as cheerful and chatty, but a little shy. She was really cute, and the children were playing around her. She was really happy, and the children were playing around her.

The lights came on next, and they were on a different street. The settlement was crowded, and the noise was really loud. The children were playing in the street, and the settlement was crowded. She was really happy, and the children were playing around her.

Perhaps because of the easy dining experience, what it is, is an excellent evening. It is, in fact, the original "French-in-a-bistro" experience. The French seem to have a touch of the very good for what they are willing to pay. The French own the bistro, and the French own the restaurant. The French style is charming, friendly, and comfortable. The French are not overjoyed in the United States, and incredibly, in Chicago, often have something in the translation.

Recently, I visited the French restaurant. It was closed, and the atmosphere was wonderful. The food was delicious. The staff was attentive, and the service was impeccable. The restaurant seemed to be a favorite among the locals. It seems as if the French are taking over the city.

The food was excellent. We ordered the French bread, which was warm and fresh. The appetizers were also delicious, with the crème brûlée being the standout. The main courses were well-prepared, with the coq au vin being particularly memorable. The desserts were also a highlight, with the chocolate mousse being the perfect end to a perfect meal.

In summary, this French restaurant is a must-visit for anyone who appreciates good food and excellent service. The ambiance is warm and inviting, and the food will leave you satisfied and content. I highly recommend giving Le Tournesol a try if you're in the area.

Sculptures by Leo Thibault of New Orleans just been seen in San Diego. The group of figurines, a dramatic exuberant explosion of color, a strong character a little like a child but full of life, was part of the major exhibition of the famous Canadian artist Leo Thibault. The group's composition, a large bronze statue, was sold to a San Diego collector for $50,000.

Thibault's work has been exhibited in galleries all over the United States and Europe. His sculptures are known for their energy and vitality, and this particular piece is no exception. It features a figure holding a torch, symbolizing enlightenment and progress, and is a powerful statement of the artist's commitment to his craft.

There is no greater demand for Thibault's work than in San Diego, where his sculptures are on display at the San Diego Museum of Art. The museum has a long history of exhibiting fine art, and the Thibault exhibit is a highlight of their current season. It is a rare opportunity for San Diegans to see this important artist's work in person.

Clay sculpture is a fascinating medium, allowing artists to create lifelike figures with great detail and expression. Thibault's sculptures demonstrate his mastery of the technique, and his work continues to inspire and move viewers around the world.

The exhibition is on display at the San Diego Museum of Art through the end of the year, and it is a must-see for anyone interested in art or sculpture.
