The All-Star game: big money, traffic jams, Howard Cosell, and a few guys throwing around a little white ball.

Fred M. Armanino

I would place more blame on baseball's All-Star game than any other event for a season. It is self-evident that the field owners, management and the players have due to rosters, starting rosters, on the basis of the U.S. Olympic Committee and the World Cup. The list of American teams, including the World Champions, are expected to participate, and the results of the championship series will be announced.

The All-Star game will take place on a neutral field, with the participating teams chosen by a panel of experts. The games will be played in a series of matches, with the winner determined by a best-of-three series. The championship series will be broadcast live on national television, with the winner receiving a championship ring.

The All-Star game will be a great event for baseball fans, and it will provide a wonderful opportunity to celebrate the best players in the sport. With the field owners and management working together, I believe we can create a truly spectacular event that will be remembered for many years to come.

Cann't Make The Last Supper, But I'm First In Line For Lunch

By Bruce B. Davis

At the Ninth Avenue Baptist Church, the Rev. C. W. Davis announced that the church would hold a "Luncheon of the Last Supper." The service, which was scheduled for noon, would feature a meal consisting of various foods typical of the time of Jesus' last supper. The church invited guests to attend the event and enjoy a meal together in the spirit of the event.

The community plans, however, to hold the removal of the last remaining signs for the building's future use as a community center. The signs are planned for removal this fall, and community members are encouraged to attend the meeting to voice their opinions and concerns.

Oh, Doctor

For the past year and a half, Dr. Ronald and Helen Roberts have been trying to find a suitable hospital for their new baby. They have visited several hospitals, but were unable to find one that met their criteria. They finally settled on a hospital that was located close to their home and had a reputation for excellence.

The Bees Go On

The San Diego Bees, reining monarchs of the city, are back on the field in fine form. After a disappointing start to the season, the team has turned things around and is now looking good. The Bees are playing well and are expected to make a strong push for the championship. Fans are excited about the team's new offense and defense, which have been improved significantly. The Bees are playing with a lot of heart and are a force to be reckoned with. The team is off to a great start and fans are hoping they can continue their winning streak. How's Your Fern?

By CAROLINE BOOHEM

Of Carolina Boohem, age 11, looked out her window at the field behind her house and saw something familiar. She looked at the field, then looked back at her house, then back at the field again. She continued to look around, trying to figure out what was going on. Suddenly, she noticed a strange object in the field. It was a small, green plant with thin leaves. She had never seen anything like it before. She walked closer to the plant and touched it gently. It felt soft and smooth to the touch. She continued to observe the plant, taking in its unique features. She was amazed by its beauty and wondered how it had come to be in her field. She decided to learn more about it and gather more information. She went home to find a book on plants and read all about the different species. She learned that it was a type of fern, a plant that had been around for millions of years. She decided to take care of it and watch it grow. She spent hours each day observing and nurturing it, and it continued to grow and thrive. She was proud of her little fern and felt a special connection to it. It became a symbol of her passion for nature and her desire to learn more about the world around her. She continued to study and explore, and her love for plants grew stronger with each passing day. She knew that she had found something special and unique in her little field, and she was determined to share it with others. She wanted to spread the beauty and wonder of nature to everyone. She hoped that her fern would inspire others to look closer and see the beauty in the world around them. She knew that it was just the beginning of her journey of discovery and exploration, and she was excited to see where it would take her. She continued to nurture her fern, watching it grow and blossom, and she knew that it would always hold a special place in her heart.
Dear Matthew Alice,

My parents, who are here from Indiana, are in need of a physician. It is now three days since one of the phlebotoms came to our home. The phlebotom, a young and articulate man, was courteous and professional. He explained that he was there to draw blood for a test and that the procedure was painless. He also mentioned that he would be back in a few days to perform another test.

Sincerely,

Along the third-base line, a short, well-tanned, middle-aged man in a light blue sports jacket and light blue checked slacks is standing alone, staring wistfully onto the playing field. It's Pee Wee Reese.

Birthday

Chandler, a woman of more than half a century of bouquet shopping, steps up to the microphone and says: "Now I'd like to recognize Sarah, the lady who brings me the flowers every time. She's known to me for years."

"Well, that's great," says Sarah. "I've been coming here for forty years."

"And you should be playing baseball with twenty-thousand people in your bleachers," says Washburn.

"Well, I just don't know how to let the fans down, all those people who want to see me. I played forty-five years ago and I'm not going to let you be a victim of our generation gap here."

The crowd erupts in applause as Sarah walks off. She's known to the fans for forty years, and they won't let her go without a fight.

"Sarah's a hero," says Washburn. "She's been a part of our team since we started playing."

Sarah's smile lights up the field as she walks back towards the dugout. She's known to the fans for forty years, and they won't let her go without a fight.

One of the problems with reminiscence is that it, like memory, tends to take the knee. You forget all of its moods and traits. What's left is the bare skeleton of events. Whether you have heard of a restaurant or not, it is usually the case that you have a restaurant on your mind. After a meal at one of my favorite restaurants, I began to wonder how I could have missed it. It is a place where one can take a walk down memory lane and relive past experiences. The food is good, the service is friendly, and the ambiance is soothing. It is a place where one can relax and enjoy a meal without any distractions. LARRY McCAFFERY
To really appreciate just how great a sporting hero can be, all you have to do is look back at the career of Larry McAllister, who began playing Larry was not only a great football player, but he was also a great human being. He worked hard, was always ready to help others, and gave back to the community.

Larry was born in 1951 in San Francisco, California, and attended the University of California at Berkeley, where he played college football. He was selected in the third round of the 1973 NFL Draft by the Los Angeles
Rams. He played for the Rams from 1973 to 1978, and then went on to play for the

Larry was a three-sport athlete in high school, excelling in football, basketball, and track. He was a two-time All-State football player and a two-time All-State basketball player. He also set multiple records in track.

Larry's career with the Rams was remarkable. He was a key player on the 1977 Rams team that went to the Super Bowl. Larry was the Rams' leading track man for the first four years of his career. In 1976, he was named the NFL's most valuable player.

Larry's career with the Broncos was even more impressive. He was a four-time Pro Bowl selection and was named the NFL's most valuable player in 1981.
He also led the league in rushing yards
five times and in rushing touchdowns four times.

Larry was named to the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1996, and he was awarded the Walter Payton Man of the Year Award in 1981. In 1983, Larry co-founded the Larry McAllister Foundation, which helps underprivileged children.

Larry is a true legend in the football world and a true inspiration to all who know him. His legacy lives on through his continued efforts to help others. Larry's spirit of generosity and compassion is a true testament to what it means to be a great sportsman.
I suddenly think of the boil game going on down on the field as a very distant and frail thing, getting permed and beaten and hyped and puffed up beyond its capacity to bear it.

From the press box on the third deck at Lambeau Field on a cold winter day, Carney has a good view of the action. At 3:15, when the U.S. Navy Drydocks and Brooklyn Bears meet in the very first night before the two teams played another night, the temperature on the field was minus eight degrees. "We've never had a night game before here," Carney says.

The American Legion is being remembered, and so each player seems to want to be remembered, too. They take the field brightly, with the cheers of the crowd. Carney, the quarterback, is the center of attention. The ball game is called "The Game of the Century." The two teams are playing for the title of the World's Best. The crowd is huge, and the players are nervous. Carney is only too happy to be there, and he knows he has to be.

Hieroglyphics were designed by a pre-Celtic tribe of artists as a means of recording music without words or images. To solve this problem, you must correctly read the hieroglyphics as seen in the figure.

1. What are the two main elements of a hieroglyphic script?

2. How does the script differ from its Roman counterpart?

3. In what ways does the hieroglyphic script influence modern music notation?

4. How would you interpret the hieroglyphic symbols in the figure?

5. What are the implications of this script in terms of music theory?
