"Vietnam diets may have helped POW's"
Dear Matthew Alice,
I have known you for a while now, and I must say that your work is always impressive. I am writing to you to offer my congratulations on your recent achievement. Your new exhibit, "The Third Photography Awards Exhibition," is truly a testament to your talent and creativity.

I was particularly impressed by the first award-winning photograph, "A Friend I Should Have," which was taken during your recent trip to New York City. The composition is stunning, and the lighting is perfect. You have a gift for capturing the essence of a moment, and this photograph is a perfect example of that.

I also want to mention the second award-winning photograph, "A Friend I Should Have," which was taken during your recent trip to San Francisco. The way you captured the light and shadow in this photograph is truly remarkable.

I hope you continue to create beautiful photographs and inspire others with your work. Congratulations again on your recent success.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
Lady Pat

Patricia Morrison, who is currently playing Laura in Studio's production of "The Three Sisters," has agreed to a temporary departure from the stage to serve as guest editor of the San Diego Reader for a month. "I've been wanting to do something like this for a long time," she said, as the Reader was preparing its next issue. Morrison, who has been a regular contributor to the Reader, has been asked to prepare a special section on the arts, focusing on the local theater scene.

Morrison's article, which will appear in the next issue of the Reader, will explore the origins of the San Diego theater scene and the impact of the theater industry on the local economy. She will also feature interviews with local theater luminaries, including playwrights, directors, and actors, who will share their insights on the future of the local theater scene.

"I'm excited to have Patricia Morrison as our guest editor," said Reader editor John Smith. "She is a respected and influential figure in the local theater community, and her insights will be invaluable to our readers.

Morrison's article will be available online at the Reader's website, and a print edition of the special section will be available at local bookstores and newsstands.

In 1970, the Los Angeles Dodgers were the defending World Series champions. The team was managed by Leo Durocher and was led by a young star, Sandy Koufax, who had retired from the majors in 1966 due to elbow problems. Koufax was wearing a prosthetic hand to help him pitch better. The Dodgers were contending for the National League West title with the San Francisco Giants and the San Diego Padres.

In this article, the author reflects on the Dodgers' success and discusses the challenges they faced. He mentions the importance of teamwork and the role of leadership in winning games.

The author also highlights the impact of Koufax's return to the team and the role he played in motivating the players. The article provides insights into the strategies and tactics used by the Dodgers during that season, and it highlights the contributions of both players and managers.

Overall, the article provides a snapshot of the Dodgers' season, providing readers with a glimpse of the challenges and triumphs of a championship team.

Eyeglass prices are outrageous!

There are more than 800 stores in San Diego County that sell eyeglasses, but over 100 of those places can charge you $100 or more for the same pair of glasses. We know what you're thinking: "Hey, there must be a catch." And you're right. The catch is that the glasses at those stores are not the same.

Our prices are the best! We guarantee it. We sell glasses that are the same as those you would find in any other store, but we make sure that you're not paying more. Our prices are the best in town, and you won't find a better deal anywhere else.

We offer many styles of frames to choose from. We carry the latest designs from the top brands in the industry, including Ray-Ban, Oakley, and Maui Jim. Our selection is vast, and we're sure you'll find something that fits your style.

We also have a wide range of lenses to choose from. We offer single vision, bifocal, and progressive lenses, as well as transitional lenses that change from one to the other to give you a seamless vision.

We stand behind our products. If you're not satisfied with your glasses, we will replace them for free. We also offer a two-year warranty on all of our glasses.

Our prices are the best in town, and you won't find a better deal anywhere else. We guarantee it. Give us a call today to learn more about our products and services.
