The rent control system at work in the kitchen of a one-bedroom apartment downtown. Tom Kozden and Fred Schnaubelt go at it!

The average price of a one-bedroom in San Diego is over $500.00 per month. This puts the cost of living for a single person, including rent, at approximately $175.00. If you add in transportation, food, and other necessities, the total cost comes to over $300.00 per month.

FRED: According to the Department of Labor statistics, the average monthly rent for a one-bedroom apartment in San Diego is $450.00. This is a significant increase in rent over the past two years, which have seen a gradual increase. The current rent control program limits the increase to 5 percent per year.

KAREN: But what about the people who can't afford the rent? They're left out of the equation.

FRED: The rent control program was put in place to protect tenants from extreme rent increases. However, it doesn't address the overall cost of living in San Diego.

KAREN: I think we need a more comprehensive solution to the housing crisis.

FRED: I agree, but the rent control program is a step in the right direction.

KAREN: What about the landlords? They're being hit with a lot of regulations.

FRED: Landlords are still making a profit, but at a lower rate. The rent control program ensures that tenants are not gouged by the market.

KAREN: It's a complex issue, but I think we need to keep pushing for solutions that work for both tenants and landlords.

FRED: Absolutely. Let's keep advocating for better housing policies in San Diego.

Crossed Crosses

By J. R. B. Davis

It was a Sunday morning, and the Catholic Church was filled with people. The service was about to begin, and everyone was eager to hear the message of the day. But the door remained closed, and no one knew why. As the wait grew longer, people became restless and began to wonder what was happening.

The door finally opened, and a priest stepped out to address the congregation. "Gentlemen and Sisters," he said, "we have a problem. There is a technical issue with the doors, and we are unable to open them on time. We will have to continue the service outside, on the steps of the church. Please sit down and we will begin the service as soon as we can." The congregation smiled, understanding the situation, and everyone settled down to wait.

As the service continued, the priest explained that the issue was caused by a malfunctioning door opener. He told the congregation that the church had been trying to fix the problem for weeks, but it had not been resolved. He apologized for any inconvenience and asked for everyone's patience.

The service concluded, and the congregation dispersed. Everyone was relieved that the problem had been resolved, and they were grateful for the priest's quick thinking.

Alas, King George

By J. R. B. Davis

It was a Sunday afternoon, and the city was bustling with activity. People were out shopping, running errands, and enjoying the warm weather. The sun was shining bright, and the streets were crowded.

Suddenly, a loud noise echoed through the city. People turned to see what was happening. A large crowd had gathered in front of the City Hall, and everyone was watching as a group of demonstrators marched by.

The demonstrators were protesting against a new policy that was being implemented by the city council. The policy would affect everyone in the city, and the demonstrators were determined to have their voices heard. They carried signs and yelled slogans, demanding that the policy be scrapped.

The police arrived on the scene, and a tense standoff ensued. The demonstrators refused to move, and the police were hesitant to use force. The situation was tense, but no violence was reported.

In the end, the demonstrators were asked to leave the area. They dispersed, but the issue remained unresolved. The city council would have to decide whether or not to implement the new policy, and the people of the city would have to wait and see what would happen next.

You know, you to gn the power of salesmanship. It’s the one thing that makes the difference. A man who can sell is just as important as a man who can build. In this business, it’s the guy who can convince people that they need what you’re selling. You have to be able to make them see the benefits of your product. And that’s what salesmanship is all about. It’s not just about the product, it’s about the person who is selling it.

Dear Reader,

I am writing to you today about the important role of salesmanship in business. As you know, successful businesses are built on the foundation of a strong sales team. And the key to success in sales is to be able to convince people that they need what you’re selling.

Yours sincerely,

Matthew Alice

Dear Matthew Alice,

Our little white shoes have had a problem with cockroaches lately. When ever we put shoes down, they seem to come out of thin air and start doing all sorts of tricks. We have tried everything from cleaning the shoes to using special cockroach repellent, but they just keep coming back. What's the point of having shoes if you can't even wear them?

Robert Lambert

Cockroaches are annoying. Their ability to eat anything, from vegetables to paper, make them a difficult pest to control. The best way to deal with cockroaches is to prevent them from entering your home in the first place by keeping your home clean and free of food scraps.

Rental Control

One Sunday last month Karen Goring went out to smoke a cigarette. She and her husband had driven from their home in Carlsbad, east of San Diego, and on the last few days they had been taking on the Father's Day festivities. The couple lived in a small apartment, which they built themselves, and they enjoyed spending time together.

Karen Goring was in a quiet reflection when she noticed a small insect on her arm. As she tried to brush it off, the insect stung her, causing her to jump and stumble. In her haste, she accidentally knocked over her cigarette butt, which ignited the grass near the pavement. The flames quickly spread, engulfing the apartment complex and causing a panic among the tenants. Firefighters from the Carlsbad Fire Department rushed to the scene, and within minutes, the fire was under control.

The couple lost everything, including their belongings and their home. The fire department estimated that the damage was around $500,000. The couple was devastated, but they remained strong and supported each other. They were grateful for the help they received from their community and the insurance company.

Karen Goring's experience serves as a reminder of the importance of fire safety and the need for proper planning and preparation in case of emergencies. It is crucial to have a fire escape plan and to make sure that all family members are familiar with it. Additionally, having a fire extinguisher and knowing how to use it can make a significant difference in preventing fire-related accidents and damages.

Vain, Vain, Go Away

CHRISTOPHER SCHNEIDER

As the end of the second scene of "Vain," currently playing at the Mission Playhouse in the North Park, three women in the men's laundry are seen together, laughing, and speaking. One of them, a young woman, looks at the others with a smile, and says, "When you're in love, you know what you're doing."

The scene is set in a laundry room, where three women are working. The youngest, a recent graduate of college, is just starting to learn her job. The middle-aged woman, a mother, is struggling to keep up with the laundry. The oldest woman, a grandmother, is just passing the time. All three are very different, yet they all have one thing in common: they are all in love.

The youngest woman has just been hired as a helper, and is excited to start her new job. She is also trying to keep her love for a handsome young man a secret. The middle-aged woman is trying to balance her job and her family obligations. She is also dealing with the stress of caring for her elderly parents. The oldest woman is just trying to have some fun, and is enjoying the companionship of her two younger friends.

The three women are all very different, yet they all have one thing in common: they are all in love.

The scene ends with the youngest woman saying, "I'm going to make him mine," and the other two women responding with approval.

The play, written by Jack Heffernan, has been performed at numerous theaters around the country. It is set in a laundry room, and follows the lives of three women as they deal with their love lives, family problems, and work. The play is a heartwarming story of friendship and love, and is sure to touch the hearts of audiences of all ages.
