That letter was signed with the typewritten name of Al Sklar, another local actor who is been a member of Actor's Equity for eight years. Sklar, in fact, states forthrightly that he has contacted the union about occasional miscreants in the past. However, he denies writing the recent complaints; in fact. Sklar helped Goldman by urging Actor's Equity to grant her the guest-artist's arrangement with Widdowson-Reynolds (Sklar says he later received an anonymous note from a local nonunion actress claiming responsibility for the tip-offs.) Sklar says he decided not to blow the whistle on Widdowson-Reynolds because he sympathized with Goldman's efforts to open a new theater. However, he vigorously defends the acting union and castigates those members who break its rules. "If they want to work for free, then they should get the hell on the state of the sta

Ward's Bonds

Your article "Cartoonist Draws Dismissal" ("City Lights," May 22) reiterates the cliché that the San Diego Union is a conservative newspaper. In a confused society like ours, that becomes a matter of which side of which fence you are upholding historically evolved values and preserving what they have produced, then the Union. despite its firing of the iconoclast young bull, has long since defaulted. By its deference to the defaulted. By its deference to the real "graveliggers" of the American miracle — in government, education, and policy toward the flood of Third World runaways — it reveals that it takes its orders not from a conservative power, but from the profit establishment, whose main concern is the constant supply of a concern is the constant supply of a docile proletariat in this country. #### The Mission

The U.S. Marine Corp Air-Ground Combat Center at Twentynine Palms, about 120 miles northeast of San Diego, assured from the southern Mojave Desert. The base has an arid upland desert environment similar to that found in the Persian Gulf. Iran, Pakistan, and much of the Middle East. The Marines describe the area as "miles and miles of nothing but miles and miles." It is a good place to practice war. For the last five years Twentynine Palms has been the only desert warfare base in the country that holds combined-arms exercises in a "live-fire environ-ment," where planes, troops, and armor use real ordnance, including shells, rockets, and heavy machine guns. As one of the regular staff officers at the base put it, "This is as close to a real war situation as you can get. These people are getting bombs and artillery dropped over their heads; they're advancing through areas that have just been blasted and strafed. The only difference between these exercises and real war is that they're not bleeding. and real war is that they're not bleeding-icecause of the safety precautions we're taking. "Among those safety precautions are the denial of ammunition to the infan-try for their small arms — .45s and M-16s. Since the inception of the games in 1975, no one has been killed as a result of live fire. There have been several fatalities, however, from Marines falling off trucks

The base itself is home to a number of support battations, including infantry, tank, artillery, and communications, as well as a permanent expeditionary airfield (set up in 1976), a top-secret nuclear ordnance platons, and the Marine Corps: communications-electronics school. Eight times a year combined arms exercises—air and ground—take place on the base. Two of these exercises involve full—the time of the communication of th The base itself is home to a number of Camp Pendleton is to participate in the games. "Down to Sixth Street, turn right past the miniature golf course, fourth building at the top of the hill, you can't miss it." There we met Ron Frazier, who directed us to our billet, a charming, six-dollar-a-night facility with adjoining bathrooms, ice machines, color TV, and just a touch of Old World hotel gentility (the desk clerks wore uniforms and called everyone "sir"). Our VIP quarters were conveniently located half-way between the officers club bar and the

During the course of this exercise, the U.S. Marines would face a Soviet-type breat consisting of a motorized rife battalion. The enemy would be simulated by means of input from an "evaluation and control group" of monitors, who will evaluation and control group" of monitors, who will enformation to the battalion commander, as well as by targets on the ground, as well as by targets on the ground, which is the state of the product of the map. The plan calls for the battalion commander to lead his forces some fifteen miles through a series of open-desert at-tacks. He will manage defenses against a tank attack at night, and will (it is hoped) tank attack at night, and will (it is nopeo) finally edvance into a hilly area where in-fantry will lead his armor against a series of fortified positions. According to a book on cooking cus-toms in prerevolutionary China, no house-hold was complete without a picture of the kitchen God, installed close to the cook-ing area. Not only did the Kitchen God preside over the activities of the kitchen, but after a year, on the twenty-hird day of the twelfth month, he ascended to heaven to report to the higher gods. To prepare him for his journey, incense was burned and then the dusty, year-old picture was removed. In the hope that he would report pleasant anecdoes about the family, his juy were rubbed with molasses or some sagray substance. If the members of the family were apprehensive about their decks, the picture was dipped in wise so that the Kitchen God would be too intoxicated to give a bout their sould be about their side over the activities of the kitcher cated to give a bad report about their

The picture was then placed in a chariot made of reeds or staw and set upon a horse fashioned from the same material. With great ecremony, these were brought to the courty and or stroke, where they were set on fire. The cloud of smoles signated the assertion of the same stroke of the courty and or stroke, where they were set on the cooking holding dishes followed. On the night of the thirtiesh of the twelfth month, the family gathered in the kitchen one more, and with incense, fineerackers, and reyers, a fresh picture of the Kitchen God was enshrined. In this spirit of renewal and resolutions, the new year was signified and the feast begain.

It may have been prepared beforehand and not purchased right away. Nothing was stone cold; on the other hand, neither the beef meathall nor the stone of the beef meathall nor other hand, neither the best meatball nor the steamed chicken bun was hot. Another problem resides with the service in gen-eral. You may order a few items from a cart, finish them off quickly, and then lan-quish for upwards of fitteen minutes while you wait for the next cart with other types of appetiers to be brought around. No one expects the speedy service of a fast-food chain, but the histus makes you lose both your appetite and your interest. One should be eating almost continuously, and the carts should be wheeling by to whet your appetite and stimulate your senses. However, these irritations would be placed in abeyance if the food were divine and mouth-watering. Sadly, it was not. Here, the major blame must fall on the quality of the ingredients used. To create a good dim sum, or any good dish, you have considered the properties of the properti We all know that sparreiths are at best crisps kin covering bones, but the ones served at Mandarin China were just grease and fat. Last, there's the problem of cultaray skill, which poes hand-in-moth with ingredients. Some dim sum taste marvelous; these are only passable at best, and only a few items rise above medicority. Floyd Gaffney's staging of The Amen Corner at UCSD was so exquisite in its artistry that to let it die after two weeks of arising what to let it the after two weeks of performances would have been tantamount to murder. Fortimitely, Mr. Gaffney will be resurrecting it at another location in the latter half of June, so that you still have a chance to experience one of the most beautiful theatrical events of the season.

A large part of the beauty lies in the A targe part or me beauty uses in me lovingly detailed realism of the produc-tion. James Baldwin's play is set in a small Harlem church, and Mr. Gaffney has suc-ceeded in evoking the social atmosphere of this evangelical congregation so vividly that at times the UCSD audience seemed that at times the UCSD audience seemed uncertain as to whether they were witnessing a play or themselves participating in a service of worship. It is an atmosphere compounded of religious fervor, personal conflict, intense characters, humor, tendences, and satire, and the full realization of each of the elements results in a wonderfully concrete truthfulness. This is life intense that the contract of the contra itself. One of the characteristics of a Gaffney staging is the integration of other theatrical arts into the enactment of the script. Music and dance are his specialities, and in the present case music functions virtually as the generative principle for the entire play. The gospel singing, prepared by Reverend Joseph L. Slade and performed by an astonishingly thetated group of congreants, it exquisite, ratisting outward to make the whole production as refined, heartfelt, and funnious as itself; but at the same time it defines the cultural locality with tumous precision, provides a matrix for the average and the production of personality (the individual singary are fully wheaterized), did a single control of the play's chief dease (the juxposition of the play is chief dease (the juxposition of the play is chief dease (the juxposition of the position) and chief the play's chief dease (the juxposition of the production's realism, while at the same team of the production 's realism, while at the same team of the production 's realism, while at the same team of the production 's realism, while at the same team continues and raising them into its own glorious realm.

Mr. 'faffrey has found as unusually versatile cast to carry out the complementary assignments of singing and acting, we are evidently to the manner born — where it even a little git who knows the words and the rills. reacting in their own persons and with their own persons and with their own passions.

This participation, these gestures, these ice, are quite emphatic—delicate shades of behavior and ambiguities of feeling would weaken the effect Mr. Gaffrey is whole production takes on a creatiny of irrection, a decisiveness, and a vital energy that are the dramatic equivalents of the music the congregation sings and the faith they adhere to. The same fusion of extreme realisms with a strongly emphatic extreme realisms with a strongly emphatic found in Ron Ranson's remarkably expressive set (the cross, the stande-glass) pressive set (the cross, the stained-glass window, the cheap folding chairs, the old upright piano, the air of gentility, drab-ness, and storefront spirituality) and in Terry Tubbs's costumes (the polyester dresses, the colorful straw hats, the re-dresses, the colorful straw hats, the re-spectable — and sometimes poorty fitting — walking shoes). Against this living backdrop (or, to say it better, within this living atmosphere). there is the story of a troubde family, a story which — in various forms — reap-pears again and again in the author's works. Baldwin's attainments as a writer are misted. The movels he has written about bohemian types in New York and Paris are often emberatsmig in their sentimentality. bohemian types in New York and Parıs are often embarrassing in their sentimentality. He is an eloquent essayisi, whose flashing polemical style is too often devoted to the expression of hysterical and destructive opinions. At his best, however, he has produced works of enduring artistic power, and these works are invariably power, and these works are invariably centered on the Harlem world of his boy-hood and on the problems of a young man centered on the Hatene world of his boy-hood and on the problems of a young man attempting to grow up within — and except from — a paintfully disordered family. This is the vein that led to Go Tell it On the Mountain, his first (and still his best) novel: to the most moving story ever written about a jazz musician ("Blues For Mountain of the Bathwin family disease on the Corner. Corner.

The play includes all the basic components of the Bathwin family drams: a narrow and oppressive home life, defined by Christianity of the estatic and puritanical type; parents who have loved one another in the past but who are now radically diseased to the control of the court of the court world, with its promises of freedom and self-realization. Specifically, the father is a jazz musician, whose life has been intense, disorderly, drunken, creative, and free; the mother is an evangelical pastor, authoris wins, intolerant, moralisic, and dominescring; and the son, who play the control of the court of the cour

Their relentless clash of wills over their own destinies and over that of their their own destines and over that of their eighteen-year-old son is poignantly mirrored in the young man's character, and actor Wendell J. Leonard completes the excellent leading trio with a performance of persuasive authenticity — he catches the awkwardness, the insecurity, the love, the awkwardness, the insecurity, the love, and the suffering with a naturalness that is extremely touching. And there they are, the archetypal tragic family in modern dress: Agamemon, Cityennestra, and Orestes on Seventh Avenue; or Hamlet in his mother's chamber when the specter of his father reappears; or the unhappy Alvings in Ibsen's Chorst: What is most impressive about The Amen Corner is its success in combining absolute fidelity to a specific social and cultural testing the combined of the combined tute fidelity to a specific social and cultural reality — Harlem, the storefront church, gospel music, and jazz — with a univer-sally valid fable about the power struggles between husband and wife and the conflict

The sense of universality emerging from a precise time and place is enhanced by Baldwin's artful use of language perhaps his most salient accomplishment in this play. Like the characterization (and better the set of the characterization (and the characterization). in this play. Like the characterization (and he style of acting appropriate to it), the black dialect is strong, vivid, emphatic, and it is made even stronger in the context of religious revivalism and preaching. It gives the action the same kind of depth and richness, the sense of resonating out of the very earth, that Synge achieved through his use of Irish dialect in such plays as kilers to the Sea and The Plathon of the Western World. As is the case with Synge, what Baldwin gives us is not exactly the Western World. As is the case with Synge, what Baldwin gives us is not exactly the language of the people— there is plenty of dull, flat talk in both Harlem and County Kerry — but an artful elaboration of it, which transforms the natural cadences of dialect speech into a rhythmic poetry too wonderful ever to have been heard on land

And how wonderful Mr. Gaffney's cast makes this language sound: it is essentially another form of singing, in no way inferior to the gospel music and closely related to it on the property of the post o refuses the religious consolation offered her. By the mid-Eighties the United States is going to be in a very, very, very difficult position because we're not going to have the resources to respond, and the vital interests of this country may be at stake. The American people have to make a choice in 1980 and 1981. We need to build choice in 1980 and 1981. We need to build more amphibious ships. We need an am-phibious naval capability. We need five percent real growth in the defense budget. In real terms, we're spending less on na-tional defense today than we did in 1964, while the social programs in this country have more than quadrupled in the last ten years. (Neyenesch president Tom Johnson confirms that his company eventually wrote off more than $48,000 owed by Beta.) Coley Kelly couldn't be reached for comment, but his mother reiterates that her son fully expected financing to come through as recently as this past March. However, Beta's money problems clearly precede that date by a long time. Kelly and a partner named P. Griffith Lindell stand the proposery in 1975 to 1 says when he finally resigned the center was months behind in the results. And they did publish a number enesch bills, but she claims the Pacific Highway land the Pacific Highway landlord voiced no complaints upon the center's departure. "He was satisfied because he got in another tenant at a higher rent," she says. She also claims that Coley eventually received all his back pay after takine the center to the labor of books, including such offerings as The Handy Dandy Evolution Refuter and When You're Dead You're Dead. But by May of 1977 Lindell was sufficiently disillusioned about Beta's future to dissolve the taking the center to the labor board. Coley says he got only part of his money after Kelly told the labor commissioner, partnership and send out a letter warning the company's creditors and authors that Beta's 'present financial condition does not allow "We just don't have any money." Coley today asserts. "This is a strategy Kelly has worked everywhere he's current production sched be met." In that letter, Lindell asserted that "the inability to attract investment capital... has caused us to fail to meet our repayment obligations, and our credibility has been seriously damaged." Three days later Kelly countered with an optimistic letter reassuring the flustered creditors and writers that, contrary to Lindell's fears, the company would pull through.

Lindell, now engaged in litigation with Kelly, couldn't comment about the publishing venture, but another man who once worked closely with the Segraveses did agree to air his concerns about their enterprises. Don Coley declares, "The financial recon of Beta Books is a continuati of the financial record of the center." Coley worked for the center as Kelly's assistant from January through November of 1974, when that financial record finally drove him to resign. Today Coley prefaces his comments by atting. "It's very difficult for me to share some of these things in that I'm a Christian and I believe in the center's goals. But they're certainly not being implemented in a wry that's consistent with Christian worked everywhere he's gone."

Coley subsequently did some editorial work for Beta Books, and he says that contact convinced him that the pattern of financial irresponsibility had not changed, nor did Kelly's luxuriant lifestyle. The former employee tells, for example, how Kelly once took along his wife and four children on a business trip to Florida, character the travel examens to charging the travel expenses to Bon Vivant Travel in Tierrasanta. Coley says Kelly later pleaded that he had no money to pay the travel bill and almost simultaneously acquired a new van. (The current owner of the trave agency confirms the incident and says he finally took Kelly to court but only got about half of the $3500 owed to him.) Today Nell points out that Keily has lost his house to pay for his debts. "So now he lives in another nice rented Tierrasanta house, "retorts
Coley. "He [Kelly] is still a junior executive member of the San Diego Country Club. He still drives a rented Cadillac. Where does he get the money?"

Nell's response to the employees just three months after he joined the organization; by the end of 1974, the center owed him about $2300. But he says what bothered him equally was Kelly's attitude toward other credits as creditors. Coley says the center owed a big bill to Neyenesch Printers. "but the attitude was, if one printer wouldn't print it, accusations of financial irresponsibility is to point out that the center "is not a why would someone want to destroy the center?" she asks of Coley. He in turn says he abstained from criticizing the center for many years because he was concerned about yeopardizing its goals. "I'm not really eager to do this, but at some point you can't take at some point you can't take any more." He adds, "I'm a Biblical Christian. I don't means. I think there is room for an organization that can represent the thrust of the center and do so in a credible fashion. Christians in the business world need to act like Christians."

Kelly Segraves didn't respond to attempts to contact him, a common problem reported by several Beta Books authors. Nells asys although Kelly has not declared bankruptey, the company has been "cut back to nothing" Sine says Kelly began returning manuscripts early this year but manuscripts early this year but may hold on to some materials as long as there's some hope of getting his money back. She says Kelly continues to serve as the director of the research center, which is now in the process of relocating to its fourth set of offices, off Clairemont Mesa Boulevard in Kearny Mesa.

There's A Macaw For You

Many of the neighbors in Golden Hill have been in a state of agitation these past fet weeks with the addition of a new resident — a three-foot South American macaw. The exotic bird has become something of an adopted orphan of the area, at least in spirit, and everyone oohs and aahs as he flies above. He is a wears a coat of aureate that is almost alarming in its brilliance.

Seen from above (or in a book with color plates, as it is difficult to see an adult as it is difficult to see an advancam from above unless y are airborne), the bird appea to be completely blue — a scintillating, royal blue that somehow holds within it anumber of shades, from pale-sky to navy, cast in a shimmer of long feathers. From beneath, the macaw species so out of aureate ocher people are awakened by his screech, few are up to observe him. At dusk, however, around 5:30 or 6:00 (these longer d seem to be throwing off the macaw's timing), he commences his final aerobatics of the day, and is seen by hundreds of Golden Hill residents. For most of the afternoon he will have been ensconced in a tall, dusty date palm at the corner of palm at the palm a palm at the corner of desires; but with the rec arrival of the macaw, he has given up his reign and can be seen taking flight in utter fear alongside the starlings, sparrows, and bluejays when afternoon the residents heard the macaw's unmistakable raucous cry high above. He was flying in exactly the opposite direction he normally flies at that time (that is, he was flying east), and a few people who saw him were understandably curious. One of the neighbors ran after the bird.

At Twenty-sixth and A streets two elderly women were standing on the cracked sidewalk and looking up at something perched high on a ham-radio antenna, and of

The macaw, in the course of his afternoon maneuver, soon reaches the intersection of Twenty-fifth and A streets and negotiates a wide left turn, soaring over a three-story, white rooming house at the crossroad's southwest corner He climbs a little higher (although he rarely att (although he rarely attains heights exceeding forty or fifty feet) until he arrives at another lofty date palm in the yard of a dilapidated Victorian home. The macaw grew uneasy at having so many people nearby and after a few false starts, managed to wing himself off the antenna. Moments later he alighted in the highest brancher of a leafy eucalyptus tree in nearby Golden Hill Park. The plumed bird inside. It is a rather weak effort, though charming, and it is doubtful that she knows what she would do should the macaw ever nearby Golden Hill Park. At first it was difficult to pick him out do should the macase ever happen to wander in there looking for an overripe banana. But the woman is response to the presence of the macase is not at all unusual; nearly everyone who seen it is sufficiently inspired to stop and comment or to let out a low whistle of arthurstation. ## Horn by the Bull

STEVE ESMEDINA

It has been more than six years since the release of Papillon. Steve McQueen's last film screened in this country. Since then he produced and starred in a she'ved version and the produced and starred in a she'ved version sonly other movie. He has retained his only other movie. He has retained his notirety, however, though mostly because of the astounding salary he commands — $5.000,000 per film. It is the rare actor who can remain on sabbatical for so long and still make such outrageous demands (McQueen also has the power to See the still make such outrageous demands (McQueen also has the power to McRandin McQueen). who wrote the brilliant, misunderstood 92 in the Shade (which he later turned into a cho Delace (which was turned into a oril-liant, misunderstood movie by Frank Perry). Furthermore, it was photographed by John A. Alonzo, one of Hollywood's finest. But director William Willard has ruined the material. For example, you never get an understanding of the Horn character. Why, if the townsfolk love him character. Why, if the fownstok love min so much, are they willing to execute him so readily? Why are characters introduced without warning and then suddenly dropped (initially, Billy "Green" Bush is the sheriff, but then Slim Pickens. the sheriff, but then Slim Pickens, schmaltzy and slobbering, takes over and wishes he weren't swom to uphold the law and kill Tonly' And why is the romance between Horn and Linda Evans, who plays the obligatory prairie schoolteacher, told almost exclusively in flashbacks? Willard, I suspect, was under orders from his fa-mous and expensive star. There is also week into expensive star. There is also mous and expensive star. There is among much time spent detailing the contours of McQueen's face, to the neglect of the surrounding characters, and even to the neglect of the surroundings —the movie has the cheesy look and feel of a catch-penny the cheesy look and leel of a catch-penny Spaghetti Western. Visually, it settles on two clichéd images: men on horses riding single file against a backdrop of moun-tains, and men standing upright against a backdrop of vivid sunsets. It looks cheap. Perhaps the budget ended up in McQueen's pocket.

Even the moments of dramatic crisis are overtone and underplanned when some one is murdered or is killed in self-defense, the deed is photographed in Peckinpah-style slow motion, to the accompaniment of Ernest Gold's melodramatic music. MCQueen is still a time, intuitive actor, but ie is apparently hamstrung by his egoism. Unless he finds a project and a director with values and vision (old friends like John Sturges and Sam Peckinpah aren't busy at the moment), he ought to consider taking his fortunes and retiring.

Let's say you roar and giggle at fire extinguishers being squirted at people. Suppose the indiacriminate shooting of pistols brings you tears of laughte; or that the sight of a Doberman pinscher drinking liquor you find side spiliting. Then you 're not likely to believe that Where the Bilglio Roam is hopelessly infantile.

After seeing this very unfumy movie, I made a beeline to the public library and read to be the seeing th most rhapsodic in its excess. Who cared if he was an alcoholic, a junkie, or a masochist? All that matieted was what he put down on paper. In Where the Bugliol Roam, Bill Murray portrays him as an insufferable boro, an escape from the loony bin whom no one will quell for fear of the possible consequence. Essentially, the film is an extended "Saturday Night Live" sketch. It wants to be a high-low flag of the property of the pro John Kaye and director Art Linson don't have the patience to develop their gags; they simply prod Murray into doing incredibly dumb things that definitely are not funny. This movie is similar to The Jerk in that regard. It confuses idiocy for humor. Considering his past accomplishments, Thompson should be ashamed to have sanctioned this emburrassment.

Friday the 13th provides a three-part test of one's common sense. 1) While lodging at a desolate summer camp during a nighttime thundershower, you visit a friend's cabin and discover a blood-stained axe on the mattress. Would you (a) jump into your car and flee, (b) call the police, or (c) stumble around in the dark saying, "Maybe we oughta call somebody about "Maybe we ought can somebody about this"? 2) During that same thunderstorm, if you stumbled upon several friends who had been gruesomely murdered, would you (a) jump into your car and flee, (b) arm yourself, or (c) flop about in the dark won-dering aloud, What the hell is going on around here? Finally, if after being attacked by a crazed woman with a hatchet and then escaping unscathed, would you (a) run like the devil, (b) hide in a closet and pant so loudly someone in an adjacent county could hear you, or (c) take a shotgun and blow your assailant to kingdom ridiculous thriller is way out of whack. Even poorly done murder mysteries can be fun. For instance, I am a fan of deliberately tun. For instance, I am a fan of deliberately perverse movies such as Dawn of the Dead, Invasion of the Blood Farmers, The Hills Have Eyes, and The Killing Kind because they proceed with a truly perverse logic that is entertaining throughout; they don't try to make sense and therefore they make perfect sense—if you share an affinity for comical lunatics. (Of course, they also derive much of their inspiration from Alfred Hitchcock.) But this seummy, sleazy film borrows not only from Hitch-cock but from lesser talents such as Tobe Hooper (The Texas Chainsaw Massacre) and Brian De Palma (the finale is lifted straight from Carrie). It's ugly to look at (all dysenteric greens) in addition to being humorless. Director Sean Cunningham, when he wants shocks, looks to the when he wants shocks, looks to the pecial-effects obgentment for extra pints of fake blood; when he wants laughs, he has one of the tlentless startless initiate a "strip Monopoly" game. And throughout the entire enterprise, the audience knows who the killer is. I can think of nothing more boring than a horror movie that doesn't save, doesn't generate deviant, wicked faughs, and makes you worry that your watch may be broken.

Clive Donner is a good comic director. To this day I believe that Wharf's New Pussyord? is the best clinematic representation of Woodly Allen's brand of humor. But it seems that Donner has lately fallen into hard times. His last film, Old Dracula, was a feeble speed on the vamper genre; and his lates, The Nade Bomb, is a lame with the control of the Nade State of the Na more than a decade since the "Get Smart" television series went out of production. And in that time, the chief (Edward Platt) has died, agent 99 (Barbara Feldon) has gone on to Broadway productions, and Smart's ingratiating dimwittedness is no longer amusing, just dumb. Don Adams, in his second-most-famous role (after Tennessee Turch), returneds "Swart come for in his second-most famous role (after Ten-nessee Tuscolo), resurrents Smart comfor-ably enough, but what worked for a televi-sion series doesn't translate well into a feature-length film. Smart's famed dumbling has become so familiar over the years it has utterly lost its novelty. As most a familie Donner and Adams, I'm sorry to say that his move is a ply titled.

THE TRUTH ABOUT PROP. 10

WHAT IO WILL DO:

- evictions.
  Prohibit local City Councils and the Board of Supervisors from even considering any laws that would protect renters and mobilehome owners from excessive rent
- increases. 8. Weaken state and local
- Constitution restrictions so biased towards the real estate industry that it would be legally impossible to establish meaningful rent relief.

WHAT IO WON'T DO:

Will not establish a ceiling on rent increases in San Diego.
 Will not stop condo or

2. Will not sop condo or mobilithore park conversions. In fact, the same real estate interests promoting Prop. 10 opposed any stempts to restrict condo conversions in San. 3. Will not build one more unit of alfordable housing. According to the State Department of Housing and Community Development the current practice of letting developers build low and moderate Income apartments on city owned land in exchange for agreeing to real limitation on rhose units.

If you care about Balboa Park, please read this message

A lot of people are confused about the Navy's plans to build a new hospital in Balboa Park. Here are some of the more common mis-

Understandings:

Florida Canyon, in the heart of Babos Park, has always been the Navy's favorite choice for constuction of a new facility.

Not true. The Navy studied locations for a new hospital from 1972 to 1974 and Murphy Canyon Heights, near Tierrasanta, was determined to be the best possible site. It was only when Congressman Bob Wilson later changed his mind about favoring Murphy Canyon that the Navy was forced to consider less, appealing locations, among them, Babos Fark.

Park.

Not true. Proposition D, on the ballot last September, did not receive the necessary two-thirds vote to remove Florida Canyon from park use. Yet city officials traveled to Washington, D.C., with word that the citizens of San Diego had acted to approve the Navy's expansion in the park.

The proposed medical complex won't severely affect Balboa Park. It depends on what you mean by severe. The intrusion of the hospital will effectively cut the park in two. Automobile congestion will increase dramatically. Our park will never be the same.

It's true that the federal government can condemn private and public land in the national interest. But Congress must grant the funds for such projects. Congressmen won't hand over the necessary money if they know there is strong public resistance.

The decision has already been made to build in Balboa Park and a new hospital there is incritable. Again, not true. There is considerable debate in Congress as to whether the Navy's current plans construction has not yet been appropriated. There is still time to act.

four things you can do today:

1. Sign the three coupons below and mail them to Alan Cranston, Clair Burgener, and Lionel Van Deerlin. These legislators can and will stop the Navy from building in Balboa Park if they know how you

2. Make one telephone call. Between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., call Mayor Pete Wilson's office (236-6330) and say to the receptionist. "My name is Please tell the mayor that Lobject under any terms. Please choose another location. Thank you."

3. Send a check to the Balboa Park Defense Fund, 835 Fifth Avenue, San Diego 92101. They are now in tederal court on this matter and need money to keep the case alive for you. Volunter your assistance by calling 232-7196.

4. Pass this ad on to a friend.

Thank you for caring enough to read this far. With your help, Balboa Park will survive this threat and re-main what it was intended to be: a beautiful sanctuary for all San
