By KE, You're Standing On My Foot

Here’s a little known fact about Boston’s most famous landmark: the statue of Paul Revere, which has been standing on the Freedom Trail for over 200 years. For decades, people have marveled at its intricate detail and historical significance. But what many may not know is that there is an ongoing debate about the statue’s location.

There are those who argue that the statue should remain where it is, as it has been a symbol of Boston’s heritage for centuries. Others believe that it should be moved to a more prominent location, where it can be seen by more people. Still others think it should be removed altogether, as it represents a dark chapter in American history.

As the debate rages on, one thing is certain: the statue of Paul Revere is an iconic symbol of Boston’s past and present. Whether it stays where it is or is moved, it will continue to inspire and educate future generations about the events that shaped our nation.

Limos say, because we have to make a living. But if I was to be honest, I'd have to say it's not all about the money. It's about the memories we create, the stories we tell, and the experiences we share.

In the end, it's the people who matter most. It's the families we work with, the friends we meet, and the stories we hear. These are the moments that make it all worthwhile.

That's what makes it all worthwhile.

In the history of humankind, salt has played a symbolic role unmatched by any other substance used in the arts. The poet's ink, the savant's formulae, the artist's palette, and even the athlete's measure of performance—all have been linked to the ancient mineral. The salt that was discovered was not a result of earth's geological process but rather, a product of man's creative genius. It was salt that allowed for the preservation of food and the creation of taste. It was salt that transformed the humblest of ingredients into something extraordinary.

My Tale
Salt was one of the most simple yet profound substances in my life. Salt is not easily available to everyone, yet it is a necessity that is needed in our daily lives. Salt is a substance that is connected to the fabric of human society throughout history. It was salt that allowed for the preservation of food and the creation of taste. It was salt that transformed the humblest of ingredients into something extraordinary.

The history of salt is a story of human ingenuity and resourcefulness. Salt was not found in abundance in all parts of the world, which led to its value as a trade commodity. Salt was traded across continents, and its value was often used as a measure of wealth. In the ancient world, salt was considered a luxury item, and its possession was a sign of status.

Laffit Pincay: A Life in Silks

By Eleanor Wider

On Sunday, August 17, as the mighty Laffit Pincay Gallop Road and the Red Man, Laffit Pincay, the finest American thoroughbred of the last quarter century, was mobilized for his greatest race, the 1930 Kentucky Derby. In addition to his owning and racing interests, Pincay was also a leading breeder and horseman. His influence on the sport of horseracing was immense, and his contributions to the development of the sport are still felt today.

Laffit Pincay was born on January 17, 1890, in Mexico City, Mexico. He was the son of a wealthy family and was educated in both Mexico and the United States. He began his racing career as a jockey and quickly rose to become one of the top riders in the country. His success as a jockey led to his ownership and racing career, and he became one of the most successful thoroughbred owners of his time.

In 1929, Pincay founded the Laffit Pincay Stable, which became one of the most successful thoroughbred stables in the United States. He owned horses in both the United States and Mexico, and his horses were known for their speed and agility.

Pincay was a controversial figure, both in his own time and in later years. He was known for his flamboyant style and his extravagant lifestyle, and he was often in the news for his gambling debts and other financial problems. However, he was also a devoted family man and a dedicated horseman, and he leaves behind a legacy of success and influence in the world of horseracing.

In conclusion, Laffit Pincay was one of the greatest thoroughbred owners of the last century. His contributions to the sport of horseracing are immeasurable, and his legacy will continue to be felt for many years to come.

SUNSET magazine

October 1971

Laffit Pincay is internationally celebrated as the father of modern horse racing in the United States. His influence on the sport has been profound, and his family's legacy continues to this day. This article in Sunset magazine explores the life and times of Laffit Pincay, providing insights into his contributions to the sport and his personal journey.

What Hath Mank Merecked?

JEFF SMITH

In the middle of the first act of Gone with the Wind, a man named Robert E. Lee is seen on stage. He is the cotton planter who owns the farm where Scarlett O'Hara lives. The scene is set in the cotton fields of Georgia, and the weather is hot and humid. The sun is shining brightly, casting a vibrant light over the landscape. The air is thick with the scent of blooming flowers, and there are birdsong filling the air.

In the background, a small group of men can be seen working in the fields. They are busy tending to the crops, plowing and planting, and the sound of their tools echoes through the field. In the foreground, a young girl stands on a platform, her hands clasped together in front of her. She is wearing a long white dress, adorned with flowers, and her hair is styled in intricate braids.

As the scene progresses, the group of men in the background can be heard singing a simple tune. Their voices rise in unison, creating a harmonious melody that fills the space with a sense of hope and anticipation.

The young girl on the platform begins to dance, her movements graceful and fluid. The sun shines down upon her, casting a warm glow over her face. Her eyes are closed as she moves, lost in the music and the rhythm of the dance.

In the distance, a horse can be seen running freely, its hooves kicking up dust as it gallops across the field. The horse's muscles are taut and defined, its coat gleaming in the sunlight. The sound of its galloping feet fills the air, adding to the already vibrant soundscape.

As the scene comes to a close, the young girl steps down from the platform, her dress billowing in the breeze. She walks away, her head held high, her spirit unbroken. The men in the background continue to work, their faces set in a determined expression.

The scene is set, the stage is cleared, and the audience is left to ponder the events to come. What will happen next? What will the young girl do? What will the horse's fate be?

The answers to these questions lie in the pages that follow. As the audience takes their seats, they are immersed in the story, their minds drawn into the world of Gone with the Wind, where anything is possible.

CURRENT MOVIES

- The Big Red One: Based on the memoirs of a World War II soldier, this film offers a raw and realistic portrayal of war.

- The Black Stallion: A touching tale of a young boy's bond with a magnificent horse.

- The Blue Lagoon: A story of love and survival set against the backdrop of a desert island.

- The Exorcist: A classic horror film that delves into the world of the supernatural.

- The Omen: A psychological thriller that follows the story of a child who is revealed to be the Antichrist.

- The Green Berets: A military drama that depicts the operations of special forces units.

- The Thomas Crown Affair: A crime thriller that follows the story of a mastermind thief.

- A Mother: A father: A son: A family - A film that explores the complexities of family dynamics.

- Fantasia: An avant-garde film that combines music and animation to create a unique cinematic experience.

- The Stunt Man: A film about a stuntman who becomes involved in a dangerous plot.

- Midnight Movie Magic: A film that celebrates the magic of cinema and the power of storytelling.
CURRENT MOVIES

The Visitor - Directed by Walter Hill, this film stars Richard Gere as a business executive who becomes an unlikely friend to a Hungarian refugee (played by Robert De Niro). The movie explores themes of friendship and the human spirit.

Silence of the Lambs - A sequel to the 1991 film, this movie continues the story of Special Agent Clarice Starling (played by Jodie Foster) as she investigates the serial killer John Gacy (played by Ted Levine). The film follows Clarice as she uncovers a link between Gacy and a previous case.

The Hunted - Directed by Peter Weir, this film stars Chris Cooper as a army contractor who is hired to fetch a group of military veterans from a remote area in the U.S. territories. The veterans are seeking revenge for a previous incident.

The Last Tango in Paris - Adapted from the novel by Paul Verlaine, this film stars Marlon Brando as a man who returns to Paris after years of absence to confront the past and the people who caused him pain.

The Last Wave - A group of Aborigine tribesmen come to Sydney to seek help from an Australian lawyer (played by Geoffrey Rush) when they believe the spirits are summoning them to return to their homeland. The movie explores themes of culture and spirituality.

Narrow Can Walk - Directed by Sydney Pollack, this film stars Barbra Streisand and Robert Redford as a couple who decide to take a trip to the Bahamas to renew their relationship.

The Dancer Upstairs - Directed by Mike Nichols, this film stars Ethan Hawke as a struggling dancer who becomes involved in a relationship with a wealthy woman (played by Uma Thurman).

The Hunter - Directed by Jocelyn Moorhouse, this film stars Jane March and Sam Neill as a couple who become entangled in a dangerous game of cat and mouse.

The Mountain Men - Directed by John Sayles, this film stars Michael Rapaport as a man who becomes involved in a dangerous game of cat and mouse.

Currently playing at Crowne Plaza.
