Those Who Would DANCE
Eat like a mouse, work like a horse, don't date, and train until you can barely stand. Then you can audition for the New York City Ballet. Chances are, you won't make it.

City Lights

So's Your Old Man

On partly cloudy... every working day for the last dozen years, the scene has been the same: a steely-eyed man, in his early 60s, emerges from the Mission Street subway, sprints across the intersection toward the Transamerica Pyramid, then scurries up the steps to the front door of the office he used to own, San Francisco's Bank of America.

The man, who calls himself "The Boss," is a former bank executive who, after being fired, started a chain of events that led to the creation of a national bank consolidation plan.

Walking Group Stretches Legs

On any given day, you can find a group of people walking up and down the streets of downtown San Francisco, enjoying the cool weather and the scenery.

Weinglass Gets Tipped On Potential Juries

When you talk to people in the legal world, it's hard to find anyone who wouldn't want to be on a jury. But what about potential jurors? Are they as enthusiastic? It depends on who you ask.

The Baja Pipeline

A new pipeline is under construction off the coast of Mexico, and it's expected to be operational by 1985. The pipeline will carry natural gas from the Baja California Peninsula to the United States.

Case of The Staircase

The case of The Staircase has been the subject of much media attention. The story involves a young man who was accused of murdering his wife.

Negro Leaders Rallied

Negro leaders in the city have teamed up to form a new organization, the National Negro Leadership Coalition, to address issues affecting the community.

City Lights

A group of volunteers is organizing a new edition of the City Lights poetry collection, featuring works by prominent poets from around the world.

Sea's Your Old Man

A man leaves his office building and walks down the street, looking at the people and things around him. He notices a group of people sitting on a bench, and he joins them to talk.

Walking Group Stretches Legs

A group of people is walking down the street, enjoying the fresh air and the scenery. They are all in good spirits, talking and laughing.

Weinglass Gets Tipped On Potential Juries

A lawyer tips his hat to a potential juror, acknowledging her presence and expressing appreciation.

The Baja Pipeline

A pipeline is being built to transport oil from Baja California to the United States. The project has sparked controversy and opposition from environmental groups.

Case of The Staircase

The case of The Staircase continues to gain attention. The defendant is still awaiting trial, and it is unclear what will happen next.

Matthew Alice

Dear Matthew Alice:

When I read your recent article in California Nights, I was so impressed with your two-page spread that I wanted to express my appreciation for your work. I have long admired your ability to capture the essence of the local music scene and your talent for writing engaging, insightful pieces. Your article on the local musicians that have been on tour with our favorite bands was particularly well done. You have a great eye for detail and a talent for storytelling that draws readers into your world. Your passion for music is evident in your writing, and it is a pleasure to see such talent being recognized and appreciated. Keep up the good work! I look forward to reading more of your articles in the future.

Sincerely,

DANCE

A school event that was the rage throughout the city was the ballet company's production of "Swan Lake." The performance was held at the Lincoln Center and was advertised as the "biggest hit of the season." The ballet company's dancers, dressed in their traditional costumes, moved gracefully across the stage, captivating the audience with their skill and artistry. The music, composed by Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky, provided a perfect backdrop for the dancers' movements. The production was directed by a renowned choreographer, known for his innovative interpretations of classic ballets. The audience was unanimous in their praise, calling it "a masterpiece of dance." The event was a huge success, and the dancers received a standing ovation at the end of the performance.
DANCE (continued from page 17)

"We'll work hard and we'll work long, but we'll also have a lot of fun," that's how the Feast of St. Joseph Dancers, a 55-year-old

Dance Theatre of Harlem, define their approach to the art form.

The company, which is based in New York, was founded in 1969 by Alvin Ailey, who had been trained at the

New York City Ballet and the Joffrey Ballet. He wanted to create a company that would showcase the cultural diversity of American dance and celebrate the diverse heritage of African Americans.

Ailey's vision was to create a new kind of dance company that would reflect the richness and diversity of African American culture. He wanted to create a space where dancers could express their own experiences and perspectives, and he wanted to create a space where dancers could grow and develop as artists.

Ailey's company quickly gained recognition and success, and today it is one of the most renowned dance companies in the world. The company has produced a number of iconic works, including

Alvin Ailey's famous solo piece, "Revelations.

In addition to its original works, the company

also produces commissions and new works,

and it has a strong commitment to education and outreach programs. It has a strong presence in schools and communities around the world,

and it has a strong commitment to making dance

available to all audiences.

On February 17, the company presented a program that included works by Alvin Ailey,

Kathleen Dean, and Donald McKayle. The program also featured a new work by the company's resident choreographer, Camille Grant. The program was a celebration of the company's heritage and its commitment to creating a space

where dancers can express their own experiences and perspectives.

The DANCE program will continue on page 20.

In matters of English usage, I am an amateur conservator. Naturally, I think it odd that my workmanlike efforts, in which many original words, as well as lines and phrases, are used, should be rejected. But what is the use of a man who cannot distinguish between a 'fish' and a 'fellow'? And how can I teach this to anyone else? I am quite sure that the work of our conservators is not always recognized, and that many people think that they are doing a great deal of good by using words which are not used by the English-speaking world. It is a matter of great importance to me that these words should be used correctly, and that people should not be led astray by the use of words which are not correct.

The most important thing to bear in mind is that the words 'fish' and 'fellow' are used in different senses. 'Fish' means a living creature, and 'fellow' means a person. The former is used in a general sense, and the latter is used in a more specific sense. The former is used in a general sense, and the latter is used in a more specific sense.

In the case of our conservators, it is essential that they should use the correct words. The use of the wrong words will only lead to confusion, and will make it difficult for people to understand the work that is being done.

Bits and Pieces

JONATHAN SAVILE

Last year the famed Piano Trio was suspected to have played at St. Andrews Hall.
That was before the Tunes of life were recorded for whatever reason. But on Auster Thursday night, the trio returned, and this time they wereChippewa Valley Music Society, as I then found out, so in the true spirit of the music they had scheduled another of their performances.

The trio is known for its ability to breathe new life into classic pieces, and this was evident in their performance that night. The music flowed smoothly, with each member seamlessly transitioning from one composition to the next.

The first piece they played was a modern composition by John Adams, which was performed with precision and passion.
The second piece was a classical piece by Beethoven, which was played with grace and elegance.

Overall, the performance was a memorable one, and it was clear that the trio had put a lot of effort into preparing for their performance. The Chippewa Valley Music Society is to be commended for providing such high-quality musical experiences to the community.

Do You Trust City Politicians To Run A $226,000,000 Tax Supported Convention Center?

Before you mail your ballot, consider the following facts about the proposed Convention Center.

Even its backers admit the proposed Convention Center will require a tax increase.

In fact, they admit the tax increase will be in the millions of dollars.

The Convention Center would cost the taxpayers $226,000,000, according to the city's own report.

City Politicians promised to run the proposed Convention Center at a profit, but failed!

IF THE PROPOSED CONVENTION CENTER FAILS TO PAY ITS $6 MILLION A YEAR DEBT SERVICE, THE POLITICIANS WILL MAKE UP THE DIFFERENCE WITH OUR TAX DOLLARS.

THE READER PUZZLE
No. 133 Piano Roll Blues

"CALIFORNIA, HERE I COME"
"BORN FREE"
"WINCHESTER CATHEDRAL"

Women's and men's answer to Reader Puzzle No. 133: Same to you.

For those of you who are new at this: It's a game of guess what someone else is thinking. To play, you'll need a coin and a piece of paper.

Suppose you're thinking of a song. To play, you'll need a coin and a piece of paper.

The object of the game is to keep guessing what someone else is thinking, until you've guessed all their songs.

The first person to guess all the songs wins.

The second person to guess all the songs loses.

Here's how to play:

1. Each person has a coin and a piece of paper.
2. Each person writes down their guess.
3. The first person to guess all the songs wins.
4. The second person to guess all the songs loses.

Good luck! And don't forget to have fun!
