Just Filling In
It's time to talk trash in San Diego County.

"The beast refuses to stay down, man. Every day it grows, and then we knock it down. Then another one grows right next to it, like in that Disney cartoon — can't remember its name — with all the water buckets that keep popping up, one after another. The thing is a monster that eats everything. And San Diego feeds it 361 days a year. Five pounds a day, each person does, whatever they don't want anymore. Then they turn their back on it. It's...

Cracks About Benita

In the morning a house in the Boca Raton Highlands area of Boca Raton was found to be in need of repair. Although the owner, who was not home, decided to leave the house temporarily, the problem was not serious. The owner stated that the damage was caused by a leak in the roof, which had been damaged by a recent storm. The repair was expected to be completed within a few days.

WATERBED OWNERS!

Save up to $360 per year on your electric bill for waterbed heating

Just Filling In

An old saying that "you don't know what you have until it's gone" is applicable to many areas of life. It is certainly true when it comes to the use of waterbeds. The warm water circulated through the mattress provides a unique comfort for those who use it. However, the energy cost associated with heating the water can be significant. One way to reduce this cost is by choosing a waterbed that is energy-efficient.

Here are some tips to help you save on your electric bill when using a waterbed:

1. Choose an energy-efficient waterbed: Look for waterbeds that have Energy Star certification. These products meet strict energy efficiency guidelines set by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

2. Use a timer: Most waterbeds come with a timer that allows you to set the temperature and duration of the heating cycle. Use this feature to reduce energy consumption.

3. Insulate your waterbed: Insulating your waterbed will help retain heat and reduce the amount of energy needed to heat the water.

4. Use a waterbed cover: A waterbed cover can help retain heat and reduce energy consumption.

5. Check for leaks: Make sure there are no leaks in your waterbed system. Leaks can cause your waterbed to use more energy.

By following these tips, you can save money on your electric bill while still enjoying the comfort of a waterbed.
They waded through the trash: cat sand, avocado peels, coffee grinds, rotting leaves, even a dead bird or two.

"I've never seen it like this," said San Diego resident John Smith. "It's really quite concerning. The streets are always full of trash, but this is just outrageous."

"It's unbelievable," added another resident, Jane Doe. "We've been littering for decades, but this is taking it to a whole new level."

City officials are now considering implementing stricter measures to combat this issue, including increased fines and potential jail time forrepeat offenders.

"We need to take action now," said Mayor Jones. "This is not acceptable and we will not tolerate it any longer."

A question of whether to redevelop or to repurpose an old property is a common one in many cities. And while there is no one-size-fits-all answer, some factors to consider include the property's potential for increased value, local regulations, and environmental concerns.

The project in question is located in the heart of the city and has been vacant for several years. The owner is considering either selling it for a quick profit or repurposing it for long-term gain.

A potential buyer has shown interest in the property, offering a higher price than the owner is willing to accept. However, the owner is more interested in exploring the possibility of repurposing the property for a social or community benefit.

Another option is to collaborate with local businesses to create a mixed-use development that includes retail, office, and residential spaces. This approach could attract a diverse group of people and generate a positive economic impact.

Regardless of the decision, it is important to engage with the community and ensure that the redevelopment plan aligns with their interests and values. This could involve hosting public meetings, seeking feedback, and involving local stakeholders in the decision-making process.
Memories of Old La Jolla

By Eleanor Widmer

As the war clouds gathered over Europe, our family, like so many others, was caught up in the excitement and anxiety of the times. We were a young family, with three small children, and we had never been to a war zone. But the news was all around us, and we knew that it was only a matter of time before it would come to our doorstep.

One day, we received a letter from our neighbors, the Smiths. They were going to Europe to visit their relatives and they invited us to come along. We were hesitant at first, but the idea of spending time away from the war seemed like a good idea. We packed up our bags and set off on our journey.

The trip was long and exhausting, but we were determined to make the most of it. We visited many cities, and we saw so many things that we had never seen before. It was an eye-opening experience, and it taught us a lot about the world.

When we returned home, we were changed people. We had seen things that we never could have imagined, and we were grateful for the opportunity to see them. We were also grateful to be home, and we were eager to share our experiences with our friends and family.

In the years that followed, we continued to travel, and we continued to learn. We never forgot the lessons we learned on that trip, and we always tried to remember to be grateful for what we had.

It was a time of change, and it was a time of growth. We were all different when we returned home, and we were all better for it. We were grateful to have been able to see so much, and we were grateful to have come home.

Crime Plays

"If we were responsible for our own thoughts, who could go on living?" This dramatic conclusion to Jon Kern's "Crime Plays" perfectly illustrates the concept of personal responsibility. The play, performed at the University of California at San Diego's La Jolla Playhouse, focuses on the moral and ethical dilemmas faced by its characters. Kern's thought-provoking script explores themes of guilt, innocence, and free will. Through a series of vignettes, Kern delves into the complexities of moral decision-making, leaving the audience questioning their own beliefs and actions.
