San Diegans
Reminisce about
World War II
"It's going to be a thrill and we were remarking the other day,
our home in San Diego, while looking at the radio. Suddenly the programme was interrupted and the announcement made by Pearl Harbor. We knew what had happened. We didn't wait for the radio. We turned on our own radio and heard the story. It was a shocking news.

"I remember walking down the street, and there was a lot of excitement. I came home and asked my mother what was going on. She said, 'It's civil war.' I was about 10 years old.

"We lived in a small apartment on Patterson Avenue. Our apartment was bombarded by Japanese planes.

"After the first attack, I heard a voice on the radio saying, 'This country is going to be at war.'
We didn't know what that meant.

WAR!

"We wanted the first few weeks in our new home in Coos Bay, with a headboard, but a cool room with kitchen privileges. The two was a place to play in the sun and have a good time."

However, life was not so easy. Everyone was dealing with their own struggles, and the war was far from over. The situation was tense, and the future was uncertain.

Don't Bust That Bottle on My Account

By Thomas K. Arnold

Colorado Heat

A friend who's a played guitarist in various bands for ten years told me not to worry when I told him last month that I had driven into a store and got stuck in the back for three hours. "You're crazy," he told me, shaking his head. "I've been stuck in my car for a few hours at a time before." He was a bit concerned about my driving skills, but not too worried.

The store was a liquor outlet, and I had driven into the back of the store while trying to back out. The car was stuck, and I was trapped. I tried to wriggle out, but it was no use. I had to call for help, and the store owner came to assist me.

I had walked into the store to buy some wine for a friend's birthday. I had driven my car to the store, but I couldn't find a parking space. I decided to park in the back, but I didn't realize that the car was so close to the back wall. I couldn't back out, and I was stuck.

The store owner was kind enough to help me get my car out of the back of the store. We had to use some cones and a couple of guys to help push the car out. I was relieved when I finally got my car out of the back of the store and drove home.

I learned a valuable lesson that day. I should have paid more attention to my surroundings and made sure I had a parking spot before driving into the store. I was lucky that the store owner was kind enough to help me.

Don't Bust That Bottle on My Account.
"Don't Bust That Bottle"

The last phase of the speech was special, since it was delivered by Faye Wall, a tall, black woman who stood up and the other group members who had come to support her. She spoke about the importance of keeping the neighborhood free of alcohol and drugs, and how she had seen the negative effects of drugs on her family and friends.

She ended by asking the audience to think about the future of their children and to consider the impact of their own actions on the community.

The session ended with a rousing chorus of "We're Gonna Keep On"

singing, and everyone left with a sense of hope and determination to make a positive change in their community.

The Restaurant: Yan Wah
The Cuisine: Cantonese
Type of Food: Mandarin Chinese
Price Range: Individual dishes, $1.50 to $2.00
Reservations: Open daily 11:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m.

For sheer variety of ingredients, few restaurants can equal that at Yan Wah. During your stay in Canton, Yan Wah is a social and cultural experience that you cannot miss. On the menu, they combine bamboo shoots, bamboo shoots, bamboo shoots, and more bamboo shoots, along with a variety of other ingredients. They serve everything from bamboo shoots to bamboo shoots, bamboo shoots, and more bamboo shoots. The selection is so large that it will take you days to try them all.

The menu starts with a list of appetizers, which include steamed dumplings, vegetable spring rolls, and egg rolls. The main courses are served with a choice of white or brown rice, and you can order them in any combination you like. The portions are huge, so you may want to share with someone.

For dessert, they have a selection of fruits, which they call "fruit salad." The fruit salad is made with fresh fruits such as apples, bananas, and strawberries. They also have a variety of cold drinks, which include lemonade, iced tea, and soda.

In addition to the food, Yan Wah also offers a range of beverages, including wine, beer, and soft drinks. They have a wine list that includes a variety of wines from different regions. The prices are quite reasonable, and they are happy to help you choose.

Overall, Yan Wah is an excellent choice for those who want to experience Cantonese cuisine in a relaxed and comfortable setting. The service is friendly and attentive, and the food is delicious. I highly recommend you try it.
