POSTCARDS FROM WESTERN CIVILIZATION
No Dough, No Show
Martin George and California Democratic Party officials were caught off guard last week when a group of 10 children, who organized a lemonade stand, walked into the state Capitol in Sacramento and presented a handwritten check for $100. The children, who had been handing out lemonade at a stand in front of the Capitol, had saved their money to make a donation to the state's official "No Dough, No Show" campaign.

The campaign, which was launched in 1990, is aimed at raising awareness about how much money is donated to political campaigns and how little money actually goes to the candidates. The children, who are part of a group called the "Lemonade Democrats," presented the check to the campaign's treasurer, Gary Hart, who commended them for their efforts.

Hart said that the children's action serves as a reminder that even small donations can make a difference. "These kids are showing us that even the smallest efforts can add up to something significant," he said. "We need to continue to raise awareness about this issue, and I'm proud to have these young activists on our side."

So you got brave once and asked Louie Kelcher his shoe size. You want the Pulitzer Prize now, or what?

BY STEPHEN HEFFNER

So last week I got a letter from Arthur Kasrinsky. It was a letter to the editor in the Times, and I just happened to notice it had gotten to the Times.

"Mr. Heffner," began the letter. "I've noticed that you always seem to write about Louie Kelcher's shoe size. I just wanted to let you know that I've been thinking about it, and I've come to the conclusion that it's really not such a big deal."

I was taken aback. I mean, I was just thinking about it, not writing about it. But I guess that's why I'm an editor.

But then I thought about it some more, and I realized that there's something to be said for Frank Rich's approach to the subject. After all, if you're going to write about something, you might as well take it seriously.

So I sat down and wrote the letter you see above. I hope it helps to get the issue out into the open.

The point of the letter is not to be critical of the Times, but to try and help people understand why they might want to write about Louie Kelcher's shoe size. It's not just a matter of curiosity, but of understanding the deeper meaning of the shoe size.

For example, if you look at it in the context of the wider world of shoe sizing, you can see that it's really a matter of understanding the human condition. Why do people care so much about shoe size? Is it just a matter of fashion, or is there something deeper at work?

I think there is, and I think it's important to understand the deeper meaning behind it. That's why I wrote the letter, and I hope it helps to get the issue out into the open.

And speaking of the shoe size, I just wanted to let you know that it's not really that big of a deal. In fact, I think it's kind of cute. I mean, who doesn't want to know what shoe size Louie Kelcher wears?

So there you have it. I hope it helped. And if you have any questions or comments, feel free to write me back.

Sincerely,

Stephan Heffner

I go to New York to see my mother. She lives across the street from a building in Manhattan that once housed the New York Times. Most of the rooms have been converted to apartments, but that doesn’t matter to me. It’s the Times that I care about. I’m sure my mother would say the same thing. She moved to New York when she was a young woman. She was a part of the Times, in a way. She wrote for the newspaper, and she lived here. She was a part of the city, too. She saw the Times every day, and she knew the people who worked there. She would have loved to see the building that housed the newspaper, and she would have loved to see the people who worked there. She was a part of the city, and she was a part of the newspaper. She was a part of something that was important to her. She was a part of something that was important to me.

All Sorts of Mail, All Sorts of People

ANTHONY TURNER

Somehow, with the excitement building up inside, I was unable to sleep. The noise of the air conditioning made it impossible for me to fall asleep. I decided to take a walk around the city, to clear my mind. The streets were empty, and the quietness was soothing. I walked for hours, feeling the city's energy, the life, and the people. It was a perfect night to observe the people, to see their faces, their expressions, their stories. Each person had a story, a history, a reason for being here. Some were happy, others were sad. Some were smiling, others were frowning. It was a beautiful night to observe the city's inhabitants. It was a night to remember, a night to reflect on the beauty of life, the beauty of the people who make up this city.

This Operatic Life

JONATHAN SAVILLE

The recent performance of Verdi’s "La Traviata" at the San Francisco Opera was a success, not just for its technical aspects, but also for its emotional intensity. The opera, set in the 19th century, follows the story of Violetta Valéry, a courtesan who falls in love with Alfredo Germont, a young man of high social status.

The opera opens with Violetta and Alfredo enjoying a leisurely stroll in the gardens of the wealthy man. As the scene progresses, the tension builds, with Alfredo’s father, Giorgio Germont, arriving to demand that his son leave Violetta. The family is represented by indifference and neglect, in stark contrast to the passionate love between Violetta and Alfredo.

The role of Violetta is performed by the world-renowned soprano Maria Callas, whose voice is said to be one of the most beautiful in history. Callas’s rendition of "Libiamo ne’ lieti calici" (Drink to the Joyous Season) is a highlight of the performance.

Another key role in the opera is that of Alfredo, played by the tenor Plácido Domingo. Domingo’s voice is powerful and clear, and he brings a sense of innocence and purity to the character.

The performance of "La Traviata" at the San Francisco Opera was a testament to the power of music and the human spirit. The emotional depth and technical skill displayed by the cast and crew were truly remarkable, making for a truly operatic life experience.

QUICKIE VS SATISFIED

Take a cigarette from your regular pack, and light up. Quick, right?

Now open a pouch of DRUM. Small the rich, imported tobacco. Roll it up in the slice, even burning DRUM paper. Now relax on DRUM's surprising mildness. DRUM can give you 40 supposedly satisfying smokes for the price of 10.

Of course, in the time it takes to smoke a DRUM you would have already two or three times of your regular quickie cigarettes.

But much like a meaningful interpersonal relationship with a mud wrestler, one DRUM should keep you satisfied for a while.

Break away from the pack.
Blowout will be held at all Mad Jack's.

This Friday, Saturday & Sunday live Sany & Alpine Factory Liquidation.

New Tax Reduction Legislation Creates Sensational Benefits For Investors In Income Producing Real Estate
This would be the time now you may still take advantage of the benefits in 1981 through secured real estate projects.

Free Investment Seminar
Our team of real, financial and investment specialists has determined ways that you can benefit through investments in tax-sheltered and income-producing properties. After all, the longer you wait to do something, the more difficult it may be to take advantage of the opportunities that are available to you.

You are cordially invited to attend one of our investment seminar meetings. An opportunity to view a computer-generated investment model will include tax benefits, a free presentation of our current offering, and an outline of our purchase tax saving opportunities.
