City Lights

Slides Into Third?

Money, money, money.

The civic convention center management was trying to make ends meet by holding a series of events. They were desperate to keep the doors open and the lights on.

The city council had approved a $30 million bond issue to fund the convention center, but the revenue from the events was not enough to cover the costs. The management was forced to make cuts, including layoffs and reduced hours for employees.

Meanwhile, the convention center was losing customers to other venues that offered more amenities and lower rates. The management was struggling to keep up with the competition.

The situation was dire, and the management was under pressure from the city council to come up with a plan to save the convention center. They were considering options such as privatization or seeking private funding.

The future of the city's convention center was in doubt, and the management was doing everything they could to keep the lights on and the doors open.

Programs Lead To Recovery

A new initiative to attract more programs and events to the convention center was paying off. The management was happy to see the increase in revenue and the growth of the center.

The city council was pleased with the results and approved a new $10 million expansion to the convention center. The expansion would include additional meeting rooms and a larger ballroom, making the center more attractive to potential clients.

The management was excited about the new facilities and was working hard to attract new programs and events to the convention center.

The future of the city's convention center was bright, and the management was optimistic about the growth of the center.
Fish Stickler

In response to your letter, "From the Fish's Point of View," a few letters appeared in the paper suggesting that the fish might have been "hustled," "bustled," or handled improperly.

I would like to assure you that the fish were treated with utmost care and respect. They were not rushed or handled roughly. In fact, the only handling they received was when they were placed in the water after the market had closed.

I am sorry if there was any confusion or misunderstanding, and I would be happy to provide any further information you may need.

Sincerely,

"Twas like losin' a friend the day
George Killian stopped brewin' the Red."

A n old friend, if you ask me. For nearly a hundred years, the lads all over this part of Ireland knew you could count on the Red. And count on the Red they did.

It was George Killians family who brewed it. And for five generations, they was holdin' true to the taste. And if you ever had just a sip or two for yourself, you'd like 'em for it too.

But then came the black day George Killian stopped brewin' the Red. Some say it was the changin' times that backed him to the wall. 'Modernize,' they said to George.

'Compromise,' George said to them. 'I'll have none of that. Before I change the taste, I'll close the doors.'

And close the doors he did—though a few of the lads came close to tears. And George Killian came close to tears, himself.

Then something grand happened. Over in America, Coors asked George if they could help him bring it back.

'Brew me Killian's Red,' George asked. 'Aye, I'd be proud to brew with you. If you be brewin' it my way.'

'Now George's way was never the easy way. It means slow-roastin' the malt. Takin' a bit more time. And a bit more trouble.'

KILLIAN'S RED
One sip and you'll know they still brew it George's way.

If there were an umpire in the Padres broadcasting booth, he'd have to call Jerry Coleman's mouth out on strikes at least once an inning.

BY STEPHEN HEPFNER

Though he has written about much of what he's seen, the atmosphere of both the Padres and the stadium is always closer to the home of the sport itself, particularly the one in which he grew up. It's a place where he often finds himself striking out on the airwaves. But that's what makes him so good at his job. He's an umpire who can call a game with authority, yet always with a smile. His voice is clear and crisp, and he knows when to give credit where it's due. He's a true professional, and he loves what he does. And he's good at it. It's not easy to do what he does, but he always seems to have the right words to say, the right attitude to have.

DON'T LOOK AT THIS COMMERCIAL UNTIL AFTER 9PM!

1. ANNOUNCER: Go ahead, try on the radio station that's good.

2. out to prove that they're San Diego's best rock.

3. It's good.

4. It feels good

5. And it sounds great

6. KPRF

7. We're out to prove we're San Diego's

8. KPRF: Why don't you try it then?

You may have already seen the KPRF television commercial pictured above. We present it here to make a point.
Because you can't see this commercial before 9 o'clock at night, it seems that the four major San Diego television stations have all declared our commercial is too provocative to show prior to 9pm.

TOO PROVOCATIVE?

We designed the commercial as we did to present a memorable message about KPRF, in a way that would appeal to our listeners.
We do not think the commercial is offensive. More importantly, we question the fairness of being told we can only show it after 9pm.

Especially when there are entire programs on KPRF that are far more provocative than our commercial from Charlie's Angels to M*A*S*H to practically everyday television soap.

WED LIKE YOUR OPINION!

Is the KPRF commercial really so provocative that the TV stations must restrict it to after 9pm? We'd like your opinion. Call us at 565-8705, and tell us what you think. Then listen to KPRF FM 106. You'll hear what San Diego is saying about our commercial.

JONATHAN SAVELLE

Father Nicholas Revetta, whose voice is on the music faculty of the University of Utah, is a magnificent pianist in the classical-romantic mold of Army Major General Charles Ives. His playing is a revelation to hear him prepare, he has had an enormous effect on his students' work and on the development of his art. He has received numerous honorary degrees and has received many awards, including the National Medal of Arts, the highest professional honor given to an American artist. He has been a musician for over 50 years and has served as a concert pianist and teacher. He has taught at the University of Utah for over 20 years and has been a member of the music faculty for over 10 years. He has been a mentor to many students, and his students have gone on to successful careers in music and other fields. He is a humble and gracious man who is deeply loved by his students. His concerts are always sold out and his recordings are highly praised. He is a master of his craft and a true artist.
