Franky was a bit upset. "What's the matter?" Sky asked. "What's wrong?"

"Sorry," Franky mumbled, "it's just..."

"What's just what?"

"It's just..."

Sky grinned. "Spill it, Franky. What's wrong?"

"It's just..."

Sky laughed. "That's what I thought. Now come on, let's get back to work."

Franky nodded and smiled. "Okay, Sky. I'm ready to go."

Sky looked at him. "Good. Let's do this."

Franky nodded again. "Okay."

Sky grinned. "Great. Let's go."

A Letter from the Editor

The Zaxxon game, which was the hot ticket in town the last time I was in New York, is now available in Los Angeles. The game itself is another in a long line of shoot-and-eat games that have been coming out of Japan in recent years. The term "shoot-and-eat" might seem a bit strange, but it describes the action very well. The player controls a ship that moves horizontally across the screen and must avoid obstacles while shooting at enemies. The ship can fire bullets, but it also can absorb energy, which makes it bigger and more powerful. The player must collect energy to stay alive and to defeat the enemies. The game is fast-paced and requires quick reflexes. It is a great game for those who enjoy action-packed games. Recommended.
A Table for Eight

ELEANOR WIDMER

On the Fourth of July, the phone rang and a couple from New York said, "London here." London is an evocative name, but the story that follows the name is even more evocative. London had been hiking through the South of France and came to a small town there and was looking for a place to stay. She was told to try the "Table for Eight" in the Hotel de Paris. London decided to try it and was greeted by a young woman who led her to a table for eight. She was seated and was offered a wide variety of dishes to choose from. She ordered the special of the day, which was a steak, and the young woman suggested she try one of the local wines. London enjoyed her meal and was impressed with the service. She decided to return to the "Table for Eight" the next day and was again greeted by the same young woman. She ordered the same meal and enjoyed it just as much. London was so impressed with the place that she suggested it to a friend who was also visiting the area. The friend loved it and decided to try it out. The "Table for Eight" became a regular spot for both of them and they loved coming back to try new dishes. It was a great place to eat and a great place to meet new people. The "Table for Eight" is definitely worth a visit if you're ever in the area.
Not At All

JONATHAN SAVILLE

"O! Columbus!" a roaring censored of which pleased both at the City Theatre last week, has been profoundly misunderstood and misjudged. The views of the local board are partly correct, and it is to be hoped that they will reconsider the matter before taking any steps which might result in a suppression. The authorities are in an awkward position, and the strength of opposite views is as yet unassimilated with public opinion. Our only suggestion is that our readers may be glad to see the second act of "O! Columbus!" when it is produced again. The play offers a good opportunity for discussion, and it is desirable that the drama should be carefully considered before it is suppressed. SAN DIEGO'S BEST ROCK

Over the past several weeks, KPRI's Peggy has been seen all over San Diego asking people to try on San Diego's Best Rock. She's made personal appearances all over San Diego County taking her case directly to the listener to try KPRI's music. Peggy's public appearances through the direct result of her TV commercial being banned until after 9 p.m. by most San Diego television stations.

If you're one of the thousands of listeners who have seen Peggy in person or had her ring a full color poster for you, you know part of the reason why KPRI is San Diego's most exciting radio station.

From the folks of Dream Valley to the Ocean Beach Fireworks Festival to the night clubs of San Diego, find out why so many listeners are taking Peggy's advice and are trying on San Diego's Best Rock.

REBEL ROCKERS

I was there, Sunday, and it was a blast! The band was on fire and the crowd was absolutely amazing. The energy was electric and the atmosphere was electric. I highly recommend checking them out if you're in the area. The sound was incredible and the stage presence was top-notch. Definitely a show not to be missed.
Portland Makai

Not only are they a great rock band... but a recent survery showed the chances of scoring when Portland Makai is playing are 63% greater than with any other band in town! Surely that means something to someone. Isn't it time you saw Portland Makai?

This map shows about 47,000 acres of pueblo land, all of which once belonged to the public. Now there are only 300 acres left. What follows is a story of PROPERTY, POWER, AND GREED.

Out in the sprawling north of this city is a mesa that rises just south of La Jolla Village Drive, a mile or so west of Interstate 805.

To get there you have to walk.
