I was in Los Angeles when Kelly called. My decision was made: I wanted the abortion. However, I wouldn't tell her what to do, not because I'm benevolent but rather I was certain that without my saying anything, she would quickly opt for the abortion. I assumed a liberal attitude and asked, "What do you want to do?"

"I don't know.
"Did you tell your parents?"
"I can't. I'm embarrassed to tell them. I feel that they il think I've done something terribly wrong." She hesitated. "I told Robin."

Great. "I told Robin."

"I'm tired of talking about beds."
As it was, she arrived home too late to talk. But she later described the dream she had that night. In a doctor's office, she lay on a metai table, her skirt drawn past her hips, her belly big and round like a hill, her body sopped in sweat. Lights glared. The doctor cane holding a long needle. He stack it inside her vagina and pulled a bloody mass from her. But he couldn't sever from her body what he pulled. He pulled and pulled, and the pulled have pulled and pulled, and the pulling hurt. She screamed and awoke. She stayed up through the night.

She screamed and awoke. She stayed up through the night.

Almost all of Kelly's friends had been pregnant and unmarried. All decided to have abortions; none seriously considered having the child. Mary Tomkovich's abortion was in 1977. Tomkovich's abortion was in 1977 when sie and Kelly were cach treaty-two years old. Mary lived with a juzz muscian in a studio in Carmel Valley. He was like a child. He assured her everything wasn't all right. A big, strong woman, still Mary had cried after it was over. But the bad feeling — that the baby had been ripped out of her — oxidn't last long. That night Mary and chemistry and well with the baby had red in the baby had been ripped out of her — oxidn't last long. That night Mary and Kelly went the dinner in Encisions. at central tast cong. Iran night being and kefty went it dimer it Enchiliats, at the Shepherd. They talked about things other than the abortion. They soked and laughed. To Kelly, Many's abortion wasn't a big thing. That a frequently bitter national controversy raged over a 1973 Supreme Court decision—which nearly completely unfet-stered women from legal restrictions to obtain abortions through the first six months of pregnancy—hardly made a dent in Kelly's consciousness. Robin underwent her second abortion in 1979. She didn't know whether the father lived in Hawaii or California. The first abortion had been physically Kelly went to dinner in Encinitas, at

The nurse held her hand and said relax, that she had al-ready made her decision to have one. Kelly paid seat attention to Robin, when after the second abortion Robin continually questioned social mores. continually questioned social mores — why couldn't she have a baby and not be married? Even in 1981, when Linda Covici — an artist friend from Carls-bad — had her abortion, Kelly intellec-tually understood that her friend needed support, but Kelly talked with her about the decision more from duty than emotional empathy. Abortion was just a thing people did when they got Kelly's pregnancy, however, wasn't an isolated risis in her life. She had undergone surgery in early Aprile out a state of the s Also, at age twenty-six, I was involved in the newspaper and magazine business as a writer, and that, I came to understand, has little to do with softness or sympathy or paying heed to the feelings of other people (sometimes even one's lover) but a lot to do with meeting deadlines. That kind of tension was transformine to the way. sion was transforming me the way boiling water hardens an egg, and about as quickly. I put intellectual pragmatism above the freedom (or natural inclination) to follow one's emotions and feelings. But Kelly never felt pressured to succeed in a career; she was born into a wealthy family and knew she could always tun homeward when in need of money—if she were desperate. home to work. What I denied she embraced.

I had wanted life to go smoothly after the ovarian cyst. But now it also, when Kelly was finally happy and active again, enjoying walks and running, came the pregnancy. While I wanted children — maybe even five of them eventually — our first wasn't to follow every eighteen months. There is the common that the common content of the common that is the common that it is the commo thing she carried.

At the same time, something in-triguing and provocative was also oc-curring. What was inside Kelly was more like a human than I had ima-ined. By her tenth week, a little minia-ture person had formed, half the size of my thumb, a bump on the wall of her uterus. The head was inordinately the proposed of the proposed of the theory of the proposed of the pro-ting of the proposed of the pro-tact of the proposed of the pro-tact of the procars, tiny arms and tegs. And I won-dered: was the embryo cognizant on a human level? A brain the size of my fingernail. Could it function? What is human cognizance? How do you judge functionality? I wondered whether what was inside her possessed a soul. Did the soul arise as the result of earth-by living a collection of the comly living, a collection of one's experi-

Kelly work in her journal in the first days after she journal in the first days after she learned she was pregnant. "Yet now I had a living ensity who in nine months would crupt from my body and start a chain of demands, beginning with feeding and changing, etc., and never ending until the day I died, asking for money, cars, etc. I disliked myself for the hesitation and anxiety. After all, my nother had four children by the time she was twenty-seven (my age) and I couldn't even cares one." We went for a walk along San Elijo Lagoon. The trail went down near Seabright Lane, in Solana Beach, and we walked past the broom thusle and castor brush. She walked barefoot, and the skirt she wore was patterned with blooming flowers and leafy limbs. We walked quietly, think, because of the unspoken anxiety and tharmany of the words we each spoke were cruel, and that we were afraid those spoken with apparent understanding and sympathy would be misconstrued as spitefully intended. Also, although I didn't know it then, Kelly had made an appoint-ment for an abortion. Her dramatic sense told her that if she were quiet sense told her that if she were quiet row, when she told me about the ap-pointment, the impact would be even greater. Where there was sand, near where green salt grass grew in the wa-tery mud, we lay down and closed our eyes and lay quietly in the warm sun. We heard each other's breathing and splashing birds skidding down into the shallows to feed. 'Il made an appoint-ment with Dr. Silver on the twenty-first,' she said. 'But if I have the abortion, that's also the first day of work for me at the nextrack. Il may be work for me at the racetrack. I may be fired if I miss the first day."

When she had had the ovarian cyst, other doctors had made Kelly feel other doctors had made Kelly feel threatened by suggesting a hysterectomy might be required. Silver assured her the surgery would be far less severe. He was right. Although he had removed an ovary. Kelly was obviously fertile. Besides, the sear across her lower hells was a fairt stroke that lower belly was a faint stroke that could hardly be seen. That she was having the abortion now would make having the abortion now would make things much casser, since up to the twelfth week critier one of two simple procedures could be employed to re-move the embryo. Dilation and cutre tage — D&C — was the traditional procedure and required that the open-stretched by tapered metal real, of graduated sizes known as dilators) until vide encuel to access a currengraduated sizes known as dilators) until wide enough to accept a curette, which is a rod-shaped instrument with a sharp-edged spoor on one end that the doctor would gently use to scrape clean the uterine walls. The newer, more commonly employed method is vacuum suction. The cervix is again dilated. Only this time a slender tube is inserted into the uterus, the tube connected to a vacuum pump that uses low suction to clean the uterus. Then a small curette would be used to clean up. Both procedures routinely take less than ten minutes and can be

The Del's fake-Tiffany opulence, and many of the room's occupants, came me to reveal my lack of political foresight and re-mark to the chief that gun centrol's time must have finally come around if so many conservatives are now baring it. "Then NRA National Rifle Association] is no good at what it does They've had people thinking for years that gun control is a liberal's fight, and it's just not," Kolender says.

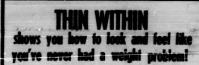

People now and then come up to say a few words to the chief, but this is one fundraiser that doesn't approach being a party. No guffany, no hugs and pecks on checks. The people don't seem to know each other well at all. Maybe gun control isn't the kind of issue that is closest to their hearts. If you're standing on the fence (who would pass a hundred dollars if they were?], go home and watch an anti-Prop. 15 commercial on television. That'll change your mind." He describes the TV spot that shows an elderly woman in her home, frighteend, calling police and getting no answer. Of course, of course? She needs a gun. The cartoon-like simplicity, the demeaning builshit of the ad, is evident when summarized, and Kolender is deft at highlighting the yahoo, grunt-infantry, macho presumption behind the commercial. "Now there is a stupid ad." It certainly is," he says with a grim grin,

"TM NOT CRAZY. THESE RIBS SPOKE TO ME"

T guess it's no secret that I spend most of my time at Baxters. There's ust so much happening here.
Tlearned to expect the outra-goous. But that didn't prepare me or this.

geous. But that didn't prepare me for this.

It started out as a pretty normal Monday night. I was trying to decide which of my favorite dinners to order from the incredible new menu. I'd just about decided on the great Tostada 'N Margarita combo with the giant Brownie dessert, when the guy next to me was served ribs.
"Well, I know it sounds crazy, even for Baxter's, but those ribs spoke

"EVERY NIGHT UNTIL DECEMBER 5 YOU CAN GET ALL THE RIES YOU CAN EAT,' THEY WHISPERED SEDUCTIVELY."

They told me that every night after 4:00 | could get all the barbsecued East ribs I could eat for just $5.95.
So I ordered them. They had a unique savory flavor so spicy and smoky that they seemed to be speaking to me in a language all their own.

"BRING YOUR FRIENDS,' THE RIBS SAID. WE'LL SHOW THEM A GREAT TIME!"

"And I'm going to do just that. I'm going to bring a bunch of my friends down here next Monday and have an outrageous barbecue party. With plenty of beer and amazing appetizers, like crisp-fried chicken Dip

SINGLE BARS ARE GREAT... IF YOU WANT TO STAY SINGLE...

What do you think single people feel when they go to a singles' bar? More importantly, how do you think they feel when they leave?

mink they leet when they leave?
We're talking about sensitive people. Selective people. People who are genuinely interested in spending their life with someone they love. Simply put, if's tough for relationship-oriented single people to find their compatible partner.

Why leave to chance something so very important? San Diego We're Great Expectations. We have more than seven years of experience specializing in helping people find the relationship that works for them.

Why not give yourself choice, rather than chance. Your simple phone call to Great Expectations can change your life.

Our screening system is successful and safe. Our client-members do all the selecting themselves. There is no matchmaker or psychological "rest".
