Nothing Up My Sleeve

The confessions of a professional shoplifter.

By Jeanette DeWyz
Straight from the Hip
Matthew Alice

Dear Mother Alice:

I was told recently that all the dirt we used to "stuff" the shoes in the most famous shoes comes from a secret location in the State of Mississippi. Is this true?

Joseph Currie
La Jolla

It's almost as true. First let me clear up a couple of misconceptions. The "dirt" you refer to is not really dirt, and you can't buy it in a specialty shoe store. It's a vegetable called "burlap" used in the shoe-making process. It's placed between the layers of the leather to help them adhere. The burlap is then removed before the shoes are assembled.

Best regards,
Matthew Alice

Mickey Mantle or Hank Aaron — these guys are in a class by themselves, and you could argue all day about who's the biggest. New York's "‘Big Bopper'" is the one to beat in the MVP race. His powerful bat and excellent glove make him a shoo-in for the award. But Mickey Mantle is a close second. He's hit a lot of home runs and his batting average is .325.

If you're not a baseball fan, you might want to consider Stanley C. Baldwin's "The Complete Book of Baseball" for a more in-depth analysis of the season. It's a great guide for anyone who wants to stay up-to-date on the latest news and developments in the sport.

"I'll just stand there like I'm in line, get the cartons, and throw the potato chips over 'em. When I put five cartons of cigarettes in the cart, you can't even see 'em."

Nelson's method is simple. He goes to the back of the store and slides a stack of cigarettes into his pocket. When the store staff returns to the area, they don't hear a thing. Nelson then walks back to the store and fills his cart with items. As he walks out of the store, he throws the cartons of cigarettes onto the floor, and the store staff never sees them.

"It's a great idea," said one store employee. "People don't notice anything until someone points it out."

Nelson said he has been doing this for years and has never been caught. He said he knows that some people might think it's wrong, but he doesn't care. "It's just a game," he said. "And I'm good at it."

(...and another generation where they reported the crime.) For those of us who are recovering, there is something about anything to get the kind of feeling that we are all becoming accustomed to in our society. It is the wrong kind of feeling, but it is the one that we all want to experience.

For the last few years the claims he has made about the change in his behavior have not been supported by any evidence. It is now clear that he did not change at all. His behavior is still as it was before. He continues to rob people and to steal. He has not changed in any way that is reflected in his behavior.

It is important to note that the change in his behavior is not due to any external factors. He has not been affected by any changes in his environment or family. He has not been treated by any therapists or doctors. He has not taken any medication.

It is also important to note that the change in his behavior is not due to any internal factors. He has not changed his personality, his values, or his beliefs. He has not developed new skills or abilities. He has not developed a new understanding of right and wrong.

The change in his behavior is due to the disease of shoplifting. It is a disease that affects all shoplifters, regardless of age, gender, or socio-economic status.

It is important to understand that the change in his behavior is not due to a lack of willpower or a lack of moral strength. He has as much willpower as anyone else, and he has as much moral strength. He has simply become addicted to shoplifting.

 Addiction is a disease, and it is not a choice. It is not a matter of willpower or moral strength. It is a disease that affects all shoplifters, regardless of age, gender, or socio-economic status.

Mad as a Matter

The marginal production of The Lily of Palermo, Berkeley's The Favourite of Scourbe, hails to audiences much more that they have longed for. Repeating a little bit, the acting does not seem the least bit forced, the expressions are natural, the movements are well-ordered, the characters are well-drawn, and the production is a success. The audience is seen to be clapping, the show is a success.

The set is remarkable, the costumes are well-designed, the lighting is appropriate, and the whole production is a success. The audience is seen to be clapping, the show is a success.

Robby White, Hydrodynamics Technician

There is a lot of colorful characters in my family. My father was a truck driver and my mother was a housewife. I was always fascinated by the stories my father told me about his adventures. He was a real charmer and always knew how to make people laugh. I always admired his ability to find humor in any situation. He was a role model for me and I always tried to be like him. My mother was a kind and gentle person who always put others before herself. She was a great cook and made the best pies in town. I always looked forward to her pies, especially the chocolate cherry. She passed away a few years ago, but her pies are still a part of our family traditions. My sister is a nurse and my brother is a lawyer. We all have our own unique talents and interests. I still miss my mother, but I know she is watching over me. She always said to follow my dreams and I always try to do just that. I hope everyone has a great day.
Unaffiliated! Newcomers! Looking for new friends? Agreeable, attracive, friendly environment!
