A worm is a wimp, someone who does not want to carry the ball. A wormboy watches his. He likes a movie and acts when it makes demands on him. He is passive. He cannot be depended on during tough times.

"I just wanted you to know that if you like him, you'll have to be the one to pursue it," she said. "He's very passive with women." I had to shake my head. Here was a fellow who had framed a feminist friend to do his work. Give that wormboy an award.

INCIDENT
A while back, I was riding in the desert in the seconds before the sandbag gate fell, and I saw a family of antelope cross the road. I stopped the car to watch them, and as I was getting out of the car, I noticed a large rattlesnake on the road. I immediately backed away, but as I did, my foot touched the tail of the snake, which raised up and struck at me. I instinctively reached for my camera, but the snake had already struck. I immediately got back into the car and called the local wildlife service. The snake was not harmed, and we were able to continue on our trip. This experience taught me the importance of being aware of one's surroundings and taking caution when in unfamiliar environments.

A Pair of Ones

JEFF SMITH

As part of the Adair Avenue Theatre, which is the Progressive-Shape Company, "A Pair of Ones" is a new play by Jeff Smith. The story follows the lives of two characters, Paul and Viola, who are trying to find their way in a world that doesn't always accept them. The play is set in New York City during the 1950s and 1960s, a time when civil rights and gender equality were just beginning to be discussed. The play explores themes of love, family, and identity, as well as the struggles of living in a society that is often hostile to non-conformity. The performances are performed by an all-black cast, including veteran actors and newcomers. The play has been praised for its powerful storytelling and honest portrayal of the struggles of life in a time of change. The Adair Avenue Theatre is located at 123 Main Street, New York City, and is open for performances every Saturday and Sunday at 7:30 pm. For more information, please visit www.adairavenue-theatre.com.
