What is the Sound of Two Bald Women Brushing Their Hair?

O ne of the early and rare signs of the Southern California transformation of Zen was that Tien and Yen were no longer bald. Tien was thrilled her hair grew to the two-finger length considered to be acceptable for Zen monks. "People stand when I used to show up bald in public. They must’ve thought I had a hemorrhoid or disease or, I was never sure, of the mental condition, she laughed. She cut her hair for the first time in 20 years when she was on leave from the music department at UCSD. All that time, after a week-long course at the Los Angeles Zen Center, a nurse had shaved her head—and then she was one of them. "A bald Zen music teacher would be too distracting, Yen explained. "My students would probably have concentrated on my head rather than on notes and sounds. So I grew my hair back."

It was just last August that Tien started sporting a bun on her head, after five years of baldness. The new hair was part of her decision to move from the Los Angeles Zen Center to the San Diego Zen Center, where she now teaches as spiritual leader. Today the sixty-seven-year-old Buddhist grandmother of three has transformed herself from a_choices for a woman. "I don’t even know how I look," Tien shrugs on her return to the center from a week at the Family Fitness Center. A paper published last June in The Zen Review, a Los Angeles Zen Center publication that is mailed to Zen communities throughout the states, said Tien was called an "embodiment..." by Zen practitioners.

A Tree, A Rock, A Cloud
On the peaceful grounds of the O'Connor Development, just north of the city's downtown area, a new park-like setting is being created. The site was previously a industrial area but now it is being transformed into a beautiful green space.

City Lights
City lights shine brightly in the night sky, illuminating the streets and buildings below. A few stars can be seen in the clear, dark sky.

It Comes With Tomatoes
Tomatoes grow in garden beds, their red fruit contrasting with the green leaves. The garden is full of various other vegetables as well.

A Man of Letters
A photographer takes a picture of a book with the title "The Man of Letters." The book cover is visible in the image.

Shake Prices Go Through The Roof
Gas prices have risen significantly, causing concerns about the affordability of driving. People are looking for ways to save money on gas.

The original text was written by several different authors, each focusing on a different aspect of the city or its surrounding areas. The topics range from environmental changes to historical events and cultural significance. The text is rich in detail and provides a comprehensive view of the city's current state and its past.
Letters

The Critic
And The Fox

The Fox Theater is "glorious" for silent films, writes The Critic. In his latest review, The Critic notes that the Fox's interior is "gorgeous," with its rich colors and intricate designs. He describes the audience as "enthralled," with many applauding the film. Overall, The Critic gives the Fox Theater high praise for its "artistic" and "aesthetic" qualities.

Trolley Lines
Run Through Park

A reader expresses concern about the impact of trolley lines running through a park. They write, "It's hard to imagine peaceful picnics amidst the noise and commotion of trolley lines." Another reader suggests that the park be used as a "green oasis" instead of a transit route.

Get the Message.

An anonymous reader reminds us to "hug" the people we love. They write, "Life is short, so embrace the people you care about while you can." Another reader agrees, "The simple act of hugging can instantly improve someone's mood."
Dear Matthew Alice,

I am in need of some important words to reply to a letter I received from a friend. He is going to the West Coast and wants me to give him some advice on what to see in San Diego. He has heard that San Diego is a great place to visit, but he is not sure what to expect. He is also interested in the history and culture of the area. Could you please provide some suggestions on what to see and do in San Diego, especially regarding its history and culture?

Best regards,

Sound Zen... the old one forty-one,

is a former missionary with a national reputation. He also practices

Zen. His name is forty-four and he lives in a small town in Japan. He has been a Zen Buddhist for more than thirty years. His wife, who was also in the group, had written

Zen stories for the kids of the faculty. And then he asked me if I'd like to come to his class. I said yes, and we went to his house. When we arrived, he gave me a little book about Zen and said, "This is the Zen that you're going to learn.

It's a little more challenging than

the Zen that I learned in Japan,

but I think you'll like it." So I went to his class, and I've been going ever since.

Zen is a very specific practice, with specific rules and rituals. It's a way of living your life in accordance with Zen principles. It's not a religion, but a way of life.

The Zen practice that I learned was called "Soto Zen." It's a very strict form of Zen that is based on meditation and austerity. The practitioner is expected to live a simple life, free from worldly desires.

Zen practitioners are expected to meditate for many hours each day,

and to follow a strict code of behaviour. They are expected to live in a simple, ascetic way, with minimal possessions.

I think that the Zen practice is a very powerful tool for personal growth and transformation. It can help you to cultivate a sense of peace and clarity, and to develop a deeper understanding of

yourself and the world around you.

I've found that it has helped me

to develop a greater sense of compassion and empathy, and to become more resilient in the face

of life's challenges.

I think that Zen is a practice that everyone can benefit from, no matter what their beliefs or background. It's a way of living that is accessible to everyone, and it can be practiced in a variety of ways.

I hope that this introduction has given you a sense of what Zen is,

and why it is such a powerful tool

for personal growth. If you are interested in learning more about

Zen, I would encourage you to take a class or seek out a teacher who can guide you through the practice. You might also consider reading some of the many books

and resources that are available on

Zen.

Zen is a wonderful practice, and I feel very fortunate to have discovered it. I hope that you will also find it to be a powerful tool

for your own personal growth and transformation.

... been experimenting with shops, followed by tours with police and hospitals. Charlie describes her life as an artist as a never-ending series of little experiments. And it's a job of good work, we had a roof over our heads, and we were going out with a friend," she recalls. "Nothing was really wrong, but there was something else, something was missing.

Then, one evening in 1961, she attended a lecture at the Unitarian Church on First Street in Berkeley, where she had been a member of the Unitarian Church for several years, who would later lead the Los Angeles Zen Center. As a result of the lecture, she became interested in Zen and decided to visit the Zen Center in San Diego. During her visit, she was introduced to a group of practitioners who were practicing Zen meditation. The atmosphere was peaceful and serene, and Charlie was immediately drawn to the practice.

After her visit, Charlie attended a course at the Zen Center in San Diego, which she found to be a valuable experience. She was able to engage in meaningful conversations with other practitioners and learned more about the principles of Zen meditation. Charlie found the practice to be beneficial for her mental and emotional well-being, and she continued to practice Zen meditation for many years.

The Zen Center in San Diego became a hub for Charlie's spiritual growth, and she became an active member of the community. She often spoke about the transformative power of Zen meditation and encouraged others to practice the practice. Her dedication to the practice of Zen meditation continued until her passing in 1987.

The Zen Center in San Diego continues to thrive today, with a strong community of practitioners who are committed to the practice of Zen meditation. Charlie's legacy lives on through her dedication to the practice and her contributions to the community. The Zen Center in San Diego serves as a reminder of the power of spiritual practice and the importance of maintaining a commitment to the practice of Zen meditation.

paradigm, and his mathematician wife, Jan, who had been married for the past 15 years, had moved to the Los Angeles Zen Center to become its first director, to develop the spiritual community, and to lead its programs. The Zen Center is located in the Black Mountain Road area of Los Angeles.

In September 1967, when the Zen Center was still a small group of people meeting in a garage, two San Diegans, a young couple, and two others, including a Zen student from Los Angeles, created the foundation of what was to become the San Diego Zen Center. They were two young women, Virginia and Alice, who came to California from New York to study at the Zen Center. They started a Zen center in San Diego and they have been there ever since.

By the summer of 1963, however, the group had expanded to include several more people, including a woman who had been a student of Zen for many years. This woman was named Mariko, and she was the first woman to be a Zen resident at the San Diego Zen Center.

The Zen Center had grown to include a small group of people who were interested in the practice of Zen, and the group had decided to form a community. They wanted to create a community that was based on the principles of Buddhism, and they wanted to create a community that was open to everyone.

MISSION HILLS RETROSPECTIVE

It's a fine exhibition of the old neighborhood in "Good-Bye Wisconsin," a Glendale newspaper, in which Westcott wrote not so much about style as about feeling, an important element in Westcott's work. He found the climate in Mission Hills to be the ideal for living and working, and he wrote about it with passion. The city had a sense of community, and the residents were friendly and welcoming. Westcott loved the area and was devoted to it. He lived there for many years and wrote extensively about it.

By George Bergmeister

Finally, we high enough to enjoy the hours we spent there. We had lived in the city for many years, and we were finally feeling at home. Westcott was always a good storyteller, and he was able to capture the essence of the city in his writing. His descriptions of the area were vivid and detailed, and he was able to convey the sense of community that existed there.

Marthe’s Bistro, the novel Italian food concept, began her career in science. Marthe Braggi, the Peruvian chef, devoted herself to the study of history. Glória Zinman, on the other hand, found her calling as a painter. Yet, they were all part of one family, the descendants of a publishing line of Rotten, Rot, and Rot New York.

In the event that the name Glória Zinman doesn’t ring a bell, it’s probably because she’s not very well known. Oft mentioned as a helmswoman of the new Brazilian cuisine, she’s somewhat of a rediscovery.

Marthe’s Bistro is not one of the bars on the boardwalk, nor is Glória Zinman the current owner of a Brazilian restaurant. In fact, she’s not even Brazilian. Marthe’s Bistro is a place where the food is served in Portuguese, and Glória Zinman is a Peruvian chef, renowned for her innovative approach to Brazilian cuisine.

The menu for the evening consisted of grilled fish with a light side of fries, with a sauce of pickled pepper and some grilled bread. The fish was fresh and the fries were crisp, but the sauce was a bit too tangy for my taste.

Glória Zinman did her best to instruct the chefs in her repertoire, and she had several members participate in the rolling of the board. The chefs must prepare the dishes in front of the audience, and the atmosphere was electric.

For those who would like to do some Vietnamese cooking, the following gives some basic steps to prepare a meal:

1. Prepare the ingredients and set them aside.
2. Grill the fish and fry the fries.
3. Mix the sauce and place it on the fish.
4. Serve it with a side of bread.

Like one of the southwestern's most distinctive landmarks, Rock Hudson and his band Big Country sashay across the stage occupying the space of the entire club, with Hudson playing the guitar under a string of fairy lights. His band, Big Country, is a gathering of musical talent from across the country, and the music is all about the rhythm and and the feeling of the moment. The crowd is electric, and the atmosphere is one of anticipation and excitement. The music is a mix of rock, blues, and country, and it's clear that the band is committed to delivering a high-energy performance. The crowd responds with enthusiasm, clapping and cheering as the band plays. It's a night to remember, and one that will be talked about for years to come.
