THE STAFF AND VOLUNTEERS OF PLANNED PARENTHOOD

---

The kids who go to Valley are not exactly like Ken and Barbie.

Three years ago, Robert, a slim young man with a teddy-bear hair style, looks back on his past as a youth as he might look at a landscape painted by a long, slow battle. He's been through a lot. He says there is no voice in his dark brown eyes that continues after it's dark and mysterious in normal vocabulary. "My parents have some money," Robert says, "so they would pay to send me to medical institutions to keep me in shape."

The Inside Story

The Most Time-Testing

The following is an essay about the time-testing nature of the 4.6 Ranch project. In 1968 Ralph Babcock and his associates began their work on the 4.6 Ranch project. The project was time-consuming and required a lot of effort and resources. One year later, the project was completed and the new development was opened to the public.

The new development was named "La Jolla Valley" and featured a variety of amenities, including restaurants, shops, and a community center. The project was well-received by the local community and became a hub for social and cultural activities.

However, the project faced several challenges over the years. The first challenge was the economic downturn in the early 1970s, which led to a decrease in property values and

"Some kids actually miss out on our main sports--football and basketball." says one student. "They're just not interested in those things. They just want to do their own thing." Another student adds, "I don't really think anyone cares about anything that goes on in the school. It's just a place to hang out and have fun."
"Some kids actually turn up on per-sonnel that you wouldn't think it. There's a dialogue that's going on that comes from some of the worst day-to-day things we do. But most of it is BS. The kids come here for the wrong reasons if they want to keep screwing up. We're here to get them out of that, not perpetuate it."

Both Rick and Nick show anger when reminded of Valley's poor reputa-tion. "It matters more to us than it did to others," says Nick. "At least at our school, even one person is on us as much as at South." "My grandmother doesn't know me going to Valley High," says disap-pointed Nick. "She's really conservative and old-fashioned, and she thinks Valley's not good enough for us. This makes me go to Yale. But that's not my style." He looks to Nick as if the con-versation is over. "I don't think I'm cut out for Yale."

One day, a happy�student shows up at 3 p.m., a senior-year-old Val-ley student — call him D.Staff, explains that when he grows up he wants to join the police force and be-come part of the vice squad."

"But you smoke dope," says another student."

"No. Am you sure you'll have to stop smoking dope to become part of the vice squad?" he is asked.

"No, not really. I won't when I'm on the job. You know, you do what you're going to do on the job, but when you're off work, that's your personal life."

"The other student interjects. "But you'll be on probation for the next 30 days, and if you smoke dope, you won't be able to do anything right."

That thought had apparently never occurred to D.Staff. "No, not really," he replies. "You see, I wouldn't be there for having less than an ounce in me. As long as I want to be of those friends who have less."

D.Staff says that he knows several people who smoke dope and that he doesn't want to be associated with them. "Though drugs are considered a problem by the students, they are not the main problem, it is with the teachers. The teachers should be the ones to resolve this problem."

D.Staff says, "The teachers can do something about it. They can't do anything about it. They experience high emotional conflicts. They sometimes look like pitiful victims."

Parents will sometimes see their kids crying for the first time, for an apparent reason. The parents will call the school and say, "They're back at the school."

Bennett estimates that about fifty percent of Valley students are involved in some kind of drug-related activities. Valley's campus, which covers only a small square yard, is little more than a handful of buildings, "a school administrative office, science building, and some sheds," according to Bennett. Bennett says that the only way to combat drug abuse is to get kids involved in campus activities. He has made arrangements for outside groups to be brought into the school and for the students to be involved. Valley students are served by the local police department, and the students are taught how to use the police department. Bennett says, "The police department is the only organization that the students respect."

Valley High is a community school, and the students are involved in all aspects of the school. They participate in extracurricular activities, such as sports, music, and drama. They also have the opportunity to receive specialized education, such as English, math, science, and social studies. They are encouraged to participate in community service projects, such as helping the homeless, and they are given the opportunity to learn about different cultures and languages.

The community is involved in the school, and the school is involved in the community. The school is able to provide the students with the resources they need to succeed in life. The school is able to provide the students with the education they need to prepare them for the future.

The story on a car had come where we were throwing the stuff through Plexigles windows, the kind that are supposed to be unbreakable.

Last September Robert enrolled at Orange Glen High School in Rancho-Cucamonga. As a high school student, he says, "I'm not the only one. I'm not the only one. I'm not the only one."

He learned to smoke in New Orleans. "I was a thief and an enabler," he says.

Robert, who says he wants to be a programmer in psychology, pref-red to live in a trailer with his mother.

The subject was Solitaire. His "Decisions" class is "elective experiences," and the class is conducted by Lucinda Longhi, who teaches at Valley.

Solitaire is a game that uses movements and strategy to win the spots. He learned smoking and drinking at Valley. He says that in most cases involves another student who "cuts and deals." He says that he had to keep this up in order to avoid getting home, because they probably haven't seen each other.

Robert has been working with kids
for years, wanting to get young people like Robert into college. "I'm doing something for high school kids," he says. "I'm doing something for high school kids.
I'm doing something for high school kids."
The Wonderful World of Pampered Pets

By Sue Garson

It's not unusual to see the section of Ocean Beach populated by the dogs of the pet owners. Dog Beach, as it is referred to, is a popular spot for dog owners to bring their furry companions.

In San Diego, there are no laws against allowing dogs on beaches, but some beach-goers have concerns about the dogs' impact on the environment. Many pet owners try to keep their dogs on leashes and clean up after them to minimize their impact on the beach.

The American Kennel Club recognizes over 150 dog breeds, and San Diego has a diverse population of dogs, ranging from small terriers to large breeds like labradors and golden retrievers.

Despite the popularity of pets in San Diego, there are concerns about the impact of pet ownership on the environment. Pet owners are encouraged to take responsibility for their pets, including cleaning up after them and ensuring their pets are well-behaved around others.

In conclusion, while pet ownership brings joy and companionship, it also comes with responsibilities. Pet owners in San Diego are encouraged to be good stewards of their pets and of the environment.
The Wonderful World of Pampered Pets

By Sue Garson

Although a tail count is impossible, it's conceivable that San Diego County has nearly a quarter of a million dogs. Considerable stability in the population and pet ownership have occurred in the years since dog ownership started its impressive increase on San Diego's dogs. Close to the kind of economic money can buy on offered in San Diego's fertile areas. But the Pet Store, for instance, has four San Diego County branches, accepts credit cards, and makes it possible to visit their store with such dogs as Pekinese, Chihuahua, and "Christian Dog." Though it hardly ever rains there, plush nooses are available. As are eye-patching jackets for bad dogs and padding for the girls. Groomer and dog lover John Wanner says that "Pampered Paws" a puppyperfectLY: West of $7.40 for two months, is a good offer. "When the economy is slow," says Wanner, "everyone suffers except house pets."

In San Diego there are veterinarian's who make the clock house calls. The Animal Eye Clinic in Mission Valley limits to one house animal and keep their patients on a diet as well as the many veterarian work on diet, nutrition, and disease prevention, who specialize in orthopedics. Some veterinarians are still general practitioners, but the move toward specialization in becoming apparent. There are animal cancer clinics and animal dermatology clinics and there's an American Veterinary Botanical Medical Association in Palm Hill. San Diego has dog training centers and an elementary school for dogs that grants diplomas after the dog has had an extensive 12-week session. The local dog takes part in the dog's licence number or the owner's social security number, either at a dog park or at the local park in San Diego for training a dog can cost $3000 — so pet mobile grooming has now become a reality. One company offers packages with a one-year price of twenty-two percent (after a small charge) for four hours of medical care, and $1500 for a month's care. The services include household training in the art of grooming, and for the dog's health, nutrition, and exercise. The cost is $75 per hour for one hour of training. The dog owner is responsible for the training of the dog, but the company's mobile groomers will come to your home.

Pampered Pets

San Diego is a pet paradise. High-style houses are approximately one and one-half miles between sixty dollars and seventy-five dollars. "A house with a yard, for instance, is quite elaborate and can take several hours of work if the yard is far away as it requires a lot of time," says Wanner of the service. "The time it takes to get a dog groomed, and it costs up to seventy-five dollars per hour." During the summer months, Wanner says, it's quite possible for a dog owner to spend a few hundred dollars a month on his pet's grooming if he goes to the right . Pet grooming is a business and no one who fails to use it will suffer loss.

Dog groomers are licensed and insured, and boarded on house pets just as house styles do on humans. One local groomer even gave pets

DON PASQUALE

The San Francisco Opera’s 1985-86 Season opens with Don Pasquale, one of the best comic operas of all time. The story, set in a small Italian town, concerns the marriage plans of Don Pasquale, a middle-aged widower who is determined to choose his own son-in-law. When his young niece, Norina, announces her engagement to the wealthy Dr. Malatesta, Don Pasquale is furious.

The opera opens with a lively scene in which Don Pasquale, his niece Norina, and her fiancé Dr. Malatesta argue about the wedding plans. Don Pasquale insists on their immediate marriage, while Dr. Malatesta is determined to delay it. Norina stands in the middle, trying to mediate the dispute.

The opera is known for its humorous moments and the clever dialogue between the characters. The music is lively and joyful, and the opera ends with a grand finale that celebrates the triumph of love over stiff-upper-lip tradition.

Don't miss it. For the moment, at least, this may be the last chance to see it. And then we'll never see it again. If you're not Larry Bird, you can't keep your sly white sneakers off of center court at Muni.

BY JOHN D'ACOSTINO

It's one of those deals that has always been a part of the game, but the sight of a white pair of sneakers is still a rare sight. And when you see them, you can almost hear the whistle blowing and the crowd going wild.

The story of the white sneakers started a few years ago when Larry Bird, the NBA's star player, was photographed wearing a pair of white sneakers during a game. The photo went viral and soon after, the demand for white sneakers exploded. People from all over the world wanted to own a pair like Bird's.

But not everyone can afford to buy a pair of Bird's shoes. So, what's a fan to do? Try to wear white sneakers to a game and see how many people notice. The results are usually impressive.

So, if you're planning on wearing white sneakers to a game, here are a few tips to help you:

1. Make sure they're clean: Nothing looks worse than a pair of dirty white sneakers. Take the time to clean them before you wear them.

2. Match them with the right outfit: White sneakers can be paired with just about anything, but it's important to match them with the right outfit. If you're wearing a suit, try a pair of white leather sneakers. If you're wearing a t-shirt and jeans, a pair of canvas white sneakers will do.

3. Stay comfortable: Wearing white sneakers can be uncomfortable, especially if you're running around a lot. Make sure you choose a pair that is comfortable and will support your feet.

4. Stay visible: Wearing white sneakers can be a great way to stand out in a crowd. But it's important to make sure you're visible. Wear bright colors or accessories to make sure you can be seen.

5. Don't be afraid to show off: If you're wearing white sneakers, be proud of it. Wear them with confidence and let people know you're a fan.

Remember, wearing white sneakers to a game is all about having fun and showing your support for your favorite team. So, go out there and let your sneakers do the talking!

Beauty In
The Beast

Once upon a time there lived a people with no pride. They had no fear of the dark. They were satisfied with their lives as they were, and they did not want to change. But one day, a 王子 appeared. He was from a far-off land, and he was determined to improve the life of these people. He brought with him knowledge and wisdom, and he taught
them how to live better.

A Minor Revolution

There is a revolution in the world. It started in France, and it spread to other countries. People around the world
began to demand freedom and equality. The Revolution was a time
of change, and it
changed the way
people lived their lives.

The Price Of Plunder

As a child, I knew that there was something special about the antiques. They were
from a different time,
and they were full of history. I always wanted to learn more about them, and I started collecting small items that I found during my holidays. It was a passion that I developed, and I continue to enjoy it
to this day.

John Mayer

A conductor recently wandered into a studio and it could be heard through the walls. "Junk," he thought. Such was his mind and passion for all things musical. His body was covered in scars, and every so often, the pain returned. When he was at his most vulnerable, he turned to the music to find solace. His love of music was so profound that he dedicated his life to educating others about its beauty. He believed that music was the healing balm that could mend broken hearts and spirits. His passion for music was so strong that he chose to spend his final moments surrounded by it, as a testament to his life's journey. He left this world, but his legacy lived on through the music he created and the memories it left behind. As he closed his eyes, he heard the symphony play on, a final tribute to the power and beauty of music.

IT'S CALLED PLANNED PARENTHOOD

Our County has a program that reduces teenage pregnancies, reduces the need for abortion, and saves the taxpayer money.

June 7, 1973

Everyone once in a while, a situation arises that transcends the usual constraints of what a Planned Parenthood program can do in the face of the difficulties it faces in meeting even the most modest expectations.

With the help of some very unusual people in San Diego, we have been able to come up with a new approach that we believe will result in a significant reduction of the number of young people who come to us in the future for abortions.

The program is called "Join Planned Parenthood!" and it's simple, really. We just need people like you to support it so that we can continue doing the important work that we have been doing for so long.
