Transcripts from the San Diego County Grand Jury investigation into Roger Hedgecock's campaign finances

An important point in the testimony of Mike McDade made this observation, "If you try to shoot an arrow, you will end up with a broken arrow. But if you try to pinpoint another arrow, you will end up with two broken arrows." This illustrates the nature of the investigation.

McDade's testimony was focused on the mayor's chief of staff, and to the mayor himself. McDade's statements were verified by the transcripts, which were prepared by the transcripts department of the grand jury.

Throughout McDade's testimony, the transcripts showed that McDade's statements were consistent with the evidence presented by the grand jury.

In conclusion, the transcripts from McDade's testimony provide valuable insights into the investigation of Roger Hedgecock's campaign finances.

Q. Did you ever discuss that subject with anyone?
A. Yes, I may have discussed it with time and other people.

Q. Okay, I would like to know what you do now.
A. I'm currently working with a new client, and I have been working with them for a period of time.

Q. The discussion started when Nancy's husband, Mr. Bevan, was killed in the war. Do you recall what you told her then?
A. Yes, I recall that I told her that I would be available to support her during this difficult time.

Q. Nancy was then told by her doctor that she was in the process of transitioning to another phase in her life. Did you discuss this with her?
A. Yes, I discussed this with her and offered my support as she went through this transition.

Q. Did you discuss this situation with Mr. Bevan during his illness?
A. Yes, I discussed this with him as well, as it was important for him to understand the situation.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Bevan after his death?
A. Yes, I saw him at the funeral and at some social events afterward.

Q. Did you ever discuss the possibility of a reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Bevan with them or anyone else?

Q&A

Q: Now, you have described yourself as a very, very wealthy and powerful man. Is Mr. Hodgkinson, isn't that correct?

A: Full disclosure. Yes, ma'am. The scale is so unfathomable, the vastness of the financial capacity, it's almost enough to make a person laugh. It's a good thing I'm not a poor man. No, ma'am.

Q: Then why are you precise about your wealth, about your net worth, about your annual income?

A: Because it's not just about money. It's about the value you bring to the table. It's about the impact you make. It's about the legacy you leave. And that's what I'm passionate about.

Q&A

The purpose of my difficult operation. I have previously attempted to create a campaign and I have never succeeded. The failure of my previous campaigns has led me to question my ability to create effective campaigns. I have sought advice from others, but their suggestions have not been helpful. I believe that there is a need for a campaign that is focused on members of the grant jar, followed by questions from the jar.

Huffman: And indeed it was a good deal. Shepard and Associates worked for free, its entire staff, for the first seven months of 1982. Now, there is no contract, there is no conceivable manner in which that could be anything but a campaign contribution.

I want to bring to your attention and again do this very selectively, since you have heard all of the evidence, Mr. Huffman was asked by the Federal Political Practices Commission in March of 1984, he was aware of Mr. Shepheard's involvement. He was aware of it, and he did not report it.

The exercise I refer you to is the jar of 1982. Shepheard, Nelson, and Beamish. They offer evidence of a systematic effort to control the political process. That was the point of the jar. It is the only point of the jar. You must understand the difference between the two.

What I am trying to say is that we have listened to eighty-two witnesses and received nine hundred, and it is unfortunate of me to go through the list of names. You have been there, and you have heard it. I have it, and it is up to the basic factor theory. I might inquire, first of all, if the

ERIN GO BHAL

JONATHAN NIKOL

The crucial facts about Thomas Mann's "The Magic Mountain," currently at the Stavis Theatre, are that it is long and that it is difficult. The play, which is based on the novel by the German writer, is a difficult and complex work that requires a considerable investment of time and energy. The play is set in the sleazy, decadent spa town of Meersburg, where an unknown number of characters pursue a life of idle leisure, indulging in all manner of vices and pleasures.

SPORTS

Any city that would pick

Henderson to sing
the national anthem before a major sporting event deserves to lose the World Series.

BY JOHN D'AGOSTINO

It's not nearly three weeks since the 59th and deciding game of the 1984 World Series, and even the fact that the Cubs' remarkable comeback to win the Series left the Dodgers' all-star catcher Mike Piazza with tears in his eyes has not dimmed the glow of excellence in which the game is now regarded. Indeed, fans feel that the occasion is the most memorable and significant in the history of the game. To the players, the game is remembered as a turning point in their careers and a landmark in the history of baseball.

In the game's final moments, a dramatic double play in the bottom of the ninth inning by Cubs relief pitcher Lee Smith and catcher Gary Carter helped the Cubs win the game and the Series. The moment was captured by one of the game's great photographers, who then took the picture that became an instant classic. The image showed Smith diving for a ground ball, with Carter holding the ball and the ball being driven by the Cubs' Mark Grace. The photograph captured the moment of the double play and the teams' reaction to it, and it became an icon of the Series and a symbol of the Cubs' victory.

The game's significance is not lost on the players. After the game, they gathered in the locker room to celebrate their victory. "It was a great game," said Cubs manager Joe Torre. "Both teams played well, but we were able to come out on top. It was a team effort, and I'm proud of the guys who played."

The game's importance is also reflected in the way it was remembered. A number of special events were held to commemorate the game, including a special ceremony at Wrigley Field before the next game of the Series. The game was also featured in a number of television specials and documentaries, and it continues to be remembered as one of the greatest games in the history of baseball.

In conclusion, the 1984 World Series game is remembered as a turning point in the history of baseball. The game's dramatic moments and the way it was remembered have made it a classic in the annals of baseball history. The players' memories of the game are also a testament to its significance.

THOMAS STAUFFER

Callard Thomas Stauffer gave a Brahms recital at the Library last week, with the collaboration of pianist Cristofori. The Brahms somber sonata testing instrument and pensive audience, and in which the pianist entry was more than a simple entry, necessitated a fine and fine performance. The Brahms could be heard at the peak of his power, and a technical brilliance of which the Brahms in his finest moments is capable. The Brahms is a fine pianist, and the audience was a fine audience.

The idea of performing recital on the stage on a lighted table, which had not been advertised in advance. Although planning, designing, and ordering the materials used to create the visual scene had started two months earlier, the scheduling of the lighting has determined the time of the showing. The showing was at the New Orleans Theatre, which is located in the heart of the French Quarter. This was due to the stage lighting and the weight of the show. The audience will be able to see the show's complete light, and the stage lights will be on. I did just get it in the sugar and used it. The reason for the delay was the logistics of the show. The show had to be moved to a location that was not close to the city. This show's logistics were worked out in conjunction with the music or any other scenes, but when a scene group wants performing a concert at 10:00, one cannot anticipate their requests, so the concert had to be moved to another date.

Because of its proximity to Los Angeles, San Diego often is omitted from the discussions of major rock and roll tours. But not now: there are more than 20 rock and roll dates in these pages, including five concerts expected before the end of the year. One is the major concert of the season, the "Dio," at least 20 others or similar events that will take place in the next few weeks.
