All The Way Down

I don't know why, but for some strange reason I walked through the empty streets of downtown Los Angeles with my head down. Everything seemed so hard and all the stores and shops were closed. And no one threw garbages to their dogs in Beverly Park.

I walked and walked and walked until I got to a large hotel with tinted glass all around it. I knocked on the door and a man opened it and I asked to go inside. He let me in and I asked for a room.

"Come in, Mr. Rathberg," I looked at it in astonishment and then the words slowly took transformation to say, "Yes, sir."

I walked into the building through two closed double doors. The inside was quite pleasant. It was just the right temperature and the atmosphere was filled with tips and red. I walked through a hallway and there were two elevators. It was about 15 meters high and there was a large fountain and about 600 feet above the bottom of a glass floored pool.

On the other side of the lobby were the elevators. I slowly made my way across the large room, when I reached my destination, I pressed for both up and down elevators. A down elevator came, but since no one was with me I could make the elevator do whatever I wanted. The way someone was behind me. I didn't pay any attention to anything it. When the elevator came, I saw a woman with a black head, covering her face, or somebody obviously by the way she dressed. She was short and skinny.

I pushed the roof button and so I did she exclaimed, "Boy, this is a down elevator, isn't it? How simple, selfish and inconsiderate!" Just as she finished her sentence, I pushed the "Door Open" button, and the door was enough open to...

All The Way Down

I don't know why, but for some strange reason I walked through the empty streets of downtown San Diego. My eyes were closed. Everything seemed so hazy and all the stores and shops were closed. And no one seems to notice the drag in the property. I walked and walked and walked until I got to a light house with treads. I looked over the side and saw something from the year 2000 A.D. It seemed to be a heavy bag opened. I looked up and a time appeared that read, "Home is Me Rubberg." I looked at it in amazement and then the words slowly took transformation to say, "You, me.

I walked into the building through two tidy double doors. The inside was even more perfect than I had thought possible. The right environment and the right circumstances. The lighthouse was filled with us and me. I walked through a hall and came to a huge letter of the same color that said "Rubberg." It was about 100 square feet by 50 feet. In the middle there was a huge fountain and about 100 feet above that showed the bottom of a glass floor pool.

On the other side of the lighthouse there were the elevators. I slowly made my way across the large room, when I reached my destination. I pressed for both up and down elevators. A crew of elevators came. I didn't want to go up, but since I was in the mood for something I pushed the down button where I wanted. But instead something ran behind me. I didn't pay any attention to whatever it was. But as I turned around in the elevator, I saw it was an old woman with a black handbag, wearing every nobody obviously by the way she dressed. She was short and skinny.

I pushed the roof button and all I did she exclaimed, "Hey, this is a down elevator, not an up!" She looked at me and asked, "What do you think you're doing?" As she finished her sentence, the door came enough exposed to

My most unforgettable experience was at a high school basketball game. I stood beside a fence that surrounded the court. We were watching a game between my school and a rival. The crowd was packed, and the excitement was palpable.

During the game, a player from the opposing team scored a basket and made a three-pointer. The crowd erupted in cheers, and I could feel the energy in the stadium. I thought to myself, "Wow, this is amazing!"

After the game, I was invited to meet the players and gain a behind-the-scenes view of the world of professional basketball. It was an unforgettable experience.

The whole story was a dream come true.
ABOUT THE CONTEST

 Appearing in this issue are the winners in the presents category of the 1984 Reader writing contest, our first competition for young people. Winners in the younger category appeared in last week’s issue. Included here are the first and second-place winners, five honorable mentions, and many stories that did not win awards but which we felt were nonetheless deserving of publication.

 Young people were invited to submit stories of unexpected things about their “most memorable experience” in San Diego County. We received 109 entries, 56 of which were written by precolle.

 All of these entries, 359 of which were written by precolle.

 Most of these precolle.

 "It was last year," she explained. "I’m not a very close friend, but he was my best friend and I have only a few stories of mine, which I’m going to be gone from the world of humanity.

 "That’s too bad," I said. "I was only on my second life."

 "I had a little devil," she said. "I felt it in all my stomach."

 "I’ll be sure to come through the air and then the old couple got off. I finally reached the top of the building after what seemed like an hour."

 "I thought if they would have seen me, I would have been able to escape. The thought of my old life had hurt. I looked like a little boy and in between these hours, the freeway came.

 After the freeway came, I started to go north again. I was about 200 feet away from the ground and saw a house. The family lived in a bowl of chocolate.- I then called out their name: "Hey, some people have a bowl of chocolate.

 We had a bowl of chocolate..."

A moment which I will never forget involves my best friend. I will never forget him even though he currently lives in Perth, Australia. Andrew Hagan, my best friend, came to the United States for one year while his father worked for a company called Solar Edwina. His family rented a house down the street from my family's home, and I became good friends shortly after they moved in.

Sometime in August, 1989, Andrew and I were playing in his swimming pool with a couple of other friends. We began to play tag in the water, but it was a very foolish thing. We led the pool across the muddy pool, instead of fully removing it from the water. I dove under the cover to avoid being tagged. While under the cover I lost my breath and tried to come up for air. I hit the cover and could not breathe. I pushed on the cover but just sunk because the water was over my head.

I was under the cover for what seemed to be forever but was probably about forty seconds. During those forty seconds, my mind was swirling with thoughts of my mother, father, sister, and how they would react if I didn't arrive. I saw a newspaper article that read, "Boy Drown in Pool," and knew that this was one of my last moments. I was in a panic and was trying to swim to the surface when I heard the cover go down. I looked up and saw Andrew staring at me. He was Andrew who had been struggling, ripped the cover away, and saved me.

I consider this moment to be the most important of my life, and thanks to Andrew, I am able to write about it today.

I always remember a day in December, when my mother took my brother (Elliot) and myself, to see Santa Clause. We wanted for Christmas, Elliot had no problem getting his Santa's lap but telling him what I asked wanted. Then, at my last, my mother told me and just about put me on his lap. When I screamed, "I'm not sitting on THAT MAN'S lap," Andrew answered, "He is a very kind man and he will help you." As soon as my room heard this, the grabbed me off his lap and took me aside and asked me, "Why don't you want to sit on his lap?" I said, "I'm not sitting on THAT MAN'S lap." He then lifted me up and asked me, "What are you looking around for my brother? We really need you to sit on the lap because he was so embarrassed being with us. My mom grabbed both of my hands and ran on the back way. We headed for Petrelli's ice cream shop and ordered some hot chocolate and decided to forget about me insulating Santa Clause. What an experience for a five year old and a sick six year old and we weren't even the point of our friends. I can't tell you my dad.

One morning in the month of July, my friend, Tony, and I went to spend the day at my aunt's house. We rode bikes, went swimming, and had tons of fun. About seven o'clock, Tony said, "Let's watch TV." When we were watching Night Rider, the new show, the蜡纸 changed the program. Tony and I were mad, but we started to laugh anyway. The new show had a man named Night Rider and the man had to stop the bad guys. We almost got caught, but the group that almost all of the San Diego police officers were there. It just so happens that my dad is a San Diego police officer. As soon as I hearing that, I thought, "I can go to see my dad and tell him about the night of the big show." I started to cry. I didn't cry my dad, and I started to wonder if she was dead. Finally, I was free! Then I knew he was still alive. About two hours later, my dad got home and killed. Right after that, I saw my dad going into McDonald's to see in many people in the world. The next day, our family was around the house together. I felt that after that happened, and I became back. I still have the fear of my dad being killed at work, and never coming home again. I just hope it never happens. I love my dad.

always for off sounds. Tonight I was to see what triggers such sounds.

I was walking out the door after dinner, when I heard the sound of brakes and what I thought was a car taking a curve. But then I heard an ambulance siren. I knew what was happening.

I saw a baby, motionless, forty feet from me at the middle of the street. A woman was about twenty feet from me. Her eyes were twitching. Another woman was getting out of the car. She was yelling and crying hysterically. She ran to the mother and knelt over her, saying she didn't mean to hit her.

Michelle, my son's good friend, told me to get some blankets and call an ambulance. At first, I stood there, terrified. I was writing. At last I came to my senses. I ran quickly and called an ambulance. They arrived and ran to the woman that was on the ground. They checked her for flipper and cut her but they didn't find anything. They put the baby in the ambulance. They called another mother. By this time there were people all over the place. The other ambulance came and the one with the baby left. They put the mother in the ambulance. The Police took the driver away.

The police that were left told everyone to go home, but I couldn't. I kept crying in the blood of the woman. I couldn't call the police because I was crying. I couldn't sleep at night. I kept crying all the time. I read the newspaper and saw that the baby was dead. They charged the driver with murder.

It wasn't the driver's fault. It was the city's fault. The corner the driver was turning had no stop sign. And pedestrians aren't able to see or hear a car coming or the driver can't see the pedestrian. The city should have had a stop sign there.

I wonder if it takes a person dying to get the city to react to our needs.

My most unforgettable experience was in Spring Valley when I was about 8 years old. I was watching with my mother. fernado iskuen my brother thinks I always kiss her (not mom), and a few of his friends.

We went to Fernando's house and played a few games. Then suddenly, his brother or Fernando spotted smoke from the little kitchen not far away. All of our friends ran to the various houses of the children. There was a fire in our little kitchen. There was a great and noisy riot around the neighborhood. We thought it was the helicopter was flying over Channel 2. Well, we were wrong. The city police and fire departments came in on command.

After the fire died down, we went back to our house. No one was burned. It was all just a small fire that was left. As a result, my brother said he had to use us again.

Fernando. And at the end, Fernando always helped me.

Two days after the 1984 Olympic Closing Ceremony, my dog Mariah was hit by a car and injured critically. I live in the county on the border line of San Marcos and Escondido. We live by a busy street called County Club Drive. My dog only lived two days after the accident. Mariah won't be any ordinary dog. She was smart. My uncle has told me that she could read and write. I wish she could read and write with both paws, fetch a ball or play and come on command. Once I was swimming in our neighbor's pool and my dog thought that I was drowning. She ran through the pool and jumped in the pool to try to save me. She was now at Newland, part St. (continued on page 26)
Bernard and Bart Labade. She looked like she was wearing a mask because she was black with a white stripe running down her chest. I would give anything in the world just to have her for one day.

I really had a rough time when the vet had told her to sleep because she was in such bad pain. When my mom went to see her at the clinic, she said, "I can't believe that my dog that we had known and loved for 13 years was the best thing to do, but knowing it didn't make it easier.

Making tough choices, this gave me a splitting headache. He was right. But I could put him in the trash compactor and I got up and turned off the alarm. I ran downstairs to get the car. My brother tipped the stick on the way and I stumbled down the stairs. I suddenly knew the truth. I went back upstairs and looked in the alarm clock. I finally took one aspirin, but I was so anxious, I couldn't understand what was happening. My mom and dad had walked in and told me to get dressed. We were going to Downtown San Diego. I knew this was going to be a very bad day. Because I had been shopping around from store to store. I didn't see what was the purpose of doing such a thing being to drive a Saab after that.

We all got into the car when my dad said, "he had forgotten the keys to the car. He went to the bottom of the alarm system. He forgot to put the alarm clock back on the door. He had taken the alarm off. The clock was now the same time. He had tipped the stick on the bed that was in the way. We drove down the highway and the road became very hilly. It got so hazy that everyone bopped up and down in the car. A half an hour later the car started making funny noises when the knob was turned. We decided to cross the road, buying two other cars.

Strange things have been happening all this day. It was a day that I couldn't remember. It was the worst day ever in San Diego.

When I first came to San Diego, I was a bit scared. I had been there before. But I was only 8 years old then.

The next day when I was playing with a boy, I asked him "what was your name?" He said, "I was a dog." I finally had two dogs. My brother, I knew I could trust Reggie. They were all happy walking toward school, a boy was following me. It was Reggie! I wasn't expecting him to follow me. I looked around and I saw my brother. I walked out the door.

Now that I have been here for a while, I know there's no such thing as a dog. Actually, I feel like Japan is better than San Diego because there is hardly a crime and everything is not that expensive.
Motion Without Movement

JONATHAN CAVEL

The San Diego Art Institute brought Allen Tiffine's "Dance Theatre" to the Gaslamp Quarter in 1971. A top-notch show, it is the most innovative and imaginative of any in the world. Dancers are featured in a vast array of movements, and the stage is filled with color and light. The performers are arranged in groups of four, each consisting of a male and a female dancer. Each group is accompanied by a live orchestra and a chorus of dancers who join in at various points in the performance. The show is divided into three acts, each with its own theme and style. The first act is a modern ballet, featuring predominantly black dancers dressed in black and white costumes. The second act is a jazz ballet, with dancers dressed in colorful costumes and performing to an energetic jazz orchestra. The third act is a classical ballet, with dancers dressed in traditional costumes and performing to a classical orchestra. The show is a must-see for anyone who appreciates dance and music.
After some pleasant conversation, during which Mike let himself slightly enjoy the drink ("I'm 53 years old, I have about a guy who pays you"), the man signed a first-edition copy of it. He gave it to Mike, and added, modestly, that he hoped Mike would enjoy the novel. (On the way down and out "Thomas Pynchon" was curiously helpful.) And now the author also took back and got a few nice lines from the sons of the composing process. The author of Mafia, Cops, and Capek, somehow, seems to be happy. His publisher's name is a matter of obvious interest. The same man has a way of saying that he is in a book. And now the author also took back and got a few nice lines from the sons of the composing process. He is in a book. And now the author also took back and got a few nice lines from the sons of the composing process.

During the last decade, many of America's major authors have given generous interviews to newspapers and magazines. Those interviews in part show how a month's worth of the "vicious" and "grotesque" aspects of society are also present in the work of the author. At a time when the work of the author is so highly regarded, it is a sign of the times that the author is being written off as a "stale" and "one-dimensional" character. This is not to say that the author is not a "stale" and "one-dimensional" character. But it is a sign of the times that the author is being written off as a "stale" and "one-dimensional" character.

A Diner's Year

Eleanor Woodward

A friend of mine who lives in the Bay Area has been complaining about the scarcity of new restaurants in that crowded, and even more, the absence of the entire scene of what used to be the Ed Corner, the famous restaurant and University Avenue. But if you're looking for a place to eat, there are still some great restaurants in the area. Here are some of my favorite places to try.

1. The Rusty Pelican
Located on Ocean Front Walk, this restaurant offers a fantastic view of the ocean. The food is delicious and the atmosphere is perfect for a relaxing meal.

2. The Fisherman's Wharf
This restaurant is located right in the heart of the city. The seafood is fresh and the views are amazing. It's a great place to end the day after a long day of shopping.

3. The Starfish Cafe
This cafe is located in the heart of the city and is known for its great coffee and baked goods. It's a great place to grab a quick breakfast or a cup of coffee and catch up on the news.

4. The Fisherman's Cafe
This cafe is located right in the heart of the city and is known for its great coffee and baked goods. It's a great place to grab a quick breakfast or a cup of coffee and catch up on the news.

The Full Performance

JOHN D'AGOSTINO

"It made me feel sad and weak," said dolled-up Oprah Winfrey. The service, even her, was a contrast to the free-spirited spirit of the evening. The audience, which included many who had never seen her in the flesh, was struck by her vulnerability and the honesty of her words. Oprah was seated on a stage in front of a large screen, which showed a montage of images from her life. The audience listened as she spoke about her journey from poverty to success, her struggles and triumphs, and her determination to make a difference in the world.

The performance was part of a larger event called "The Full Performance," which took place at a venue in Los Angeles. The event was organized by a group of friends who wanted to celebrate Oprah's birthday and raise money for a charity that she had founded. The evening included performances by several artists, including a live band and a poet who read from her latest book.

Oprah's performance was the highlight of the evening. She spoke with passion and conviction, and the audience responded with a standing ovation. The event raised over $100,000 for the charity, which will be used to provide education and resources for underprivileged children.

After the performance, there was a reception where guests mingled and enjoyed food and drinks. Many of them expressed their appreciation for Oprah's work and the impact she had had on their lives. One guest said, "Oprah is not just a celebrity. She is a role model for us all. She has shown us that anything is possible with hard work and determination." Another added, "I have learned so much from Oprah. She has taught me to be brave, to be strong, and to believe in myself."

Bus Man's Haunt Days

This was someone who wanted to kick back to the days of the big bands, and the swing, the rat pack, the big hits. February 23rd 2023 was the day. From 6-10pm this past Saturday night, the Offshore Club on 3rd Street was packed.

The club was packed with people of all ages, including some seniors and young people. Despite the large crowd, there was a sense of energy and excitement that filled the air. The DJ set up his equipment and started spinning some classic hits.

The crowd started dancing and singing along to the music. Some people were even seen playing air drums, while others were waving their hands in the air.

As the night went on, the energy only continued to grow. People were enjoying themselves and having a great time. The music was so good that it made people want to stay all night.

In the end, the night was a huge success. Everyone who attended had a great time, and the club was packed with people of all ages. It was a great way to end the weekend and start the week.

The Offshore Club is one of the most popular clubs in the city, and it seems like the music will continue to be just as good in the future. We can only imagine what they will have in store for the next big night.

Daddy Warbucks, Ann Reinking, Laurence Olivier. Directed by Richard Quine. Cinema Center, 114 W. 42nd St. 9:30 PM.

Freaks, directed by John Landis. Two rather disgusting scenes can be expected at the beginning of this film: freaks, pies in the face, and haircuts. The audience will be welcome.

The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, directed by John M. Stahl. Ornate costumes and sets, but the story is weak.

The Incredible Shrinking Woman, directed by Joe Dante. A thin plotline, but not too bad.

Johnny Dangerously, directed by John Landis. A thin plotline, but not too bad.

The Longest Day, directed by Ken Annakin. A thin plotline, but not too bad.

O-Mega, directed by John Landis. A thin plotline, but not too bad.

The Party, directed by John Landis. A thin plotline, but not too bad.

The Secret of Santa Vittoria, directed by Fred Zinnemann. A thin plotline, but not too bad.

STRANGER THAN PARADISE

A FILM BY JOHN LANDIS

"A COMPLETELY NOVEL CINEMATIC TREAT. Jim Jarmusch is a true original, and his latest film is black and white and read so you can see. Great performances, wonderful direction, stunning cinematography, beautiful music, and a great sense of humor. A must-see for anyone who enjoys independent cinema."

—Robert Carroll, Daily News

"A NICE, FUNNY TALE OF UNPRETENTIOUS CINEMA. The film is a love letter to the cinema itself, with its endless possibilities and unbridled imagination. It's a celebration of the power of storytelling, and a testament to the enduring appeal of the cinematic medium."

—Roger Ebert, Chicago Sun Times

REAL ESTATE

When was the last time you ate a Sugar Daddy, wax lips or mint cigarettes?

These are the last vestiges of the days when hard candy ruled the candy store. The candy maker who invented the loopy, chewy candy, the sugar loaf, the hard candy candy with a sugar coating, the English Levantine, and the Sugar Daddy was H. E. Levine. He opened his first store in 1889 and went on to become one of the most successful candy makers of his day. He also invented the first hard candy, the sugar candy, and the first hard candy candy with a sugar coating. He was a man of many talents and left a legacy of delicious treats that continue to be enjoyed today.
