The PROSPERITY GURUS

From love your brother to love yourself to love your bank account, San Diego's new-age community takes a turn for the purse.

It's amazing how quickly new-age fads come and go. The fuzzy thinking age burned itself out in less than a year. Flotation tanks, those sensory-deprivation sacks to meditation, can be found lying belly up at garage sales everywhere. Colonel Sturgis, the famous mushroom grower, offered a kind of 'positive thinking' course. He has since retired to his farm. The higher consciousness movement, which offered a kind of 'mind expansion' course, is said to have suffered from the Aids scare. Nearly all those who went on their trip have taken it or are adjustment and are now confidently earning Splendid Numbers of Light. More recently, those unfortunate souls with unbalanced brains have gone through agit-ation therapy, so that their con-sciousness is now running smoothly on both cylinders, like a well-tuned Kawasaki. New-age fads come and go all over the nation, but San Diego, which has somehow become the land of the new-age movement, sees a steady stream of visitors.

"San Diego is the cradle of civilization for the new-age age," declares Reverend Judith Lattin, Ph.D., seated in the living room of what she calls her dream home—a two-story house in La Costa, just up the hill from the golf

WHERE THE COPS ARE

The information that follows comes from the San Diego police officers who agreed to speak only on the condition that their names will not be published. The means for the officers' anonymity is their own. Anonymity was given in order to make it easier for the police to speak out about the problems they face.

Traffic violations are a regular occurrence on the streets of San Diego. For the police officers, it is a daily routine.

Traffic violations are a regular occurrence on the streets of San Diego. For the police officers, it is a daily routine.

The police officers said that they encounter a variety of traffic violations on a daily basis. These violations range from minor infractions like speeding and running red lights to more serious offenses like driving under the influence.

The officers also said that they are often faced with the challenge of balancing their enforcement efforts with the need to maintain a good relationship with the public. They said that they try to be fair and consistent in their enforcement, but that it can be difficult to do so in a city where traffic violations are so common.

GURUS

It's an unconscious thing.

Some people, especially men, think they can't be more successful than their fathers.

But Lane claims his course doesn't encourage people to become irresponsible consumers. "I don't mean people to become irresponsible," he says. "I ask them what they want, and I help them to understand that you can have it - a house, a car, a savings account, whatever they want. Everybody wants a different quality of life. I say whatever you want you can have, because it's there. Everything you need is available, you just have to know what it is and what you want."

They may have gone through a history of not knowing what they want to even look at it is a major risk."

In some ways, Lane sounds very much like the old school of financial counselors whose are who are seen in the back pages of big-city newspapers. For years, warning would be enunciated, financial counselors would tell you how to see other people's money to become wealthy beyond your wildest dreams. But Lane is quick to point out the similarities between his course and the old school of financial counselors. "I'm not defining any age group," he says. "I'm doing it to show other people's money to become wealthy beyond your wildest dreams."

When asked of the course is directed specifically toward the new-age market, Lane replies, "It depends on the person. The course is definitely not for the accounting. It's very new age. I think San Diego is another world right now and has been for a long time."

The San Diego Union published an article on the University of California, San Diego, in 1964, demanding an investigation of the university's president, who had accused Marxist professor Herbert Marcuse of being a "communist." The editorial did not exaggerate the importance of Marcuse or his philosophy, or what such an accusation might entail, but it did raise questions about the role of the university in providing a safe haven for such ideas.

Marcuse was known for his radical views on society and the role of the university in promoting this change. He believed that the university should not only educate individuals, but also serve as a site for the dissemination of alternative ideas and perspectives. This perspective was seen as threatening by some, leading to calls for his removal from the university.

The article cited an interview with Marcuse in which he discussed the importance of critical thinking and the need for a more democratic society. Marcuse argued that the university had a responsibility to promote these values and that this could be achieved through the study of philosophy and other disciplines.

The editorial also touched on the broader political climate of the time, noting the growing concern about communism and the role of the university in supporting these ideas. Despite the controversy, Marcuse was able to continue his work at the university, and his influence on the field of philosophy and sociology remains significant to this day.
"Marcuse, you are a dirty Communist dog. We give you seventy-two hours to leave the United States. Seventy-two hours more, Marcuse, and we will kill you."
Marcuse

Consulted from the start of the San Diego Times, Marcuse was the only one who could have given us the facts of the matter. His article, "Marcuse, the Man, the Myth, the Legend," was the first to expose the truth about the events of the 1960s. His articles were read by millions and helped shape the course of American history.

Marcuse was a man of principle. He believed in the power of words to change the world. His articles were filled with wisdom and insight, and he was not afraid to speak the truth, even when it was unpopular.

Marcuse's legacy lives on. His articles continue to be read and studied by scholars and activists alike. His words continue to inspire us to fight for justice and equality.

Marcuse was a true giant of his time. He will be missed, but his work will live on for generations to come.
On September 18, one day before the regents met to decide on the fate of the Los Angeles campus, a spokesman for the University of California system released the following statement: "The decision to close the Los Angeles campus is based on a thorough analysis of the financial, academic, and operational climate of the institution. The regents believe that the university can continue to serve the Los Angeles community effectively by transferring the responsibilities of the campus to other institutions, including UC San Diego and UCLA." The statement also noted that the closure would allow the university to focus its resources on other campuses and initiatives, particularly those in the San Diego area, where the university system is home to a large and diverse student body.

The closure of the Los Angeles campus is the latest in a series of decisions made by the University of California system to consolidate its resources and realign its priorities. In recent years, the university has faced significant financial challenges, including declining state funding and rising costs, which have forced it to make difficult decisions about its campuses and programs. The closure of the Los Angeles campus is expected to have a significant impact on the local community, particularly those who rely on the university for education, research, and cultural programs.
MARCUSE, who is also known for his work on the question of women's liberation, attended a press conference on February 10 to address the positive changes in the administration and his approval of Marcuse's repatriation. However, he also warned that the campus had a long and difficult road ahead, especially with the current administration's policy of excluding professors from teaching courses on campus.

On November 22, the Regents met to consider the issue of Marcuse's repatriation. Several hundred students and faculty members, including Marcuse, attended the meeting. Several members of the Board of Regents, including Governor Reagan, were present at the meeting. The meeting was held in a closed session, and the outcome was not made public.

Marcuse's repatriation was approved by the Regents, but the decision was not without controversy. Some members of the faculty and students were concerned that the decision would undermine the university's commitment to academic freedom and the free exchange of ideas.

Being in the World

JONATHAN SKULLE

The Sun Dogs: Museum of Art has opened a retrospective exhibition of the work of the German artist Georg Baselitz. The show, held at the Museum of Modern Art, New York, runs through November 13.

The exhibition includes over 150 works, spanning the artist's career from the 1950s to the present. It features paintings, drawings, photographs, and installations, providing a comprehensive overview of Baselitz's artistic output.

The exhibition is organized into five sections, each dedicated to a different period of the artist's career. The first section focuses on Baselitz's early work, including his early figurative paintings and his experimental approach to abstraction. The second section examines the artist's development in the 1970s and 1980s, highlighting his use of large-scale imagery and his exploration of the relationship between art and politics.

The third section showcases Baselitz's work from the 1990s, when he turned to figuration again, this time focusing on the human body and its representation. The fourth section examines the artist's more recent work, which has continued to explore the themes of identity and society. The final section includes a selection of photographs and installations, providing a glimpse of the artist's practice and his engagement with the world around him.

The exhibition is accompanied by a catalogue that includes essays by leading art historians and curators, as well as a comprehensive catalogue of the artist's work. The catalogues are available for purchase at the museum gift shop.

Comedy Hell

JOHN D'ANTONIO

In the wake of the sudden freezing frenzy that the rest of the comedy community is experiencing, Comedy Hell is the only real place to go. Here, you can enjoy a night of true comedy. No frills, no gimmicks - just straight-up, unadulterated comedy. The perfect place for anyone who wants a real laugh.

Last week I started off the weekend with a bang at Comedy Hell. The club's decor is simple yet effective, with an abundance of comedy memorabilia and posters adorning the walls. The sound system is top-notch, and the lighting is just right to highlight the comedians without being too bright. The audience is always energetic and enthusiastic, adding to the overall experience.

The lineup for the night included a mix of established names and up-and-coming comics. I was particularly impressed by the variety of styles and delivery methods presented. Some comedians opted for the traditional monologue format, while others experimented with stand-up routines. The audience seemed to enjoy all the performances, which added to the sense of community.

Overall, Comedy Hell is a great place to catch a night of solid comedy. I highly recommend it for anyone looking for an authentic comedy experience away from the usual run-of-the-mill clubs. It's definitely worth a visit!

FRENCH CHEESE PLATTER

A French cheese platter was prepared for me, but unfortunately, it was not as expected. The platter was supposed to include various types of cheese, including Camembert, Brie, and Roquefort. However, when I arrived, only one type of cheese was present, which was not what I had ordered. The server explained that they were out of the other types and that they had substituted a different cheese instead. I was disappointed with the substitution and felt that the overall experience was not as enjoyable as I had anticipated. The service was friendly, but the quality of the food left something to be desired.

Tango Argentino

In the summer of 1985, the Tango Argentino was the most popular dance in Argentina. The dance was born in the streets of Buenos Aires, and it quickly spread throughout the country. The dance is characterized by its fast tempo and intricate footwork.

PICTURE STORY
By the San Diego Historical Society

St. Paul's Episcopal Church, the first Episcopal church in San Diego, held its inaugural service on Easter Sunday, 1855. In 1885, the church was moved from its downtown location at Eighth Avenue and C Street to the SDSU campus and renamed St. Francis Episcopal Church. This photograph shows the church tower hanging from a cable as it was moved to its present site in 1968. It is now located on 26th Drive in Lemon Grove, where it is known as St. Philip's Episcopal Church.
