FIRST AWARD: COLOR Earthly Support Louise Russell, North Park

he Museum of Photographic Arts, the Gallery Store, and the Reader would like to thank San Diego County photographers who submitted entries to this year's contest. A total of 553 images was received from 287 individuals. All entries were judged by Patrick Nagatani, photographer and assistant professor of art at the University of New Mexico, who selected forty-one for exhibition. Twenty-four of these are color images, and seventeen are black and white. The nine prize-winning photographs are presented in this issue of the Reader. The complete exhibition may be seen at the Gallery Store, 724 Broadway, downtown San Diego, from Monday, October 26, through November 14. In December and January, the exhibition will travel to Southwestern and Grossmont colleges. mont colleges.

Frozen Formula

Like Adam and Eve holding apple cores in their hands, Leo and Gilly realize that their new knowledge could alter everything.

British playwright Howard Brenton believes tha "the trivial and the cauclymic behavior to the play the Genta."

Enter Low with Virginia Hay wish of Graham. treasurer of the university fair in the stone Eurer Graham, eaching them in fingrames delice. Then Leo look down and notices his formula. At first the scene is furns, but then it begins to disturf in ways the playwright may not have intended. What it does is combine two wide's infidelity; one earth-shafing (Leo's, that someone else knows the dreaded for-

It is also whoppingly contrived, melodramatic (as Leo slowly edges toward the scrawlings in the snow), and cold at its core. As it labors to prove the playwright's theory about the trivial and the cataclysmic (which comes from W.H. Auden's poem "Musée des Beaux W.H. Auden's poem "Musee des Beaux Arts"), the scene cuts its human thri ads in favor of big effects. The theory, VOILA'— great, but what about Graham's pain' is ck up there on the hill? Now granted, Graham could neither save nor blow up the world, he sbesn't seem all that much, in fact, but the guy's been hurt real bad, and the scene gags his reaction altogether while more "important"

Author of The Romans in Britain. The Churchill Play, and (the very impressive) Sore Throats. Brenton is an anomaly in this day and age. As opposed to the countless "relationship plays" that have clogged langer for the last closed— all those plays in the last closed— all those plays in the last closed of the last four-character, one-set shows that analyze the jillion ways two people can go wrong — the Cambridge-educated Brenton (along with British colleagues David Hare, Edward sond, and Caryl Churchill) prefers to write plays with sweeping themes and political and philosophical ramifications. He is especially concerned with the ways different forms of authority can conflict. And when compared to the small-scaled chamber dramss than have to the small-scaled chamber dramas that have been our usual theater fare in the Eighties, watching a play like The Genius is refreshing simply because of its scope—not to men-tion the fact that it takes an extreme risk; it dares to bring intelligence back into the

Like Adam and Eve holding apple cores in heir hands, Leo and Gilly realize that their new knowledge could alter everything. But should it be forbidden? How can one hold back such information? Should scientists and physicists who tinker with the order of things be morally responsible for their discoveries? The actor playing Leo faces a challenge similar to the one Brenton faced. In effect, how does one play an "intellectual," someone possibly smarter than onesel? In the Rep's production, actor Jan Munroe has not Rep's production, actor Jan Munroe has not solved this problem. Intellectuals don't eat their young, I hear tell. Most live normal lives. They pay bills and probably rooted for Benito Santiago to prolong his hitting streak. It is said that some intellectuals are even fun It is said that some intellectuals are even tun people, great to have at a barbecue. Munno's Leo, however, is a burned-out jerk from the getgo, who sports only the negative trapped of intelligence — a dull, sardonic tempera-ment, manners as bad as his taste in clothes (Nancy Jo Smith's costume designs are on the chef from Milan, I arranged to go there as early as possible.

Villa D'Este is a common name for Italian restaurants, both here and abroad. The one in Dei Mar is named for the Villa D'Este Hotel, located on Lake Como, which is surely one of the most breathaking and romantic spots in all of Italy. The cooking in that region is equally glorious. Milan and its surrounding tertain are noted for pears baked in wine sauce, short-grained, creamy rice called arborious, and seal shash preparation. The chef at our local Villa D'Este, Dulio Valenti, does passion to his native city, as well as to the restaurant's namesake. The menu is extensive, which should allow you to return perience is quite European. On the site of the somewhat Isticky Bohemian restaurant, a new took has been fashound. Another astonishing first course (though you may choose it for your entrée) is the canelloin Biolognese, which arrived on a very hot dish with the edges of this pasta stuffed with veal, beef, its svinach lightly crusty, and the Biolognese and meat suace bubbling. One serving is enough for treve, and along with the crusty hot rolls and sweet butter, the canelloni makes a dazzling opener for any Italian meal ($9.75).

Of the several entrées that we ordered, the best was the evening special of osso buco, or veal shanks — I hadn't had such an authentic version in years ($16.25). My escort and I had the dish divided, and it was more than rhad the dish divided, and it was more from enough for the two of us (we had had the canelloni, then an end/we-and-radicchio salad lightly dressed in olive oil [$4.50]). Zen is the study of the Ten Thousand States of Mind and of Philiphienment, the attll center which lies beyond the Ten Thousand States of Mind. It is a highly personal study which brings charily and purpose into the lives of those who practice it.

Zen Buddhist thought has had a profound influence upon Chinese and Japanese history and culture. A great deal of the current success of the Japanese corporate mind seems from the effect of centuries of Zen practice in Japan. Martial arts, dance, poetry, the ten extremous and many other forms of personal, addesic and artistic expression have been given birth to by Zen mind.

The universe is filled with all types. But the types who buy the Volvo 740 GLI appear to be smarter than most. Because they're driving the touring sedan with all the features received for a controllable life on Earth, at a price that's not out of this world. Shandard features like air cond-mining belief from Seaks, summed and a Joshiph's caseful series ossens. The 740 also offers each controllable and the series of the
