by the sloppy and unconocionably biased reportage of Bob McPhail in his "Power Politics" article.

Most disturbing is that Mr. McPhail had either received or had access to facts that directly contradict his assertions. He knew, or should have known, that:

1. UCAN is in better financial

UCAN is in better financial condition today than it was in 1985 — its alleged "heyday."
 2. I am not leaving UCAN this year, next year, or in the future. I worked to create the organization, I have sacrificed for this.

Please also note McPhail's accusation that "... despite that withdrawal and despite the PUC's

THE INSIDE STORY

WITHOUT DEBATE OR WITHOUT DEBATE OR DISSENT, THE SAN DIEGO City Council last week awarded a management contract for the city-owned downtown parking garage to a local company whose political connections and generous campaign donations have helped it maintain a near parking business. By awarding the noncompetitive contract to Acc Parking, Inc.

Ace Parking, Inc. comment to councilments be called out at least two experienced management firms that might have increased the parking lot of revenues and better asfeguarded through the hands of parkade attendants and managers each year. The council also lost the opportunity to learn more about how that each is currently valuerable to their and why the city staff and Ace Parking may not be the best solution to Cast problem.

That contract, which control is the million-dollar-ayear facility for an unprecedented seven years, control of the million-dollar-ayear facility for an unprecedented seven years, proviously awarded. Because the L. A. firms had asked to be involved in the bidding and the council's previous actions were mentioned in a September 27 placed the parkade contract on the public discussion section of the council agenda. But when councilimembers indicated they had no comments on the audience asked to speak on the issue, it was shifted to the virtually unheard of in other cities. "It's a very, very competitive scene," with up to ten parking companies "at each other's throats" to win other's throats" to win management contracts, notes Lumer. Five Star's Lumer says the awarding of parking contracts without soliciting bids is

Lumer and San Diego parking contractor Mark Battaglia say the councilmembers should have paid more attention to a September 18 city report that told how obsolete and broken equipment in the parkade has purchase and install in the parkade $135,000 worth of new computerized cash registers, ticket dispensers, and other ophisticated parking control equipment. But Ace competit Battaglia says the city, not Ace, should contract with an independent parking equipment firm and not leave that job to Ace. "It's like letting the wolf guard the chicken coop," warns Battaglia.

City property department official Breslauer says the ci official Brestauer says the city didn't purchase the new didn't purchase the new equipment itself because it wants the cash registers and counters installed as quickly as possible, and the bidding process required by the city charter would delay that job. The city's purchasing checked the price and quality of the parking control system selected by Ace and found it to be satisfactory, says purchasing director Jack Thorpe. An Awkward

Honeymoon

Mr. Smith is a passionate and impulsive man, aside from being a good musician, and he directed much of his passion and much of his passion and impulsiveness at concert-mistress Nancy Garvey. Every time he took a bow, he would pounce on Miss Garvey and drag her from her seat to share the applause, as the same time madly beckoning the rest of the orthestra to rise, like Zarathustra summoning the sunrise. On two or three occasions, returning from the wings, he pounced on her from behind, grabbing at her elbow and virtually lifting her erect—apparently a rather startling experience for Miss Garvey, who never quite seemed to get used to it.

On paper, the booking that brought the Balancing Act and the dB's to Rio's last Friday night offered a double scoop of rich, challenging music for the pop gourmand And even if such external forces as monson-like cloudbursts and stiff, crossown competition for virtually the same audience conspired to qualify the event's success, it still deserves no less than "honorable mention" in the year's top-ten-concerns sweepstable, benomin the Against All Odds category with the recent "Four Pils Tour" that rode a river of rain onto the UCSD campus. In the bours before the concern at Rio's, intermitient showers had adversely affected driving continuous, visibility, and general movement in several areas of the city. By nine o'clock, the area surrounding the Loma Portal club was awash in a deluge that would have made even Gene Kelly cross. It was not altogether sur-Gene Kelly cross. It was not altogether sur-prising, then, to find Rio's half-empty for a radioactive set of vintage rhythm and blues by San Diego's newest and perhaps best group of blues avatars, the Mighty Penguins, led by excellent guitarist/vocalist Bill Thompson and keyboardist Bruce Donnelly.

Holsapple's wongs are so good that even hose who seemed to have come to the club only to sit, drink, and schmoore found themselves getting into the flow. The lough, rhythmic lyricism of "Never Say When," "Molly Sadi," and "Think Too Hard," and "Molly Sadi," and "Think Too Hard," and "Molly Said," and "Think Too Hard," and the thunder-trifing "Any Old Thing" evidenced how the listening qualities of The Sound of Music translates as well to the dance floor. But Holsapple made it clear that the approaches performing with the same tweaked creativity that the brings to songwriting. In the middle of one song, the bandleader broke into some humorous banter that led to be approached to the control of the Section 10 to 1 a brief reading of the Staples' 1972 gospel-pop hit, "I'll Take You There." Another ode (which from Holsapple's introduction would seem to have been inspired by a real-life situa-tion involving a well-known but unnamed rock star) exhibited the songwriter's talent for juxtaposing genuine anger with mitigating, if crude, humor. In his preface to "Why Did You Sleep with My Girlfriend?" Holsapple forewarned the audience that if they didn't want to hear a certain four-letter word, they'd be well advised to plug their ears. He then articulated the potentially offensive term at the end of the line. "I wish you good fortune/ and a lotta good luck/ but next time find

VITAL VIOLIN There was no doubt

There was no doubt something approaching panic or despair among the administrators of the La Jolla Chamber Music Society as they prepared for last week's concerts. Two concerts were scheduled 'panist Claudio Arrau in the Civic Theatre on Wednesdaw and nignice. Wednesday, and pianist-harpsichordist Rosalyn Turek in Sherwood Auditorium on Saurday. And at virtually the last minute, both artist canceled because of ill health. It was too late to find a substitute exaccide because of ill health. When Zehetmai appeared on stage, he seemed rather a German romantic poel rather a German romantic poet of a century and a half ago, slender, fine boned, hirsute in a bothemian manner, lost in a private world of idealistic reverie. Could one expect good music-making from someone so exquisitely theatrical in appearance? Pinchas Zukerman and Itzhak Perlman don't lock like this!

like this! The performance of the initial work on the program, the Mozart B-flat Sonata, K. 454, works on the program, the laid some of the audience's fast and to me of the audience's fast to rest. The violinist's tone was not what one expected: not the rich, intense, buth Russian sound we have become used to in the world's great violinists, was a sound we have become used to usue, with a slower, wider vibrato, and an unusual boneyed delicacy. If one was reminded of anyone, it was of Firit Kreisler. The performance was sure- sense of eighteenth-century expressiveness and decorum. One heard the same approach in the work of Zebetmair's companies of the control of the first plants and violinist and plupped together for the first deployed progress of for the first plants and violinist and plupped together for the first and the control of control of fact that pianist and violinist had played together for the first time only the day before the concert, it was remarkable how comfortable with each other they seemed and how much in agreement they were on their common style. Nevertheless, the Mozart performance never quite took fire. It was lovely, it was stylish, it was (in technical matters) flawless, and there was no denying the distinctive musical personality projected by Zehetmair – but, without being in any way pedestrian or routine, the performance was often simply dull.

needed a miracle. batteries not included

This holiday season there will be a new kind of electricity in the air—a new movie entertainment for your entire family called

It is a story about a group of good people in the middle of a big city who are about to lose everything they have unless they can be saved by a miracle.

They get some extraordinary help when a family of tiny spaceships arrives to work their special magic, mystifying an entire neighborhood and dazzling everyone around them.

My mother tells me that when I was preschool age, I used to hop around the house singing.
"Here comes Peter Cottonial, hopping down the bunny trail, hippity-hoppity, Easter's on its way," over and over again. The next song I actually remember learning was "Red River." learning was "Red River Valley" off of one of those little yellow records you could pick up in the grocery store.

Someone bought at for me. As I got older and had a choice. got older and had a choice, around the age of seven. I loved "Hound Dog" by Elvis. Then around junior high here was Neil Sedaka with "Calendar Gir!" and "Breaking Up Is Hard to Do." I used to imagine that I had a crush on a girl and we had already broken up. It was a sad song for me.
