The Art of Emergence

The Art of Emergence is an ongoing series of projects exploring the relationship between artists and their environments. The series began in 2015 with a focus on urban spaces and has expanded to include natural and rural landscapes. The projects are designed to encourage interaction between the artist and the environment, and to promote a deeper understanding of the dynamics of place.

Events

- Opening Reception: June 21, 2015, 7-9 pm
- Workshop: July 5, 2015, 1-4 pm
- Art Walk: August 15, 2015, 6-9 pm

The art of emergence is best experienced on a personal level. Join us for our opening reception on June 21 to meet the artists and learn more about their work.

Around the Town in Years

In the summer of 2014, I began a project to photograph the town in which I live. I visit the same places every week, and document the changes over time. The project has been ongoing ever since, and I continue to add new locations to the list.

Events

- Photography Workshop: August 20, 2015, 10 am - 2 pm
- Exhibition Opening: September 3, 2015, 6-9 pm

The Correct Question

"What does it mean to be a good person?" is often asked, but rarely explored. This series of interviews with local residents seeks to delve into the meaning of this question and its implications for our lives.

Events

- Interview Series: Every Friday at 7 pm
- Discussion Night: Every Saturday at 8 pm

City Lights

In this series, I explore the relationship between the city and its inhabitants. Through photography and interviews, I capture the essence of urban life and the experiences of those who live in it.

Events

- Photo Exhibit: August 10-30, 2015
- Book Launch: September 1, 2015, 6-9 pm

Memorable

Memorable is a series of portraits capturing the unique personalities and stories of people from around the world. Each portrait is accompanied by an interview with the subject, highlighting their experiences and the moments that have shaped them.

Events

- Portraits Exhibition: August 10-30, 2015
- Memorable Talks: Every Sunday at 2 pm

Sports

Sports is a series of photographs capturing the passion and energy of athletic events. From local community games to international tournaments, I document the spirit of competition and the joy of sport.

Events

- Sports Exhibition: August 10-30, 2015
- Sports Talks: Every Saturday at 1 pm

Lectures

Lectures are a series of talks and discussions exploring a variety of topics. From art and photography to history and culture, these events are designed to inspire and engage.

Events

- Lecture Series: Every Thursday at 7 pm
- Lecture Talks: Every Tuesday at 4 pm

The audience is virtually riveted into having the good time the playwright thought he was giving them.

JONSUON SMIRK
One of the two plays opening the Old Camelot season for York Players. "Two Over the Rainbow," by Colman Dixon, rates as an evening of the theater that doesn't quite live up to its promise. The plot of the play is simple enough: A man named Henry is trying to make a discovery in the great big world. The trouble is that every time he tries to make a discovery he discovers something else. He finally discovers that it is more important to be happy than to make discoveries, but even then he discovers that he can't be happy unless he makes discoveries. This is the sort of thing that happens in "Two Over the Rainbow." It is not a pleasant thing to happen, and
the play is not a pleasant one to see.

The other play opening the Old Camelot season for York Players is "The Holiday Spirit," by John Gassner. This play is a much more satisfying experience, although it is not without its flaws.
The plot of the play is simple enough: A man named John is trying to make a discovery in the great big world. The trouble is that every time he tries to
make a discovery he discovers something else. He finally discovers that it is more important to be happy than to make that happens in "The Holiday Spirit." It is not a pleasant thing to happen, and

the play is not a pleasant one to see.

The performance of the actors is mixed. Jack O'Connell's direction is a bit too touchy-feely for my taste. The acting of the characters is not quite convincing. The play is not quite as long as it needs to be. The setting is not quite as interesting as it could be.

In conclusion, "Two Over the Rainbow" and "The Holiday Spirit" are not quite the plays I expected them to be. They are not quite as good as I hoped they would be. They are not quite as enjoyable as I thought they would be.

All in all, I would not recommend these plays to anyone. They are not worth seeing. They are not worth your time.
They are not worth your money.
Dreaming of a Light Christmas

The massive scale is used to best effect when the hero is smallest, but he cannot remain three years old for long.

DUNCAN SHEPHERD

I had never seen the stars before. I was a little child and I had only seen the moon, which was a great, shining object that moved across the sky every night. But the Stars were different. They were tiny, twinkling points of light that seemed to dance across the heavens. The moon was easy to find, but the Stars were harder to locate, yet they always seemed to be there, guiding me through the darkness.

I had heard stories about the stars, how they were made of burning gas and how they could light up the whole sky. But I had never seen them up close. It was as if they were just out of reach, beyond my grasp. It was like trying to touch the wind, or catch a butterfly. They were beautiful, but elusive.

I remember sitting under the Stars one night, watching them twinkle and wondering about them. I wondered if they were real, or if they were just a figment of my imagination. But the truth was, I knew they were real, and I knew that they were something that I could only dream about.

The Stars were like the things that I wanted most in life, things that were out of my reach. They were like the person I wanted to be, the place I wanted to go, the things I wanted to do. They were like the dreams that I had when I was a little child, dreams that I had forgotten as I grew older.

The Stars were like the love that I wanted, the love that I longed for. They were like the happiness that I wanted, the happiness that I craved. They were like the joy that I wanted, the joy that I sought.

But the truth was, the Stars were always just out of my reach. They were always just out of my grasp. They were always just out of my sight. They were always just out of my control.

I had never seen the Stars before, but I had always dreamed about them. I had always dreamed about the things that I wanted, the things that I longed for, the things that I craved, the things that I sought.

And so, I dream of the Stars. I dream of the things that I want, the things that I long for, the things that I crave, the things that I seek. I dream of the things that I cannot have, the things that are beyond my reach.

But even though the Stars are out of my reach, they are still there, twinkling and shining, guiding me through the darkness. The Stars are like my dreams, always there, always shining, always guiding me forward.

And so, I dream of the Stars. I dream of the things that I want, the things that I long for, the things that I crave, the things that I seek. I dream of the things that I cannot have, the things that are beyond my reach.

But even though the Stars are out of my reach, they are still there, twinkling and shining, guiding me through the darkness. The Stars are like my dreams, always there, always shining, always guiding me forward.

A GEM

As New England's John F Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts prepares to celebrate its 25th anniversary, the Center is pleased to announce the opening of "Beyond the Classroom," a new exhibition featuring the work of emerging artists from around the world.

The exhibition, which runs from November 15 to December 31, features works by 25 artists who have been selected by a panel of international judges. The works range in style from traditional painting to contemporary digital art and showcase the diversity of artistic expression in today's world.

The opening reception will take place on November 15, with refreshments and live music to celebrate the opening of this exciting new exhibition. The reception is free and open to the public, and all are welcome.

THE ARTIST'S EYE

As the Center marks its 25th anniversary, it is a fitting moment to reflect on the role of the arts in society and to celebrate the work of emerging artists. In this special conversation, Center Director John F. Kennedy Jr. speaks with a panel of artists about the importance of their work and the role it plays in shaping our world.

Join us on December 15, at 7:30 p.m., for an evening of conversation and reflection, as we celebrate the work of these emerging artists and the impact of the arts on society.

CHRISTMAS MEMORIES

Christmas memories are a cherished part of the holiday season. From the first snowfall of the year to the sound of Christmas carols, the festive season is filled with memories that last a lifetime.

This year, the Center invites you to share your Christmas memories with us. Submit your memories to us and you could be featured in a special Christmas segment on our website, or on social media.

Submit your memories by December 1, and you could be featured in our special Christmas segment. Share your memories of past holidays, special traditions, or the moments that make the season memorable for you.

What's the biggest disaster you've ever had with your hair?

by Lisa Alley

Bob Jones

I've had a lot of disasters with my hair. One time, I hit my head on a tree while riding my bike. My hair was cut off at the roots, and I had to get a new haircut.

Bob Jones

My hair was always really long, and I got caught in the wind one day. I wound up with a huge knot in it and had to have it cut off.

Bob Jones

I was trying to cut my own hair and ended up with a really bad haircut. I had to get it cut again at a salon.

Bob Jones

I was at a party and spilled a glass of red wine on my hair. It took me a while to get it out.

Bob Jones

I was at a barber shop and the barber cut my hair too short. I had to wait a few weeks before it grew back.

Bob Jones

I was at a beauty school and accidentally cut off a lock of my hair. I had to get a new haircut.
