A local baker seeks her just desserts

AM SITTING AT TULIE TREJO'S kitchen table, watching her make gingerbread men and thinking about a story I read in the newspaper this morning. It was about a woman who allowed her boyfriend to beat her little girl to death. Like most readers, my mind skipped over the word "allegedly" as I tried to comprehend how this could have happened. The more I listen to Tulie talk about her family, her neighbors in Chula Vista. and all the cooking contests she has entered, the more I understand the existence of these extremes.

The procedum stage of the Guslamy Quarter Haseler was how recently to a tour-ing production from Japan. Hissohi Inoue's drama Make-IP, as one-woman plus yatering actives. Misako Watanabe. This heautrifully and imaginatively staged production, directed by Kushi Kimura and with set design by many design of the stage of the stage of the casonal comic interjections in pungently accented regists, along with running English supertitles and a full summary in the program, made it possible to follow the dialogue and action with relative case. In the company of the company of the Mode-Class as this suggests, its play with Mode-Class as this suggests, its play with Mode-Class and the suggests in the wishle character is an actress the set shows when the suggests in a theaer, the action takes place before and after her ap-poratance in a performance her the district.

the action takes place before and after her ap-pearance in a performance her theatrical froupe is giving; and much of this action is accompanied by the stage begines of changing costumes and applying theatrical make-up. Plays about the theater are a familiar genre in the west (from Koun to T Reglover to Avines Off), with all of them Pagelover to Avines Off), with all of them the control of the property of the con-trol of the property of the stage characters and the real life of the actors play-ing those characters.

Make-Up uses this traditional western device in its own complicated way and, of course, in the context of Japanese theater.

Several different kinds of theater (along with several different levels of reality) are invoked in it. One of the great realitional theaters of lepton is badie, with its medistrantia; plots, and the several different levels in the several different level out of its mother-son relationship, and when Yoko is rehearsing her role in the play, she plays those emotions to the hilt, in the exagterated, flamboyant, rhetorical style tradi-tional in kabuki and its derivatives. Concurrently. Yoko's relationship with the pop singer who may be her son rouses the identical emo-tions in her, which at this level of reality are tions in her, which at the level of reality accepted in a legislate expressed in a six purporting to be realised. Since Yiko is an actress, however, and of a sentimental and flumboyard disposition in an exagerated and heighbened manner and the sentential six proposed in the control for the first and f chatasets releminessly tended toward the con-ventional stylizations of melodrama. Working-class kabuki and a western realism modified in the direction of melodrama do not exhaust the theatreal im-plications of Make-Cp. An extremely promi-nent theatrical element in this play is the fact that the east consists of only one actors, who that the cast consists of only one actress, who in speaking to the other characters (all of whom are invisible) must create the illusion of their presence by her physical and emomonal reactions alone. This is in itself a con-siderable modification of the conventions of realism, where what you actually see is supposed to be all that exists. The imaginative creation of nonexistent characters suggests mine theater rather than realism, and it in-evitably underlines the theatrical skill of the actress who is accomplishing this difficult actress who is accomplishing this difficult text. Our aftention is drawn to the acting as acting, a perception quite unlike the effect aimed at by realism; to make the character on stage appear to be a real person rather than a nestor or actress playing a role. Finally, the performance of this Japanese person of the person

The actress's occasional use of English words and phrases was pleasingly comic, working effectively to overcome the altenation in-herent in the situation (an audience watching a play in a language most of them could not understand). At the same time, it introduced an intriguing blur into the several clear levels of reality and theatricality already created by an intriguing biur into the several clear levels or reality and theartrailing laready created by the script. As the script distance, we want to the script As the script distance, we want to get the real of a fictional actress (Vokoo Wantanber, piloping the role of a fictional actress (Vokoo Bearsing on performing roles at an even more fictional level, in the play within a pilopinary in the pilopinary in t high-flown lingo of plays like Isahuro's Journey of Farewell! ## BRANDENBURG CONCERTOS

The La Jolla Chamber Music Society has made an annual tradition of presenting the Los Angeles Chamber Orshestra in a Christmas-time concert of the six Brandenburg Concertos. Despite the unhappy attempt of the feekless San Diego Symphony to music in on the act this year, the LACO Brandenburgs, pensure the ones. Brandenburgs remain the one bear Too many Bach-lovers, in fact, to be accommodated in USD's Immaculata Church, where the concert has traditionally been held, so that tickets. Things were even worse misunderstanding of fire regulations led to the necessity themselves relegated to side able to attend the concert at all The fault was not the Chamber Music Society's, but it was natural for those left out in the cold (herally) to vent their anger—and the bitterness of that anger is a measure of how passionately many concert goe are attached to these splendid group of soloists (the oncertino), ranging from two to several instruments. The contrasting sounds and textures of the two groups, the ways they vary each other's themes or state themes of their own, make up the basic structural principle of these works, which otherwise tend to be in three or four movements arranged in a similar fashion to the solo concertos being composed in the same period. Three of the Brandenburgs are like this, the second (in which the concertir oboe, and flute), the fourth (violin and two recorders). the fifth (violin, flute, and harpsichord). But the harpsichord). But the combinations of instruments are strikingly original. Arcanglo Corelli, who virtually invented the genre, always used a trio of strings as the concertino, and Bach's only significant predecessor in inventing odd combinations of diverse. instruments for the solo group was Antonio Vivaldi. In these three concertos, Bach took particular pleasure in the ontrasted and mingled onorities of different kinds of reble instruments, with a particularly spectacular use (in the second concerto) of a small,

Shozo Sato's Kahaki Macheth is a spectacular blend of two distinct theatrical traditions. Using Shakespeare's themes and characters, the Elizabethan text has been abbreviated to accommodate the classical Japanese elements of styliced gesture, ritual dance, make-up and puppetry. This production is a stunning display of theatrical values reflecting the richness of Shakespeare's language.

FROM IRELAND THE CHIEFTAINS

Traditional Irish music is moving, mysterious, and filled with the warmth, beauty. Joy and poignant melancholy of the country itself. In their twenty-four years together, the Chiefrains have come to embody the essence of Irish style.

An evening with the Chieftains is always memorable, and this-their fourth appearance at UCSD, will be no exception.

Don't miss this sure-to-sell-out show.
