How did a desert town lose its health clinic and $36,000? Why did UCSD-trained physicians end up looking for new jobs? What's the prognosis for North County Health Services and its executive director, Dorothy Reno?

BORREGO SPINGS — Even the Methodist minister is late. So are the Lions, the Soroptimists, the Optimists, the Kiwanis, members of the Borrego Springs Civic Foundation, the Women's Circle of the Borrego Springs Community Church, and scores of other benefactors of the now-defunct Borrego Springs Community Clinic. On a particularly pleasant desert spring day last month, representatives of this unlikely band of civic malcontents gathered in a small reception area of the empty clinic quarters, where retired admirals once rubbed elbows with citrus pickers as they waited to see a doctor. This time, though, they had come to explain how the fruits of public charity had been lost to a multimillion-dollar corporation. For more than a decade, the citizens of Borrego Springs had been models of civic involvement, donating cash and equipment to a community health clinic that had, during that time, operated under various auspices. It never mattered who was running the place. The clinic was one of...
STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP

Matthew Alice

Dear Matthew Alice,

The other day, I was at Disneyland, and I noticed something very peculiar. There was a man who seemed to be in a permanent state of happiness. His name was Bob, and he was wearing a shirt that said, "I Love Disneyland." I asked him what made him so happy, and he told me that he had been coming to Disneyland for years, and each time he visited, he felt like a kid again. He said that the moments of pure joy he experienced at Disneyland were the things that made his life worth living.

I think it's wonderful how a place like Disneyland can bring so much joy to people. It's a reminder that there are still places in the world where we can go to let our imaginations run wild and feel like we're living in a magical world.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
CLINICAL

Ron's mother, Dorothy, founded the clinic that brought the two together. The gift grew over the years and in 1974, the Clinic was incorporated. The clinic is named after Dorothy Ron, who passed the role of leadership to her son, Ron. The clinic continues to provide health care services to those who need them.

In 1990, the Clinic received a new home, a building designed specifically for the clinic's needs. The new building features state-of-the-art medical equipment and provides a comfortable and welcoming environment for patients.

The Clinic is committed to providing high-quality care to all who seek its services, regardless of their ability to pay. Volunteers play an essential role in the clinic's operations, helping to serve the community.

In 2000, the Clinic celebrated its 25th anniversary, a testament to its enduring commitment to health care services. Today, the Clinic continues to grow and evolve, adapting to meet the changing needs of its patients.

Malamut on the board of directors as New Sandy Beach Health Systems, a nonprofit organization that oversees the Sandy Beach Medical Center in Sandy Beach, a suburb of West Portland. Sandy said she was a member of the Sandy Beach Medical Center Board of Directors and had been a member of the Sandy Beach Medical Center Board of Directors for many years.

To accept a $42,000 scholarship under the auspices of the National Health Service Scholarship Program, a student must be a registered nurse. The scholarship is open to students who are enrolled in a B.S. or M.N. program at an accredited school of nursing.

Malamut was not the only one of New Sandy Beach Health Systems' board members who was a member of the Sandy Beach Medical Center Board of Directors. In fact, she was the only board member who was a member of the Sandy Beach Medical Center Board of Directors.

In an interview, she denied the corruption of the physicians who attended her in the midst of a legal battle in the courts. "If anyone is going to sue anyone, they're going to sue everyone," she said.

According to Dr. William Mathis, a cardiologist who treated Malamut in New Sandy Beach Health Systems' hospital in Sandy Beach, "It's a very unusual case. I've never seen anything like it before."

The new study is making the case that the renaissance of the female patient in the dental office is a reality. In the last year, women have been flocking to the dentist's office in record numbers, while men have been diminishing their visits. This is true despite the fact that women have traditionally been more fearful of dental procedures than men. The study findings suggest that women are now more likely to seek dental care and are less likely to delay treatment due to fear. This could be due to increased education and awareness about the importance of dental health, as well as an increased comfort level with dental procedures.

ART as a SOCIAL ACT

Forty-year-old David Avalos was born and raised in National City. His rugged assemblages of saw blades, barned wire, hubcaps, ostrich feathers, and weathered wood, and the print work he has appeared nationally and locally.

Largely self-taught, he was guided early in his experience by the Chicano Park muralists he helped and, somewhat later, by the Chicano artists who painted the converted water tank in Balboa Park that houses the Centro Cultural de la Raza, where he is now artist in residence. He is part of a loose network of artists working the increasingly fertile and dominant border theme.

Art and politics come together famously, for him, early in 1986 when his San Diego Doorknocker Cart, which depicted a U.S. Border Patrol agent fining an undocumented worker, was ordered dismantled and removed from its site outside the federal courthouse downtown by U.S. District Court Judge Gordon Thompson, Jr. The judge said the life-size assemblage — which had been funded by the National Endowment for the Arts as part of a public show organized by the Sushi gallery — posed a security risk, even though Avalos had received federal permission to place it there. The dismantling of the piece prompted Avalos and the American Civil Liberties Union to sue the judge and the federal government; the case is pending.

Almost two years from the dismantling of the cart, Avalos, together with two colleagues, again landed in the nation's newspapers when the trio rioted some on MTDB buses for their America's Finest Bubba Planner posters, timed to coincide with the Super Bowl here.

The image contains a photograph of Ayala Teixier's artwork titled "San Diego Channel," which appears to be a stylized representation of the San Diego skyline. The artwork is likely a part of an exhibition or a collection of artwork featuring San Diego themes.

The text includes a mention of "San Diego Channel" and "San Diego City," indicating a possible connection to the cityscape theme of the artwork. However, the context of the text is not entirely clear due to the limited visibility of the surrounding text or images.
Farce Play

JONATHAN LEOVILLE

San Diego State's production of The Man Who Married Himself is an audience pleaser that is an examination of the problems of political nature. The play portrays a man who has been married to himself for many months. The man is living with his wife, who has become increasingly more interested in her own life. The play is an interesting look at the complex relationship between a man and woman, and the effects of their lives on society.

As for the fluctuating policies of the Italian Community Party, there were not three people in the audience who know or cared about them.

Four More

Renee Hough's name scarcely escapes the notice of the average moviegoer, but for the last couple of years she has been an up-and-coming actress who has appeared in several films. Her most recent role was in the 1980s film "The Big Chill," which earned her critical acclaim for her portrayal of a complex character. She has since taken on more challenging roles, including a lead in the independently produced "Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants," which was released earlier this year. Her latest film, "Four More," is a romantic comedy that has received mixed reviews. Despite the mixed reception, Hough has maintained her reputation as an actress who earns her stripes and delivers performances that are both charming and heartfelt. With a career that is still in its early stages, it will be interesting to see what the future holds for Renee Hough and her continued growth as an artist.

PADRES ‘88
BY NEAL MATTHEWS

The San Diego Padres, known as the Padres, are an American professional baseball team based in San Diego, California. They are a member of the National League (NL) West division. The team was founded in 1969 and played its first season in 1969. The Padres have been one of the most successful franchises in the NL West, winning several division championships and reaching the World Series in 1984.

The Padres were formed when the government of San Diego, along with the city of Las Vegas, bought the San Diego Padres franchise from the city of San Diego in 1967. The Padres were originally known as the San Diego Missionaries and played their first season in 1969. The team was owned by the Missionaries until 1974, when the team was purchased by the Rabinowitz family.

The Padres have been a part of the San Diego market since their inception, and have been a part of the city’s sports landscape for over 50 years. The team has played at several different stadiums since their inception, including Jack Murphy Stadium, Qualcomm Stadium, and Petco Park.

The Padres are known for their passionate fans, who are known as the Padres Faithful. The team has a storied history, with many memorable moments throughout their 50-year history. The Padres are a beloved team in San Diego, and have a strong following throughout the city.

As the team continues to grow and evolve, the Padres are committed to providing the best possible experience for their fans. The team is dedicated to building a strong and sustainable franchise, and to being a positive and community-minded organization.

In conclusion, the San Diego Padres are a beloved and storied franchise, with a rich history and a bright future. The team is committed to providing the best possible experience for their fans, and to being a positive and community-minded organization. The Padres are a team that is loved by fans throughout the city, and are a part of the fabric of San Diego sports history.
