But there will be numerous legal maneuverings before the case can reach the supreme court. The first came last week when the plaintiff's lawyers pointed out to presiding Judge Juddith McConnell that many of San Diego's judges contributed to the "Yes on A" campaign. (McConnell herself was among some twenty judges who gave between $50 and $275 to the ballot measure.) Those judges must, of course, disqualify themselves from hearing the case, and Katz expects that the lawsuit will be tried by an out-of-county judge to avoid even the appearance of a conflict. "That is certainly something that will be considered." That is certainly something that will be considered. The unusual nature of the lawsuit has also attracted other lawyers to the dispute.

As for what it is that Shanley is soying in Moner of Manhatans, one must work rather hard to succees it serving all the marky loss of the succees it is seen to make the point fairly insistently, Judy's relationships with men, we are told, are runted by her lack of humility: if these relationships are to work, she needs to allow hereif to be humilitated. This apparently is what she does with her blind date, a crass seducer who in addition happens to be black (the implication being that to be seduced by a black man is especially humiliating) — and lo, the advice she was given proves to be right, and she now feels much better about herself. The events that solve Billie's marriage problems are similar: she provokes her husband into socking her (she has a big black eye to show for it), and this sat of spontaneous physical violence pumps life back into their dying relationship. We are thus offered two dramatic illustrations of what is apparently the play's thesis: a good man-woman relationship is one in

PIANISTIC EXTREMISM

By the time this review is published, the rather shaky status of the Batiquisto Festival will probably have been clarified. Financial problems have plagued this extraordinarily ambitious first season, with its announced series of chamber music, orchestral, and operatic concerns. Whatever the fate of the festival may turn out to be, the individual concerts I have the individual concerts I have attended so far have proved to be valuable contributions to the cultural life of our community be valuable contributions so me cultural life of our community, cultural life of our community, cultural life of our community, and the cultural massically arid summer months. A contribution of particular importance was the Sherwood Auditorium recital by planist distinguished Soviet musician had already been heard in San Diego last season, as coloist with the visiting Mescow Virtuosi presented by the Society at Symphony Hall. The Batquisos Festival, however, offered us an opportunity to hear him in a more intimate recealing solo ilerature. The program was by no means a broad-ranging sampler, consisting as if did exclusive, consisting as if did exclusive, modern Russian music (on the society), with the addition of Debussy's "Feux d'artifices" as an encore. There was no explicit indication of what Krainev would do with the Viennese classics or the German Romantics — that is, with those works that constitute the greater part of the repertoire pianists are usually judged by. But what we did hear was a series of remarkable performances by someone who is clearly a major artist.

An artist of a specific kind, with a temperament, technique, and interpretive approach much more reminiscent of the nineteenth-century Lisztian nineteenth-century Listrian tradition than of what one hear from most contemporary in the contemporary (Krainev's Chopin is a case in point. The violent intensity and coloration of these states of being and of their contrasts made it such that, however well and nuance, the pianist showed a truly astonishing mastery. His extremism of interpretation (even the technical mastery had an air of extremism about it) was also justified by something harder to define: a total identification with the music identification with the music and an utter conviction of the necessity for playing this way, qualities that after a while overwhelmed any skepticism qualities that after a while overwhelmed any skepticism listeners might have felt at their first shocking immersion in so potentially incoherent a world. If at first the wildness was alienating, it eventually came to seem irresistible, and even favoritism. I'm asking for accuracy."

In fairness to Bloom, who won't defend himself here, the Tribune doesn't seem to make that many more mistakes than any other paper covering the Padres. And if you want to talk mistakes, don't you have to include Jerry Coleman's babbling exclamations, which oftentimes make it impossible for listeners to grasp what's happening on the field? Or is that kind of reporting okay because Coleman is rarely critical of the Padres, whi Bloom tends regularly to fly the team's dirty laundry? The losers would be the fans if McKeon succeeds in muzzling the Tribune's spicy baseball

Where to go on Vight Maneuvers.

We've got three sizzling suggestions: Acapulco Restaurant's Cantinas in San Marcos, Rancho Bernardo and Mira Mesa. In San Marcos, we're talking the ultimate dance club. Good people. Free hors d'oeuvres at Happy Hour. And a huge dance floor that's so hot you'd better wear asbestos shoes.

And in Rancho Bernardo and Mira Mesa, you'll find the same great tunes, DJs and people. The same kind of nightly events and Happy Hours. In a little more intimate setting. Either way, you'll also find something no other dance club can offer. An Acapulco

I'd walk the two inches to school and at least homework. I'll never forget some of those frosty mornings. Our fingers would get so cold snapping each berry off one by one. To this day, strawberries are still picked individually, and a great appreciation for the people who pick them.
