Reminded Of Scheme

I want to take the time to any that I was very impressed by the article "Daggers of Light, Patterns of Power," in the December 22 Reader. Not only being a scientific article, it also caused one to consider meanings and origins of rebirth at Christmas. Often, especially in an urban setting, we forget the universal scheme of bines.

should, at the very least, be noted.

Posal officials will argue with the word "closed." The Nestor post office "moved" last Saturday, they say, Moved from a building it occupied (by most accounts) since 1890 to an U-shaped shopping center called shaped shopping center called Picador Plaza, Moved almost two miles east, to an entirely different neighborhoid in Otay Mesa. Lost its own zip code and adopted another. We call this "closed."

Nestor has now been reduced to another blue-and-white "community of" sign. Annexed to San Diego in 1950, Nestor resembles a lot of neighborhood that are dominated by RVs and basketball hoops. It's a suburban enclave in an unusual locale, sandwiched betwe-n Imperial Beach and Interstate 5. The border is only three miles away, and a cluster of last-chance motels looms over the community from the freeway. The center of Nestor has always been Flower Avenue, a two-block side street that held the post office, the Old Smokehouse (famous for its beet jerky), and the United Methodist Church. All three structures were erected in the 1890s. The smokehouse was turned into a liquor store, the church was liquor store, the church was beautifully preserved, and the post office is as beat up as a building gets.

down the burden as a whole.

And then the bare-handed moment. But there is no way of interposing one's self between time and soft skin. No way of time and soft skin. No way of taking his tongue, pressing it back into his mouth, make it speak; gathering all the blood, wringing it from the clothes and towels, force it back into his towels, force it back into his veins. And even if you could close the wounds by a force of will, find and kiss his heart to make it beat, time would undo these efforts.

BRODERICK

Still, the four-year-old divorce case is hardly a secret. Betty Proderich has spoken about her legal troubles of a public meeting trouble of the proderich has spoken about her legal troubles of the proderich has spoken about her legal troubles of the proderich has spoken about her case to her La Jolia friends, and the has talked openly about the case to her La Jolia friends, and the case to her La Jolia friends, and the case to her La Jolia friends, and the case to her la Jolia friends and the case to her lawyes to handle her case, so word of the turnalmous proceedings has the committee of the divorce lawyers turned her laway, Mrs. Broderick eventually did Mrs. Broderick eventually did secure representation by a succession of attorneys, including Tricia Smith of Del Mar and Daniel Jaffe of Beverly Hills. But her association with each one ultimately ended, and there's ample evidence that her inability to hold on to a good lawyer has been much her own fault. Though she received $118,000 a year in alimony and child-support payments from her ex-husband, she complains that she couldn't afford their services. (She gave one lawyer a gold and diamond necklace in lieu of a cash retain fee.) And while she claims that Jaffe, the Beverly Hills attorney, stopped representing her within six months because Dan Broderick wouldn't honor his promise to pay Jaffe's retainer, Remy Broderick's behavior itself has travated the divorce proceedings. After the Brodericks and agreed to sell their La Jolla home in early 1986, Berty halted at the last minute, forcing Dan's lawyer to obtain an emergency court order to sell the house. Ani though Mrs. Broderick holds out that nicident as evidence of Broderick's masterful ability to Broderick's masterful ability to manipulate the court system, her lawyer at that time says he was disgusted with Betty's actions. "I wanted out," attorney Jaffe recalls. "I got her far more money for the house than she was entitled to get, Dut] she wouldn't follow my advice." She later issumed an agreement to have the divorce mediated by purposely misspelling ber name on the mediation contract.

The divorce proceedings have been marred by other spectacular incidents. After the court-ordered house sale was completed, Betty Broderick rammed her car through the front door of her former husband's Hillcrest home. Though the couple's divorce became official in July became official in July 3986 flast weeks court bearing covered the issues of aimony, child support, and custody), she was luter sentenced to a month in the Las Collinas woman's prison for repeatedly harassing her ex-husband, and be conce declated $5000 from her monthly aimony pursents property and used offensive language in from of the couple's children. Dan Broderick hauled her back

Because the court proceedings were closed, it's unclear what Dan Broderick's lawyer urged the judge to do not he alimony and child support matters, but Mr. Broderick's lawyer to year with the property of the broderick she'yer to year $1.00 monthly for a year, followed by $5000 a monthly for fay more years, would be fair. And a 1987 settlement offer drawn up by $1.00 monthly for fay more years, would be fair. And a 1987 settlement offer drawn up to $1.00 monthly $1.0 settlement offer drawn up by Broderick's attorney notes that Broderick has already paid more on community debts and cash ad ances to Betty than half their property is worth. In fact, she owed him $835,601.81 at that time, the settlement offer stated. Judge Howatt said this week that he'll issue his decision in the Broderick case January 30. But that ruling probably won't bring the divorce to its conclusion. "It's going to resolve some community property issues, but it's not going to end this thing," Dan Broderick has said. "It's not going to end until one of us is gone."

THE INSIDE STORY

THE ENERGETIC OPPOSITION OF SOME Scripps Ranch residents guarantees continued problems for BCE Development, which plans to build 3360 new homes near Miramar Lake, just east of Scripps Ranch Boulevard. The dissenting residents have already raised $5000 to finance a petition drive that would place BCE's controversial Miramar BCE's controversial Miramar Ranch North project before the voters, and the Sierra Club's local chapter has pledged to oppose the giant housing project. But several intriguing project. But several intriguing aspects of the Miramar Ranch debate haven't yet received an BCE Development is BCE Development is represented by local land-use attorneys Low Wolfsheimer and Jim Milch. Wolfsheimer is an old friend of Mayor Maureen O'Connor, whose decision not to oppose the Miramar Rainch project has disappointed environmentalists.

 BCE has hired Rick Engineering to design the Miramar project. The engineering firm is headed by Bill Rick, also a mayoral ally. • Wolfsheimer and Rick are both commissioners at the Unified Port District, and on December 20 — eight days after the city council blessed the BCE's residential project — Wolfsheimer and Rick helped persuade their fellow port commissioners to donate $1.3 million in cush and in-kind contributions to the mayor's Soviet arts festival. There's no evidence that the mayor's silence on the Miramar Ranch project and the port district's subsequent generous donation to her pet arts festival donation to her pet arts festival are linked by anything but coincidence. The mayor's press secretary explains that O'Connor had previously supported BCE's request for an exemption from the city's Supported BCEs's request for an exemption from the city's housing caps, and while exemption from the city's housing caps, and while actioney Wolfscheimer wasn't available for comment on the matter, his partiest. Connor was again absent, preparing for her state of the city of the control of the city of the control of the council storing Wolfshiemer is also an interesting aspect of the BCE controvery. The two "fulk from time to time" about various states "break" the major's spokesmas says, but he claims Wolfshiemer "is not a member of her kinchen cabinet." Yet two sources intimately familiar with O. Connor say the relationship is nuch closer than the major's spokesma admiss. "He is one of her principal behind-the-scenes advisors, primarily on land-use issues," one of these sources says of Wolfsheimer.

The other used words such as "guru" in describing Wolfsheimer's relationship with the mayor.

A RECENT TALLY OF CITY COUNCIL MEMBERS attendance conducted by the San Diego Union reveals that Gloria McColl missed more council votes (745) last year than any of her colleagues. But McColl has been present for the wites that could yield her some personal financial gain. In September, the councilwoman supported a resolution that used $1.28 million from the Mid-City 51.28 million from the Mid-City park development fund to purchase additional greenspace for the City Heights Park. That greenspace, located on Highland Avenue, is less than a block from two 44th Street properties owaed by McColl, city records thow. She also nted for a $284,000 parkland

nurchase in 1987 and backed a

McColl owns two nearby parcels, one at 3875-77 Wilson, the other at 3551-65 University And last month she led the And last month she led the council majority in approving a 5'9,000 federally funded program designed to "create new opportunities for the commercial and residential commercial and residential revitalization of City Heights."
The councilwoman owns a total of six properties, including the above-mentioned parcels, that are smack in the middle of City Heights.

Neither McColl nor the city attorney's office was available for comment on the 1987 legal opinion, the attorney urged her to avoid potential conflict-of-interest problems by not participating in council discussions or voting on two city-sponsored projects located near properties she owns in City Heights and farther south near the intersection of Euclid Avenue and Federal Boulevard . . .

THE UNION'S EDITORIAL WRITERS CAME DOWN from the mountain last week with a list of civic commandments for 1989. Some of the editorial's toughest words were aimed at the city's outdated sewage treatment system, and the paper mountd that "this otherwise well-run in seeking waivers from state and federal sewer requirements reatment plant when federal treatment plant when lederal funds would have paid for most of it." How quickly the Union scribes forget. On November 13, 1979, the paper endorsed the waiver as "essential" and embraced it as a sure way to avoid the federal government's "costly and largely pointless requirement to improve the quality of water" dumped into the ocean. Two years later, the Union interpreted the federal government's decision to grant a tentative waiver as "an acknowledgment that the [sewage] system's discharge off Point Loma is harmless — and even beneficial to sea life."

began as soon as I lit the kerosene lamps I got a better look at the shooter. Not quite so tall as my oldest boy and very thin. Heavy eyebrows, dirty-blond hair hanging shaggy below a knitted cap touching the collar of the enbuttone touching the collar of the enbuttoned knee-length khaki cost that flapped as he walked, Jeans. Moccasins. When he walked, he carried the rifle on a strap over his right shoulder. A dark brown bag hung from his belt. Definitely no one I knew.

I took all the children with me to work again. At lunchtime I called my mother, who insisted, "Call the sheriff right now!" I reminded her that his office been less than helpful in August. She agreed, then said, "Well, I'll come to the cabin tonight, and we'll figure something out."
What that might be, I didn't know, but it was a comforting thought.

No shooting that night. We talked late:

Why would anyone shoot and aim not to hit us? To frighten us? Why? We were often gone, and the cabin was easy to break into, so there was no need to scare us away in order to steal anything. Mother, a teacher, took off Wednesday

Mother, a teacher, took off Wednesday and stayed at the cabin with the kids while I went to my office. Someone watched from the shadows up on the hillside for part of the morning. She said that it gave her a creepy feeling, but there had been no shooting.

Saturday morning at 6:05. I drove to th telephone "to report a shooting incident in progress" Dispatcher 40 called Deputy Moore at his home, and at 6:40, was told he would meet me at my gate in ten minutes.

Twenty-five minutes later, Moore arrived. I described the sniper. My impression was that the deputy knew exactly who I was describing, but he said he didn't know anyone in town who fit that description and suggested, "It must be hunters wandering through."

The deputy asked if I had a bullet he could use for evidence. I wondered if he wanted me to hold out my hand and catch one.

Ohe Obe came from Brazil, and its osten-sible aim was a celebration of Brazilian history and culture. This unifying theme was only lackadaisically attended to, however. A reference to exploitation of slaves by the Portuguese colonialists, something about primitive religions, an im-personation of Carmen Miranda with her reademark fruithout heatferes. That was trademark fruitbowl headdress - that was ull. The scattering of cultural information was basically an excuse for a series of energetic song-and-dance numbers, of the sort you might see in a Las Vegas Fullers, but in Fortugense and with a Brazilian best adout, anothing on whillenge the most creat about, nothing to harm, nothing to care about, nothing to whill engine the most created and the series of the all. PACESTEL

Paging A PACIFIC TELESIS COMPANY I I I I I I I I I BY JOHN D'AGOSTINO

Last Thursday's sold-out concert at the Bacchanal by the latest reincarnation of the Byrds was in many ways a revelation. It demonstrated that: (a) a version of the band featuring three of the five originals – Roger McGuinn. David Crosby, and Christon. David Crosby, and Christon. David Crosby, and Christon. On the Control of the Contr their advantage is qualitative and not merely numerical. It also laid to rest any fears that frequent tours by inferior outfits (which have gone by such variations on the band's name as the Firebyrds) might have diluted drawing power.

Furthermore, the show argued that the Byrds' reputetion as a "great studio band that can't play live" should be sealed in a time capsule with other mid-60s memorabilia. But more than anything, it was a reaffirmation that the Byrds' music like all great music — is eternal. Not bad for two hours' work.

Far more than nostalgia, curiosity, or allegiances to any individual musician, it is the Byrds' legendary oeuvre, perhaps coupled with the conviction that this aggregate would be best suited to represe to which we can attribute the popularity of a show that sold out shortly after it was announced in late December. The apparent unflagging interest in the music of the '60s in general, and of the Byrds in particular, has less to do with an aging generation's wistful remembrances than with the gradual acceptance by other generational subgroups of that music's evergreen quality.

That is the key lesson to be learned from both the current college-age audience's near obsession with retro pop and the fact that obsession with retro pop and the fact that the appeal of '60s rock has outlasted the media's trendy prooccupation with it. Music is not milk or prescription medicine, it has no expiration date, and it doesn't lose its potency or inherent worth simply be-ause something in a flashier package comes along to nudge it off the shelf. The success and critical sectain of such contemporary and critical seclaim of such contemporary artists as Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers, R.E.M., and the Bangles might attest to the wisdom of mining the mother lode of Byrds-ish '60s music. But listening to the reconstituted Byrds should have convinced even novitiates that aged musical diamonds are more beautiful and of more lasting value

Carole King's "Goin' Back" (at least in part because it was competing for a slot on the Notorious Byrd Brothers album with his own "Triad"), the ensuing discord exacerbated already strained relations within the band. As the story goes, McGuinn and Hillman drove to Crosby's L. A. home and without leaving their car, informed him that he was being booted from the group. Ironically, it was Crosby who benefitted most from the schism. McGuinn, Hillman drummer Clarke, and several session mus cians completed the musically adventurous Notorious Byrd Brothers, which sold poorly. Soon after the release of 1968's country-concept album Sweetheart of the

Hillman buried the hatchet, but their general dissatisfaction with 1973's "original five" reunion album Byrds (which flopped at the cash register) made future group projects unlikely. I spoke with Hillman a couple of years ago when he brought the Desert Rose Band to the Belly Up Tavern. To my surprise, he expressed an interest in again playing with McGuinn and Crosby but bristled at the mention of Gene Clark, who by then had been touring for severa years with an impostor Byrds. Last year McGuinn, Crosby, and Hillman performed a benefit concert in Los Angeles, and both the absence of rancor and an overall bor temps experience encouraged them to pur

Throughout the early '70s, McGuinn led a series of faux-Byrds outfits that drew little notice and finally settled into a modest solo career (interluded by a 1976 stint with Dylan's Rolling Thunder Revue) that led to his representing the-Rickenbacker guita company, for whom he manned a display booth at last year's National Association of Music Merchants convention in Anaheim Music Merchants convention in Ananeim. Crosby, of course, became a founding member of Crosby, Stills, and Nash (CSN), one of the most beloved and successful groups of all time, and has enjoyed critical and popular success as a soloist and in duct work with Graham Nash.

Track 29, a leftover from much earlier last year, was our official first film of 1989—was (and always will be) but no longer is inasmuch as it already has finished out its one week at the Ken. In it, Nicolas Roeg tears the lid off that popular can of worms labelled Frustrated Housewife, and out labelled Frustrated Housewife, and out comes a span of those pretty-colored joke-shop coiled springs. A regulation Mysterious Stranger arrives in town, all the way from Englend, and thus with tinges of Teddy Boy menace, as well as with the tan-talizing promise of fulfilling at once the rock of Mime. Bovary's fantasy lower and Mime. Ovary's fantasy in — the son she always wanted but never had (or rather momentarily had, but gave up in the Delivery Room in her mid-teens). Is this interloper her real son? Is he real at all? Is he sane? Is she sane? Is the movie any more interesting either way? To be sure, no movie by Nicolas Roeg will be devoid of all interest, visual interest - as evidence the Godzilla-iika destruction of the husband's miniature crain set, which calls to mind the apocalyptic finale of Roeg's Insignificance.

But squinty-eyed satire of the Middle
American lifestyle — the all-lavender exercise ensemble, the satellite dish on the front lawn and the television in every room - does not utilize Roeg's talents at full stretch. It even — wide as that stretch is — may be beyond or beneath those talents entirely. The toy-train convention viewed as a sort of political-rally-cum-revival-meeting shows how remote from the subject he (or his scriptwriter and fellow Brit, Dennis Potter) truly is. And in the end he comes nearer here to a state of total noninterest than he ever has come before.

QUARTER NOTES

ISRAELI DANCERS

The San Diego Foundation for the Performing Arts brought Israel's Batsheva Dance Company to Symphony Hall for two programs, of which I saw the first. This modern dance company originated in 1964, with none less than Martha Graham so its artistic advisor. Graham as its artistic advise and with numerous Graham works in its initial repertoire works in its initial repertoire. Twenty-four years later, if one may judge from the Symphony Hall performance, the company retains nothing of Martha Graham except the extreme physical discipline she imposes upon her dancers. It is not a bad ompany, for these days. But it shares with so much contemporary modern dance the status of shallow entertainment ncapable of touching either the eart or the mind.

The anti-emotionalism and expression of human con in dance must be more or less abstract. But behind even the most conventional and abstract anti-intellectualism is clearly programmatic, reflecting the attitudes of artistic director David Dvir and artistic adviser of dance forms - a nineteenth-century balletic pas de deux, for David Dvri and artistic advisor Robert Cohan. Without Robert Cohan. Without works on the program, by four different choreographers (three of them American), represented human beings as dehumanized, and engaged in movement unconnected with any system of human meaning. Psychological and social experience, belief, passion, conflict, drama, the the world that supplies the spiritual energy for every one of Graban's dances (not to speak was to be found in either the dances or the dancers. It was not merely a manted if dance is shaped by formal considerations, and all Robert Cohan, Withou century balletic pas de deux, to example — there is the concept of human beings as existing in meaningful relationships with each other and with the world. The dancers of a pas de deux embody notions of love, embody notions of love, tenderness, mutual support, erotic self-display, romantic joy. The Batsheva dancers, in contrast repeatedly and consistently embodied the notion of human beings as utomata.

Fight It On The Beaches

I am very concerned about out city. I read the article "Runsway Tijuana Sewage" (November 23) Tijuana Sewage" (November 23) and was extremely discomforted. I am one citizen who will not sit I am one citizen who will not sit back and watch our beaches become infested with sewage. It is important that something is done by us, the people of San Diego, to quickly halt this growing nroblem.

Don't Go Near The Toilets

Regarding the letter "Clarity legins at Home" ("Letters," December 22), written by Carlos de la Parra and Roberto Sánchez. The letter was highly critical of a Reader story by Jeannette De Wyze ("Runaway Tijuana Sewage," November 23). I doubt that De Wyze was directly implying or trying to depict the Mexican people as inept or irresponsible, that the whole horrible Tijuana sewage issue which threatens to close our beaches and porson our citizens unless somebody does something is a problem inherently unique only to Mexico. Jeannette was merely providing her readers with a detailed historical and factual account of the Tijuana sewage problem; i.e., who's to blame and why, that the problem still exists why, that the problem still exists because of bureaucratic irresponsibilities, buck-passing, blame-shifting bureaucrats. What clse is new? All of the particulars brought to light by de la Parra and Sánchez concerning San Diego county's sewage problems made a clean breast of our own inabilities to solve the most serious menace: how to stop this senseless pollution of our beachs? As a surfer who has spent much of the last 25 years riding some of San Diego county's finest waves, I have been witness to an ocean which have more increasing

Reich and Wrong

Regarding Mark Alan Thomas's letter "The Gay Führer" ("Letters," December 8). To claim the number-two man in the Nazi ra-gime was Rudolph Hess when in fact it was Hermann Goering is pretty strange. To further confuse Rudolph Hess further confuse Rudolph Hess with Errat Robin as the leader of the S.B. Brownshirts is far out. Perhaps Mr. Alan should look up Jerome from the "Black on the Street" (Nowember 10) pice and they could share a chackle discussing the Third Reich over a beer or two. Not Really Doubting Thomas I found the letter to the Reader by Mark Alan Thomas ("Letters," December 8) very interesting, and I agree with his sentiments about John Metzger and the "white supremacists." His letter did contain, however, a factual error. In regard to the German Nazis, it is true that Rudolf Hess was the number-two member of the Nazi party in the years before the war, but he was not the founder of the "Brownshirts" that was the "old soldier" Ernest Rochm. It is also true that Rochm, a well-known, hornosexual, was caught in bed with his male adjutant on the morning of June 30, 1934, and that he and many thousands of other persons thought to be averse to Hitler were liquidated in the next few days. This action was was becoming too large and powerful. Naturally, Hitler relied on the argument that he was cleansing the Nazi party of

One of the things that initially tainted my opinion of the group War was the fact that I saw them in one of their first-ever live performances — at the Newport 69 Pop Festival north of L.A. Then they were fronted by Eric Burdon at a time when the former leader of the Animals was some to amendant of softs. former leader of the Animals was prone to arrogant, oafish, sodden behavior that precluded any serious consideration of his music. With their alippery mix of funk, Latin, Jaerz, and rock, the band achieved that contradictory and hard-be-come by dichotory and hard-be-come by dischotory even after they became disassociated from Burdon, I found it difficult to get into their records.

I didn't make any because I feel they set me up to fail. You break them and then you have to deal with feeling guilty. On the deal with feeling guilty. On the other hand, one thing I am other hand, one thing I am going to try to work on is to stop being in a hurry wherever go. I've chosen to stay home from work to raise my daughter Rebecca. She's 20 months old now. In some ways it's more of a challenge than I thought it would be. I put the pressure or myself. Before, when I had an eight-hour-a-day job, I knew exactly what was expected of exactly what was expected of my time. Now, I just get into this mode where I have to do, do, and I want to alow down. It's not that I have many planned activities every day. The committee to bubysiting some and planned activities every day. The committee to bubysiting some and Rebrecca. The routine of having a child this young and trying to plan things for her all day, having the constantly interact with me is exciting, but it can also be litting.
