Ship pays an average of $3600 monthly on urine tests for prospective employees, and the company has chosen a testing lab that uses numerous safeguards to prevent cheating by the applicants.

Before he submits his urine sample, the applicants is taken to a sample, the applicants.

Before he submits his urine sample, the applicant is taken to a private room, where he removes all his clothes under the supervision of a lab assistant; the suspervision of a lab assistant; the assistant tooks for any plastic bags or containers filled with untainted urine that the applicant would tape to his body and later over the took of the contribute in all and court into the contribute in all and the contribute in the contribute in all and the contribute in the contr pour into the container in place of his own urine. Many drug users also know that bleach destroys traces of the illicit chemicals found in urine, so they sometimes pack powdered bleach under their fingernails, then urinate over their fingers while filling the container. The testing lab short-circuits that scam by making the applicant scrub his hands with sop and water while the lab assistant watches. The room in which the applicant fills the container has no facutes, and the toilet water has been colored but to prevent drug users from the container has no facutes and the container during the container during the container when the container during the container has the container during the container than the container when the container during the container when th applicant then hand-carries the cup containing his urine to the lab, seals the tube into which it is transferred, then initials the seal, which prevents him from later

The F-14:

The F-14 Tomcat prototype crashed on its maiden flight December 21, 1970, and ever since then questions about safety have dogged the Navy's frontline fighter/interceptor. Five F-14s, four of them based at Miramar, crashed in a single month last September. The crash of a Miramar-based F-14 in Arizona on January 27 of this in Arizona on January 27 of this year, which killed the pilot and RIO, destroyed the 102nd Tomcat of the 576 built since Grumman started producing the plane in 1971.

After Congressman Jim Bates called for congressional hearings last fall to examine the crashes, he received a letter from H. Lawrence Garrett, undersecretary of the Navy, ostensibly defending the F-14's safety record. "Since fleet tion in 1973, the F-14 crash per 100,000 flying hours," Garrett wrote on October 6. "By comparison, 1988's F-14 safety record has been excellent. Thus far this year, we have a rate of 5.65, a more than one-third improvement over the historical rate." In other words, the Navy did well in 1988 because it only lost five instead of the usual six or eight F-14s.

inued from page 23) Commander Bob Willard, the executive officer of VF-51 who has spent some 2400 hours flying the plane, believes the perception of the F-14 as accident-prone is inaccurate. He says that compared to other high-performance military jets, "we're not losing an inordinate number of aircraft. There are periods of time when our accident rate has been excessive, and we may have to fall back and regroup and determine the reasons why. But historically, the F-14 is on a continually improving trend in terms of accident rates."

So far, no pattern has been recent crashes. In response to a question about the causes of the shaps, VF-51's maintenance officer, Lieutenant Commander Bil Clausen, replied, "The planes are

THE NIGHTS OF IGUANAS

Tijuana's burgeoning nightclub scene will get its biggest jolt of gringo-go to date when Iguanas officially opers on the weekend of May 18. The venue is located in a shopping center, has seating for 750, and boasts a bar and limited-menu restaurant, but its emphasis will be on concerts featuring contemporary recording acts who are at least one step removed from "arena" status. It's no accident that that general description also applies to the Bacchanal in Clairemont Mesa; Iguanas is owned and will be operated by the same people.

Of the Bacchanal's three principals — Robert Noble, Rob Tonkin, and Jeff Gaulton — only

Of the estimated $1.3 million being spent to build the new facil-ity in the Pueblo Amigo shopping center, Gaulton said that $200,000 is earmarked for an elaborate sound system, another $100,000 for lighting, and substantial amounts for the stage, three dressamounts for the stage, three dress-ing rooms, an outside terrace where some bands will play, and opening weekend will feature such artists as Stevie B. Sheila E., Pete Escovedo, Third World, the Wailers, and TNT.

But putrons will get a "sneak preview" of the club on Friday, May 5, and Saturday, May 6. Gaulton said that the Saturday Gaulton said that the Saturday show will feature the Fixx, who will also be at the Bacchanal the following night. But he's not publicly divulging the identity of the Friday hand until April 15. All I can tell you is that the act cur-rently is one of the most con-troversial, semi-"underground" hands in rock.

RATT TALE

Depending on whom you talk to, there could be any number of reasons for the cancellation of a March 9 concert at the Sports Arena that was to have featured headliners Ratt as well as Britiny Fox and Kix. The triple-bid of metal-sish hard rock would seem a natural for metal-mad San Diego, especially because three members of Ratt — singer Stephen Pearcy, guitarist Robbin Crosby, and lead guitarist Warren DeMartini — are from here. But ticket sales lagged, and the show quietly disappeared from the con-cert agenda well before the final promotional push was to have begun.

begun. The cancellation seemed all the more unusual because Ratt's first three albums on the Atlantic Records label sold more than a million copies each; and the newest effort, Reach for the Sky, has a charted single, "Way Cool Jr.," getting plenty of airplay. Opinions differ as to the reasons Opinions differ as to the reasons for the triple-header's poor ad-vance sales and include the suggestion by at least one letter-writing Ratt fan that blame should be placed squarely at the feet of sponsoring radio station KGB-FM for not sufficiently promoting the concert. Mike Keneally's efforts to land a record deal for his band Drop Control instead continue to pro-duce opportunities for the local guitarist himself. A demo tape sent to Miles Copeland — former manager of the defunct Police, founder of I.R.S. Records, and renowned music-biz iconoclast — reaped a recent invitation for Keneally to audition for a band being assembled by Police drum-mer Stewart Copeland (Miles's brother) and former Return to Forever bassist Stanley Clarke. The band, to be called Animal

Logic, had already considered Police guitarist Andy Summers and King Crimson/Bears alumnus Adrian Belew. Another guitarist, Michael Thompson, had passed an earlier tryout but chose instead to tour in support of his own debut album. Keneally jammed with Copeland and Clarke at Hollywood's S.I.R. studios on Monday, April 3, and the duo was favorably impressed. But then Thompson reversed field and decided to join the new groups as "fairly straightforward, very appreading soon."

"fairly straightforward, very ap-pealing pop." Keneally, who last year toured the East Coast and Europe as a member of Frank Zappa's band, took the outcome in stride. "Tim not really interested in becoming a gun-for-hire anyway," he said. "When I learned that Thompson ately called Miles's office to reiterate that my primary interest is in having him consider the is in having him consider the Drop Control tape." QUARTER NOTES

IN CONTROL

As the last of this season's series of recitals, San Diego Opera brought Marilyn Home to the Civic Theatre. Mezzo-soprano Horne has been an indispensable part of the world's operatic scene for some three decades now, a career of rockdecades now, a career of rock-like solidity in which Horne's tike solidity in which Horne's particular qualities of art and voice have, for many opera lovers, come to seem standards of the profession. At last week's recital of art songs (along with a few opera arias), the singer was every inch herself, thoroughly in command of the technique that has been been bellinger for that has been her hallmark for so long.

That technique has much in it to be admired. As always, the tone is firmly and steadily supported; there is not a hint of weakness or wobble. Without any sense of overpowering loudness, the voice nevertheless

The device involves throwing the sound through certain resonating chambers in the face (principally the nose) and at the same time tightening and bearing down on the vocal chords. Unlike some other singers. Home has never needed to use this device in order to achieve power in the lower range — without it, the voice rings out just as incisively. She uses it not out of necessity but as an intentional coloration, for expressive and dramatic purposes. Evidently she likes it a lot, and evidently her audiences over the years have either shared her taste in this regard or have assumed that those notes could not be made in any other way. As for me, I don't like them at all, and their don't like them at all, and their intrusive, willful presence has regularly interfered with my enjoyment of Horne's immense virtues as a singer. Fairly lightly applied, the device leads to a curious glassy sound; with the full strength of the singer's will a year apart. When he was 11 and I was 10, we lived in Key West, Florida. There were west, Florida. Here were several things that happened that I'll never forget. One time, he had a friend pin me down while he forced me to drink a bottle of castor oil. He thought he was helping. I got so incredibly sick that my parents he was neipnig. I got so incredibly sick that my parents included and the sick that was a single sick that was a single sick that was the single sick that was titerally off the ground. Probably the most traumatic thing was the way left to toment me with spides with the single sick that was titerally single sick that was titerally single s

My brother's ten and I'm six. He hits me on the head, changes the channel when I'm trying to watch my program, yells at me. He says just because I'm younger than he is, I get everything. Well, I don't think that there's any truth to that. He calls me names like brat, stupid, dumb dumb, butthole, air biscuit, retard, buthhole, air biscuit, reard dork, and nerd. Me never get along — only when I'm sick, then he tries to be a little bit nicer. He likes to ignore me, he least not my agames. I wish that he'd play with my Barble dolls or play house where I'd pretend I' was the mother and stuff, but or of barnes, or he'd he'd by the little with little with

PICTURE STORY

By the San Diego Historical Society

The handwritten sign on the chalkboard says, "Photos taken instantaneous. In all kinds of weather." Around the turn of the century, these enterprising San Diego photographers set up their tent (probably in Coronado) to help tourists commemorate a trip to the beach with a portrait. Or they could buy a picture postcard for a quarter.

A little worried about taking your car to a "specialist" who has only been in business for a few months? "Do you really want your alarm put in by an "auto detail" shop? Has the price of a good remote control car alarm been out of reach?

Well, think no more... here's your chance to steal a remote control car alarm, before they steal the goodies out of your car. THE AUTOTRONES CAR ALARM STEAL. Until April 30, 1989, you can pick up one of April 30, 1989, you can pick up one of these remote control car alarms for of their list price. o outside switches, no time delays, n
