The whole business seems to be the work of small-time entrepreneurs - kids stealing radios to put in their own cars or in their houses in place of home stero systems. And, as common wisdom has it, the stereos are sold at swap meets, out of the backs of vans, and in Mexico. Buyers are just swerage citizens who want a good deal, legal or not. No one that I talked to seemed to feel there was any large-scale car-stereo underground, which keeps big players out of the game. Maybe, year after year, it's the same 24,000 stereos being stolen, going round and round in a continuous circle of thefts and

The provisional quality, technically, demonstrating the high degree of polish they have reached in recent years as well as what was worth the conductor. But, in a desper sense, there was little real music-making in the Coglade performance or of the Secret's essential meaning — of the Secret is a faccinating matterpiece. But the conductor must bring out all these clements in the music, is the medium of t

Strauss's score of almost (admittedly, not quite) everything that makes it so interesting and strinctive.

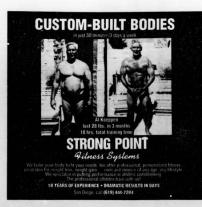

In the concert's econod half, when he took on the role of conductor, Harrell's whole approach seemed transformed. He turned out to be a strong and impassioned interpreter of the Shostakovich, with powerful drive and an adminable tendency to
