WHIRLS COMING TO AN END?

LUCY ANN PATTEN

UCSD Medical Center's Liz Gray is one of four nurses who will be leaving the hospital to work at other facilities. One of the four nurses is to be released in early May, one will leave in late July, and the other two will leave in early September. The decision to release nurses was made by UCSD medical center's medical director, Dr. Peter B. Bier, who said the decision was made due to the hospital's financial situation.

Liz Gray, a nurse at UCSD Medical Center, has decided to leave the hospital and take a position at another facility. Gray has been a nurse at UCSD Medical Center for the past five years and has worked in both the emergency room and in the medical intensive care unit. Gray said that she has decided to leave the hospital due to the hospital's financial situation and the fact that she feels that her skills are not being utilized to their fullest potential at UCSD Medical Center.

Nurses are said to be receiving a 10 percent pay raise in addition to the $2000 bonus for staying at the hospital. The nurses are also said to be guaranteed a job at another hospital if they decide to leave. Gray said that she is looking forward to the new job and is excited to be able to use her skills in a new environment.

UCSD Medical Center has announced that it will be releasing four nurses in total. The decision was made due to the hospital's financial situation. The nurses will be released in May, July, and September. (Photo: Alvin H. Fong)

TURQUOISE CARD GAME

LUCY ANN PATTEN

A new card game, Turquoise, has been introduced to the San Diego area. The game is a variation of the classic game of bridge, with a few changes that make it more interesting and challenging. The game is played by four players, with each player holding 13 cards.

The object of the game is to try to make as many tricks as possible. Each trick is won by the player who plays the highest card of the suit that was led. The player who wins the trick takes all the cards played in that trick and adds them to their hand. The game is won by the player who wins the most tricks.

Turquoise is played in a similar way to bridge, with some variations. The game is played in a clockwise direction, and each player takes a turn leading the first card of each trick. The player who leads the first card of the trick is said to "draw." The trick is then won by the player who plays the highest card of the suit that was led. The player who wins the trick takes all the cards played in that trick and adds them to their hand. The game is won by the player who wins the most tricks.

Turquoise is a fun and challenging game that is perfect for those who enjoy bridge. The game is easy to learn and can be played by people of all ages. The game is available at local card shops and can be ordered online. (Photo: Alvin H. Fong)

Christmas stuff that doesn't plug in, run down, speak in synthesized voices or shoot at things is something of a dinosaur, we know. Nevertheless, year after year, we persist in stocking such items.

Down in accounting, they just shake their heads.

Our finger-powered top costs $1.95. The string-powered model is $2.95, no doubt to cover the added technology.

Our inflatable globe is $4.75. Blowing it up does not qualify as assembly.

The Sunprint Kit costs $2.50, and kids make photographic-type prints using the sun and water.

The Plant Press is made of genuine wood and comes with ten pages of blotter paper for pressing flowers. At $7.95, it could qualify as a "major" gift under the tree.

And, of course, we have magnifying glasses starting at $1.65. Have you shown your son the possibilities of concentrated sunshine? Good grief man, it's a rite of passage!

Finally, we offer that most hoary of amusements, books, to amuse burning questions about thunder, mumps, why ducks don't get wet, outer space, coach, bails, and program trading (just kidding).

In addition, we stock a hour of high-caliber diversions for grown-ups. So maybe you'll come for a toy and, on a whim, buy something for yourself.

Down in accounting, they pray that this will happen. Thank you.

Eucalyptus

But in San Diego, the most valuable benefit of eucalyptus was as an evergreen—its presence could be felt throughout the year, providing a stark contrast to the ever-changing landscape of the region. The trees also served as a natural barrier against wind and dust, helping to protect the soil from erosion. However, over time, the trees became a source of controversy, with some residents complaining about their aggressive behavior.

Since 1900, several eucalyptus species have been introduced to the region, but no one expected the trees to become such a dominant feature of the landscape. By the 1920s, the trees had begun to spread rapidly, overshadowing native plants and threatening the region's biodiversity.

In the late 1920s, the city of San Diego began a campaign to control the spread of eucalyptus, but it was too late. The trees had become too large and too numerous, and their removal would require significant resources and effort.

Over the last few years, an even worse problem has arisen: apparently, the trees are quite capable of killing people.

Over the past few years, a number of incidents involving eucalyptus trees have occurred, including several deaths. In one incident, a large tree fell on a house, causing severe damage and injuries. In another, a tree fell on a power line, causing a power outage that lasted for several hours. In a third incident, a tree fell on a parked car, causing significant damage.

In each case, the problem has been attributed to the trees' size and weight. As the trees grow larger, they become more unstable and are more likely to fall, especially during storms.

Eucalyptus trees are native to Australia, but they have become a common sight in San Diego thanks to their durability and their ability to thrive in harsh conditions. However, their invasive nature has proven to be a detriment to the local ecosystem.

The city of San Diego is now taking steps to control the spread of eucalyptus trees. In 2019, the city announced a new program to remove eucalyptus trees from public spaces and parks. The program includes a comprehensive plan to identify and remove all eucalyptus trees in the city's parks and streets.

The city is also working with homeowners to remove eucalyptus trees from their properties. In 2020, the city issued a warning to homeowners with large eucalyptus trees, advising them to take steps to prevent the trees from falling on their properties.

For More Information

For more information about eucalyptus trees and their impact on the local ecosystem, visit the City of San Diego's website or contact the city's environmental services department. You can also reach out to the Eucalyptus Tree Removal Program for more information.

You're probably being shown a poor quality system if:

1. The salesman has to turn the volume very loud to try to convince you it sounds great.
2. There's a list of 10 add-on options (more winkle-dinkles per dollar).
3. There's an equalizer in the package.
4. The speakers are not made in the U.S.A., Europe or Canada.
5. The speakers are not built to the same standards as the receiver.
6. The salesman tries to show you how much money he's saving you off a list price (that you never knew existed).
7. The salesman wants you to think about it, go to every other store to get the lowest price and then come back so he can beat it by $5 (00. At Sound Company, we believe in fair pricing and competitive pricing of our products and services).

You're buying a great system if:

1. It sounds great at near-field whisper-levels (medium or loud - with rock, pop, mellow or classical).
2. The speakers can produce a baseline shot to be used as a reference.
3. The system's low-end frequency response is excellent.
4. The system's mid-band frequency response is excellent.
5. The system's high-end frequency response is excellent.
6. The system's noise level is below 30 dB.
7. The system's clarity is excellent.
8. The system's overall performance is excellent.
9. The system's price is fair for the performance.
10. The system's warranty is transferable.

Determining an audio component's worthiness is as much in its convenience and usefulness, as in its ability to provide excellent sound. The advanced features on the CT-Seven are a perfect example. The advanced features are:

Remote Volume Control
- The TC-7780 will be the same as the TC-7770, but with a remote control, this feature is of particular interest to you if you don't have a remote control system.
- The TC-7780 will be a little more limited in its use, but it will be a new feature that can be added to your remote control system.

Digital Time Lens
- The TC-7780 will be a little more limited in its use, but it will be a new feature that can be added to your remote control system.
- The TC-7780 will be a little more limited in its use, but it will be a new feature that can be added to your remote control system.
