Jackie: It was January of this year. I was ready to date some new people, but I wanted to try something different.

Richard: A co-worker, in teasing me about not being bold in asking women out, jokingly suggested, "Why don't you try one of the Phone Matches?" So I did.

Jackie: I was hoping to meet someone who wanted to do a few of the things I put in my ad.

Richard: I thought she was describing me.

Jackie: He left this big long message. And another one. I thought, "I've got to call this guy back." Richard: Because of conflicting schedules, we weren't able to meet until two weeks later.

On our first date we saw a double feature Jackie: Actually, we spent the second movie talking in the back of the theater. Richard: Within a few months we decided this was turning into something special.

Jackie: The "Big C" - commitment. Richard: We started talking about marriage, but I hadn't really asked her. She said, "I want you to ask me formally." Jackie: One night he took Brittney and me to Seaport Village. When we got into a horsedrawn carriage, I spotted his guitar case in there.

Richard: We stopped on a pier and I sang a song we all liked, called "The Weaver." Brittney here was singing along with me.

Jackie: When he finished, he got down on one knee and said, "Jackie, will you marry

Richard: And she said. "Yes!" So I pulled out a ring box and started to hand it to her, but hesitated when I noticed it was the one I had gotten for Brittney. Before I could do anything, Jackie had opened it.

Jackie: It was Brittney's. Brittney: Yeah, and I started crying.
