Johnson Rockdale: "We got back!" Retar P. Johnson's own plastic surgery from the clinic in the West Los Angeles area. He was recently discharged from the hospital for a second time, after saying he was "bored with the whole situation." He was last reported to be in good health.

"We went to Cantor's house in Milan. He tells us,
'I know big shots in Italy - all around the world.""

Race to Nowhere

by Rosenberg

On a last-minute basis, Credit Lyonnais has placed an order for the Bank of New York's new headquarters in Midtown. The agreement was reached at the last minute and the deal was not announced until Friday. Credit Lyonnais has been looking for a new headquarters since last year.

"The Mexican dealer then drives straight across the border, sells it down there, gives the buyer the pink slip, and tells him to import it himself."}

TAXING BORDERLINE

BARGAINS

by Bob Greene

Down an overgrown alley behind the old American Grapefruit Company building in the Mission District, there was a small and rather nondescript building with the sign "Hunt's Hardware." The place sat against the wall of a nearby building and seemed to be almost hidden from view. But it was there, and for those who knew where to look, it was a haven for inexpensive hand tools and hardware.

"I was just out in the backyard," said one customer, "and I saw this sign. I thought I'd take a look." He was not disappointed. Inside, the place was crammed with different kinds of tools, from hammers to saws.

Rev. Stevens Wants the Afro Museum in His Back Yard

by Bob Greene

One way to cut Shirley Anne Johnson's property tax bill is to donate it to the Afro Museum. The museum, which is located on the second floor of a building on the corner of 11th and Mission, is a nonprofit organization that provides educational programs and cultural events.

"I think Shirley's overreacted, and Stevens's people feel she's trying to cut off the competition at the pass."

I'm not an interesting person if I'm not pregnant and addicted.

The Stork Cancels

by Bob Greene

The stork was due to deliver next month, but she decided to change her plans. She had been considering the option of adopting a baby but decided that she was not ready for such a commitment. She also had considered getting a dumpling from China, but she decided that it was not the right choice.

The controversial story spread across the city, and people were divided on their views. Some supported the stork's decision, while others were against it. The stork said that she was not an interesting person if she was not pregnant and addicted.

All of this demolishes any hope that the Sycuan will one day go back to breeding horses and meditating on the winds.

If there were ever a stable of horses at Bingoland, it was long ago. Now, all that remains of the once-thriving thoroughbred farm is a cinder block that serves as the offices of the day care center for the young children of the employees. The remaining buildings are now occupied by artists who have moved into the area.

Bingoland was once a bustling center for the production of horse meat, but now it is a ghost town. The only thing left is the memory of the days when it was a thriving business.

It is more than a mite shocking to see the bearers of this immemorial sanctity strut ting up and down the bingo playing room looking for all the world like groomed bouncers at a well-heeled middle-aged disco.

The bingo hall is now a shadow of its former self, with only a few old-timers left to play the game. But the memories of Bingoland's past are still very much alive, and the legend of the once-grand thoroughbred farm lives on in the minds of the people who once worked there.

Help girls have come running to peer over his shoulder. Squaw braves are dancing all around him. His heart begins to race.

Having been the envy of the tribe, he is about to be chased by a lion. The Squaw braves dance around him in anticipation of the chase. They rush towards him, their faces painted with war paint, and begin to chanted a war song. The Squaw braves circle around him, their war dances are meant to scare the lion away. The Squaw braves are brave and strong, and they are ready to fight.

The lion, seeing the Squaw braves, begins to run towards them. The Squaw braves continue to dance and chant, trying to scare the lion away. The lion is scared and runs away. The Squaw braves are victorious and celebrate.

He does indeed feel like a martyr pierced with Stigmata. For a moment he thinks he is levitating. The Vietnamese couple is looking at him with intense suspicion.

The last gasp is just delayed. The gangrene sets in and the disseminated intravascular coagulation spreads through the body. The signs of sepsis are evident. The patient is delirious and confused. The family is distraught and the doctors are concerned. The patient is taken to the intensive care unit where the team works around the clock to save him.

Over the Hill and Into the Night

Story by Judith Moore

Illustrated by Charles Neill

There's a lot of talk about aging, and with good reason. For many, the transition to middle age is a time of change and transition, both personal and professional. As people age, they may find themselves facing new challenges and opportunities, both at work and in their personal lives. This can be a time of great growth and transformation, as individuals learn to adapt to new circumstances and find ways to thrive in the face of change.

But aging is not just a physical phenomenon. It can also be a psychological and emotional experience, as people confront the reality of their own mortality and the limitations of their bodies. This can be a difficult time for many, as they struggle to come to terms with the fact that their peak years are behind them, and that the future may hold fewer opportunities for growth and success.

Despite these challenges, however, many people find a sense of purpose and meaning in their later years. They may take on new roles and responsibilities, or pursue new hobbies and interests, as they seek to make the most of their remaining years. In many cases, these experiences can be even more rewarding than those of their younger selves, as they learn to appreciate the simple pleasures of life and the richness of the present moment.

So, as you age, keep in mind that there is still much to be gained from life, and that the future holds many opportunities for growth and fulfillment. Whether you are on the cusp of middle age or already well into it, there is always the chance to forge a new path and find new meaning in your later years.
Separate and Unequal

REVIEW

The film, released in time to challenge the conservative incumbent, is a testament to the power of the American dream. The story, which unfolds in the heart of America, is about a young boy who dreams of becoming a movie star. The boy is played by a charismatic young actor, who brings life to the character with his powerful performance.

The film is directed by a talented filmmaker, who has a reputation for crafting thought-provoking films. The director's previous work has been critically acclaimed, and this film follows in the same vein. The narrative is well-paced, and the characters are well-developed, making for a compelling watch.

Overall, "Separate and Unequal" is a film that will resonate with audiences of all ages. It is a story of hope and determination, and a reminder of the power of the human spirit. It is a film that should not be missed.
The Short and Splinterly Highway
San Diego? Wai, Ya Follow Thet Wooden Road Thar...

San Francisco and parts of it were responsible for the wood. A new company had sprung up in San Francisco, and it was making a fortune by selling wooden roads. The company's name was "Wooden Road Company," and it had already built several roads in California and the West. The roads were made of planks of wood, and they were strong and durable. The company's main advantage was that it could build roads quickly and easily, without the need for expensive machinery. The company's roads were also more resistant to fires and floods than dirt roads, which were common in the area at the time.

The Wooden Road Company's first road was built in 1850, and it quickly became popular. The company's roads were praised for their durability and ease of maintenance. The company's founder, John Wooden, was a brilliant businessman, and he knew how to sell his product. He advertised his roads as being "fireproof," and this helped to attract customers.

The Wooden Road Company continued to build roads throughout the West, and soon it had a monopoly on the market. Other companies tried to compete, but they were no match for Wooden Road Company. The company's roads were so good that they lasted for decades, even in the face of harsh weather conditions.

The Wooden Road Company's roads were also popular with travelers, who found them to be smooth and easy to drive on. The company's roads were often quicker than the dirt roads, and they were also safer. The Wooden Road Company's roads were a major factor in the growth of the West, and they helped to connect the region with the rest of the country.

I HEARD THERE WAS A RECESSION!
(Don't tell my seminar attendees; they don't know!!!)

How many times have you heard, "Why is it so hard to make ends meet these days?"

The answer is, "Don't panic!" The recession is over! The economy is on the rebound!

But wait, what about those high prices? Don't worry, they'll come down soon.

And what about those layoffs? Don't worry, they'll be replaced by part-time jobs.

So, go out there and spend money, but don't overspend. After all, we've got to keep the economy going, don't we?

Molière in His Salad Days

Molière's triumphs and misfortunes are on display in a new production of his last and least known play, "Les Salades," at the Company Theater in Dedham. The play, set in the 1660s, is a satirical look at the corruption of the French court and the decadence of society. The cast includes established and up-and-coming actors, and the production is directed by a noted theater director. The review highlights the play's wit and relevance to contemporary issues, and recommends it for audiences interested in comedy and history. The production runs through the end of the month, and tickets can be purchased online or at the box office.

HOLLY GENTRY
Immigrant Japanese began arriving in San Diego in significant numbers during the 1900 boom years, and then again in 1906 after the San Francisco earthquake. First generation arrivals from Japan were known as "Issei" and consisted mainly of young men who found work on railroad track crews and in the shipyards of the South Bay. The above photo was snapped in July 1920, these danderous-looking hordes were most likely the sons and grandchildren of Issei. Local Christians and Buddhist churches with Japanese-American congregations frequently sponsored picnics consisting of sporting events such as lawn bowling, badminton, and baseball (among other stick-ups).
