PRESIDENT BILL

he Czech and Slovak Federal Republic was my next stop. I went there to install my new ambassador, replacing a previous president's political appointee. I disdained the practice of appointing cronies, party hacks, or contributors to ambassadorships. In most cases, it was best to appoint was best to appoint career foreign service officers because of their dedication to a long-range, comprehensive foreign policy, not to sta-poreign policy, not to the narrow interests of one president or party. A political appointment gave the impression that the United States dish't take the host country serious!
