In a world flooded with deck shoes, one name always surfaces more than others-Sperry Top-Sider*.

Top-Siders were developed by Paul Sperry to provide a sure grip on slippery, heaving decks. But you don't have to be a sailor to appreciate their classic styling, Active Comfort System'" innersole, oiled-leather uppers and slip-resistant rubber soles. Because for comfort on land or function at sea, no other boat shoe feels or performs quite like a Top-Sider. And it's been that way since 1935. PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

In 1882, there arrived in San Diego a wealthy Texan named Colonel Jacob Shell Taylor who had served as an Indian scott under "Buffalo Bill" Cody and made a fortune running cattle in the Lone Star state. Taylor brought his money with him; in short order, he bught the Stonewall Mine in the Cayamacas near Julian, an 8,846-acre rancho, and a 180-acre site overlooking the Pacific along the railroad right of sway in Del Mart. The Del Mart site was divided into lost that sold for $100 to $600 each, and boasted an elegant hotel modeled after the swanky Hotel Florence in San Diego. Taylor named his centerpiece "Casa Del Mar," and constructed a "natatorium" in 1887 on the beach below the hotel for bathers too timid to venture into the Pacific. The wading pool extended 50 feet out into the breakers, with four-foot-high sides that allowed water to spill in during high tides. Advertisements of the time trumpeted its unique design, noting that it afforded "entire satery from the stingray or stingare, the dread of bathers and open surf bathing..." On January 18, 1890, a kitchen fire burned the Casa Del Mar to the ground in little over two hours. Taylor, hounded by lawsuits, moreb back to Texas. by lawsuits, moved back to Texas.
