The coalition wanted money to soundproof about 35,000 homes beneath the flight path.

Lawsuit Ends, Noise Continues

By Carl Pytlak

The coalition's lawsuit to stop the San Diego International Airport's noise pollution, which ended with a settlement in 1985, has not yet been forgotten. Under the terms of the settlement, the airport promised to reduce noise levels by 200 homes. To date, the coalition has received only about half of the promised funds.

Home Economics at Las Colinas

By Jeanette De Wuyt

Las Colinas residents are looking for ways to save money on their home economics bills. One resident, for example, has found a way to cut her electric bill in half by installing energy-efficient light bulbs in her home.

After Tahl reached death row, San Diego lost interest in his case.

When had what should have been an idyllic childhood as the pumper son of Ronald Reagan and Susan Sarandon turned into a daily nightmare? Did it begin when I was seven years old, or had I started long before that? Or was the real tragedy how I was affected in later life, as an adult still praying for acceptance, still longing for my share of the increasingly raging eyes of the world?

- Michael Reagan, On the Outside Looking In (Scribner, 1990)

Michael Reagan, famous for his public role as a son of Ronald Reagan, was born on May 16, 1970. His parents, Ronald and Sara Reagan, were divorced when he was young, and he was raised by his mother. Reagan has often spoken about his struggles with alcoholism and addiction.

REVIEW

Christopher Plummer — an actor of Greek descent and a man of intellectual depth and piercing intelligence — is a presence on the stage and screen. His performance in "Love, Death and the Gun" is a masterful portrayal of a man who has lost his way and is searching for something to hold onto. Plummer's ability to convey the complexity of his character is a testament to his skill as an actor. The play itself is a powerful exploration of themes such as love, death, and the human condition, and is a must-see for anyone interested in the finer things in life.

Chris: I placed a Phone Matches ad just to see what would happen. I got these calls.

Fran: Chris's ad was basic. I liked that. I located in on the age and habits, and that he had a Christian background.

Chris: What really made the ad for me was discovering we work on the same crew. Fran and people will have lunch, then lunch, I just show up the and picked her up.

Fran: That made it easy for me! I had references before we went out.

Chris: Lunch was informative. We found out we're both from big families, we discussed work and a lot of common things.

Fran: He asked me again about that work, and asked me out to the Buffy Up. I liked to drive since I had just gotten a new car. On the way there, I saw a sheriff's flashing lights behind me regarding to pull over. I had a bad mood, so asked for that one. Later I found out he was

ART

Travels Off the Map

REVIEW

Among the most significant art exhibits in San Diego this month is the "Chaos" show at the American Academy. The American Academy is an exciting, experimental art gallery that not only showcases local talent but also provides a space for emerging artists. The gallery's dedication to offering a platform for diverse perspectives and innovative works is evident in the "Chaos" exhibition. The selection of contemporary art pieces is a testament to the gallery's commitment to fostering creativity and encouraging dialogue.

The gallery's mission is to create a space where artists and viewers can engage in meaningful conversations about art and its role in society. By featuring a variety of works, from abstract to figurative, the gallery aims to challenge traditional notions of what art can be and how it is perceived. The "Chaos" exhibition is a great example of this approach, with pieces that explore themes of disruption, order, and the ever-evolving nature of artistic expression.

The gallery also serves as a hub for education and community engagement. Through workshops, lectures, and other events, it provides opportunities for visitors to learn more about the art world and connect with artists. The American Academy's efforts to make art accessible to a wider audience are commendable and contribute to the vibrant cultural landscape of San Diego. The gallery continues to be a beacon of innovation and creativity, making it an essential destination for art lovers and enthusiasts alike.

For more information about the American Academy and "Chaos," visit their website or drop by to experience the exhibit firsthand. The gallery is open to the public, providing an inviting space to appreciate the power of art in shaping our understanding of the world.

Hell Hath No Fusion

REVIEW

In the late 1960s and early 1970s, when the music scene was ripe for experimentation, Miles Davis was at the forefront of a new wave of jazz fusion. His album, "Bitches Brew," marked a significant shift in the genre, blending elements of free jazz, rock, funk, and soul into a cohesive sound that would influence generations of musicians.

The album's title track, "Bitches Brew," is a bold and innovative piece of music that showcases Davis's ability to push the boundaries of traditional jazz. The track features a fusion of electric and acoustic instruments, including keyboards, bass, and drums, creating a rich, complex soundscape.

This album is not for the faint of heart. It challenges conventional notions of what music can be and invites listeners to explore new sonic territories. For fans of Miles Davis, "Bitches Brew" is a must-listen, and for anyone who appreciates the fusion genre, it is a groundbreaking masterpiece.
