I look across white table linen into steady, more like steely to eyes and ask, How old are you?

Fifty-three. This year is my 25th year in opera.

How did you make the trunsition? Well, I was singing as an amateur in my spare time. Purely classical, I was only interested in classical music. There were anateur companies around town. They would put a show on. They were tey sheen. It was a shobly for them as it was for me, and I got to sing some pretty good roles. It developed a bit from that:

that I met the chip who was running the Australian opera, and he'd actually seen me dos couple of things and said be liked what I'd done and offered me a job without an austition. I lancked it back at the time, thought, I'll wast for snother year. I have the state of the sound of the sound

What sors of terms?
Well, they originally offered me some principal roles and some chonus. I wasn't that keen to sing in the chonus, not because I felt snobblish about it at all but because I thought, "If I'm going to leave a good profession, it's got to be worthwhile in an artistic sense."

And that's how I started. I started the following year. The offer was better because there was no chorus involved and it was all principal ports, small ones. I was happy about that, and I had a couple of good covers, covering big parts. By the end of that first season, I got to sing one really good part.

At this time, late '60s early '70s, was Australia a backwater in opera?

The standard of performance wasn't bad. It's pretty hand to rell, at this distance. Some of them were quite good, some of them were pretty lousy. I think it was probably a bit backward in the quality of production.

What makes a really pleanerable run for you? Things that make it really good are actually the things that we have been. Sometimes, in other places, the amount of time they have for reheaval is not really adequate. There's no real ensemble ed., no real threat that goes through a production. It is woo or three big stars getting up and doing their own thing, like Madan X comes, sings Tosca and does what she's always done. Mr. Y comes and sings and just stands in the middle because he doesn't act, he just sings. Maybe Mr. A comes and does the harinen pert, he might be something of an actor, but he'll liss'd a bit out of place because he's the only one entire. It was gotten to colleagues who have gone to important houses in Europe, and they're had two or three days' reheastal in which to gain instant open. Not very surgifying for reheasal in which to spin instant opers. Not very satisfying them, It's a tesses operation.

This is different, this is the way I like it, and I think the say most fail lake. We've got the time to get a good show together. We have a terrific director. We laxe a good conductor. Measure Midle is a terrific Montrain, and there are not that many of them anound, so that's a pleasure. The production is going well, a stringly authorice around the company and a desire among a stringly authorice around the company and a desire among events or really do satted than the cost better to the Figure, which is a great cost and the cost better to the Figure, which is a great cost and the cost better to the Figure.

But in't there a huge difference in quality between the production composition. It depends how you judge them. The connonseur, the experienced operager would believe that there are three tenors in the world. Domingo, Pravatott, and Carrens. For Mourst, I probably could choose — according to my state, very personal, but according to my state—there are at least 50 Counts in the world I could use and 50 Riguos. I probably have 30 of those, and there are probably as. After 30 out there I could use if I know them, but our path have never crosses.

How would you cast Otello? I would look for an Otello about four years ahead. I know only four people who I would consider hiring. One is Domingo,

Is the assumption that the musicians and singers already know, don't need as much time with the mustres as... No, remember the musero has been down there with the singers all this time, and he has spent a whole day sweding with them on the music, getting the shape of it the way be wants. But from tomortow it becomes the conductor's show, in this company, the way we stranene it, is quite deliberately the stage director doing his work till now, were him, plantly with the conductor. Now the conductor conductor was the conductor to the conductor to the conductor.

Is it different in Europe? Yes, it depends. In many European theaters the major conductor would be me, the general disector. He atands these shouting and being a big drama queen about everything. That's not so in America.

One of the things I ddm't realize was the whole on-the-road aspect of this. All the singers are freedance, encrybody's working eight or sine different cities a pare.

In the world of opers today, the ensemble company that stays together for a save or an number of yours in editarbet pare. A company like that card pay people enough money. IS GIVING MALTS & SHAKES STRAWS

Boy, is this your lucky day! First, cut the I straw off this ad (nothing to it, huh?). I now take the straw to Johnny Rockets (see, we've even listed the address below for you) and we'll let you exchange it for a delicious malt or shake of your choice. No questions asked. Okay, you may get a "How are you today?" but no hard questions, promise.

You don't have to buy anything, you don't have to sing some dumb song. and you don't even have to cluck like a chicken while standing on your head. (although that might be fun to watch). Nothing, honest ... just give us the straw, we'll give you the malt or shake. And, tell you what ... as long as you are getting a free malt or shake, we'll throw I in a new straw ... free for old times sake Teller's cage, San Diego Savings Bank, circa 1894. Forerunner of today's San Diego Trust & Savings, the institution was founded by Easterner Joseph Sefton, Sr. in May of 1889. With San Diego still recling from the effects of a land boom gone bust, Sefton's vision was seen by some as folly. Still, he managed to sell 2,000 shares of capital stock at $100 each to finance the bank's start-up. He also borrowed lobby space from the First National Bank at Fifth Avenue and E Street for the above pictured teller's cage. The arrangement wasn't as odd then as it seems today; national banks, which by law could only engage in commercial business, desired affiliation with "banks of deposit" like San Diego Savings. And Sefton wanted his new bank near San Diego's busiest intersection, which Fifth and E was at the time. San Diego Savings proved to be a strong business; during an 1889 banking panie (fueled by European demands for Joan payments in gold), not one dollar of depositors' funds was lost. First National, on the other hand, closed their doors temporarily, perhaps prompting Sefton to re-think his lobby arrangement. He moved the bank in 1894 to the Keating block at nearby Fifth and E.
