But Getting The Average San Diegan To Munch On Kidneys Is A Hard Sell

lies at the root of human happiness and equilibrium, it is the intestine. To the French of that century, it was axiomatic that the English and the Americans, those troubling delinquent Saxons who were so good at railways and telegraphs but so dismal at anything touching the refinements of pleasure, should have been gastronomic barbarians. They had no cultivation or appreciation of the intestine. And a culture that ignored the great digestive cycle that begins with the taste buds and ends with peristalsis could never — to Srillas-Savarin — be anything but antediluvian. The Anglos might have invented telephones and skyscrapers, they might be credited with the creation of the sandwich and Le Worcester sauce, but their palates, their noses. were the sensual equipment of blue-faced Goths. Brown to Announce

Fourth-Party Candidacy

Whether or not he wins the California prinary next Tuesday, insiders say former California governor Edmund G. Brown, Jr. will make a fourth-party run for president in the fall. With Perot in the race, all fall. With Perot in the race, all for the Brown campaign.

An informal poll of San Diegans suggests that a Brown

It was the 1930s, and San Diego, with major canneries like Chicken of the Sea and the Van Camp Sea Food Cempany shouldering each other along her waterfront, rightfully bosated of being the "Tuna Capital of the World". Above, trics of tuna fishermen abound the bait boat Queen Mary work in an aquatic ballet known as "three-pole" fishing; after chumming an area of ocean with various bait fish to attract the yellow fin tuna, the eme would lower squid lures into the water connected to a central line which in turn was connected to each of three bamboo poles. When the fish took the lure, all three men would heave on their poles in unison and fling the tuna into the racks behind them. San Diego's tuna clippers operated from the west coast of Canada all the way down to the fishing banks off South America. Albacore tuna piled the waters from the tjo of Bajis Mexico north to Canada; yellow fin or skipjack grounds stretched from San Diego down to Ecuador. Today, the local tuna industry has virtually died out, a victim of dwindling catches and strong environmental opposition to modern "purse" seining methods. ong environmental opposition to modern "purse" seining methods.
