Tons Of Pun

In his art lecture to Adam Par-frey ("Letters," August 6), Robert Kellogg overlooked a key detail of the Michael Graves-designed Aventine complex: The Hyatt is not a tombition, but a resolute. complex: The Hyatt is not a tombstone, but a gravestone. Thus Kellogg missed a fine opportunity to note that San Diego is the proud possessor of what is possibly the world's most colossal and costly pun.

"They depict my body when I got outra the hospital." Ferguson replied, He testified that he still felt fear. "I take someone with me when I go someplace. I got to watch out."

Ferguson answered a few more questions. He had escaped to the master ser-geant's quarters. He couldn't recall which stab wounds were inflicted by the screwdriver and which by the knife.

"You may return to your duties, Fireman Ferguson," the judge announced. Ferguson was red-faced. By the end of his testimony, his voice had faltered on every word.

The defense called a pathologist to the stand. They gave him the photographs of Ferguson. "Most of the wounds are similar," testified the doctor. "They are small and rectangular, with squared-

He and his family moved into a new tract house. It was what they could afford. It was adequate:

For Max, to have been Jewish was to be a victim. Worse, it was to be a victim who was ignorant of the identity that put him at risk.

The Chabad House where Max went was in a neighborhood close to where he taught. The head quarters of the Self Realization Fellowship had feen a lovely house surrounded by lovely gardens. The Lubasitchers had laken over an old framentry house. They declared it up that there was nothing lovely about it. Inside were Formica tables, folding chairs, polystyrene cups, bad coffee, and cigarette some. Rabbi Rifikin turned out to be a pulse-kinned black-bearded 20-year- (notininated on page 20) old who smoked Larks. Max didn't know if it was Rifkin's youth or his brand of cigarettes that irked him the most. As soon as Max shook Rifkin's hand, he wanted to leave. "I knew I was in the wrong place again," he said.

They sat down at an old kitchen table. Max knew that the Lubavitchers were led by a holy man, a Grand Rabbi, who traced descent to a disciple of a great and pious soul known as the Bual Shem Tov — the Master of the Good Name. Two hundred years before the Holocaust, the Batal Shom had spoken with God and worked wonders in the Lewish villages of Poland. The wonders in the Lewish villages of Poland. The Batal Shom had preached direct, ecstatic union with the King of the Universe. He had drawn followers and disciples to him: those disciples had had disciples; one generation to the next, they had formed themselves and sustice, prious and repirectured themselves as objective, prious and repirectors. "The Name" was how Orthodox Jews.—and all Hasidic Jews were Orthodox—customarily referred to God. The Orthodox believed God had many names; some could be said without sacrilege, but most were forbidden. When Max first lege, but most were forbidden. When Max first learned this, the thought the custom was a sign of respect. Years later, after he read about Jewish mysteism, he discovered the prohibition was much more than that: the names of God were formulas of power, equivalent to equations that both described and incorporated vast amounts of energy. "You say the wrong name in the wrong place at the wrong time," joked Max, "and you burn down the world."

As Max watched, Rifkin mwound the leather straps from each box. As he dal, he chanted a

In America, there are, roughly, three varieties of Judaism: Ort-thedos, Conservative, and Reform, each more or leas observant than the other. For example: Re-form congregations pray mostly in English: Con-form congregations pray mostly in English: Conorder congregations pray mostly in English: Con-servative congregations pray more often in Hebrew servative congregations pray more often in Hebrew than in English, and, although they celebrate the Sabbath from sundown Friday to sundown Satur-day, and although they read a "portion of the week". The Ornicoxix of believe that and conduct themselves accordingly: as Rabbis fifthin told Max, there are, in fact, 613 commandments. They form a fence that separates ritually observant Jews from everyone else. The Ornhodox are happy to live behind that wall. Max wasn't so sure. Instead, he paid an annual fee and joined a Conservative congregation.

Max hired a tutor to teach him to read Hebrew Max fired a tutor to teach him to read Hebrew.

Once he learned, he studied the grayers and rituals of the daily morning and afternoon services. Seventy years after the birth of Jesus, the Romans destroyed Jerusalem. More than one million people died; 100,000 were sold as slaves. The Second Temple, built by Herod, was obliterated. All except what is now called the Western Wall. The services that Max studied were written to replace the prayers and sacrifices that priests had once performed, morning, afternoon, and evening, in the Temple

"Return' implies remorse, it implies regret and renunciation, a movement from an immoral or inauthentic way of being to an active state of observance and integrity.

Modern American Jews have made a variety of returns — from a variety of predicaments to a va-nety of destinations: on the streets of New York the Lubar/tchers have operated Witnebago campers that park, set up loudspeakers, and troll for lost Jewish souls like evangelicals running soup kitchens. Not just in San Diego, but adjacent to university campuser across the United States, the Lubavitchers have opened Chabad Houses that welcome college students in the midst of identity crises. That Max walked into one only proves that professors can lose and find themselves as easily as students. In Tarael,

The Lubavitchers and the Block of the Paithful have attracted their share of returnes, but there is a mass of American Jews — not deeperate enough to desperate enough to believe in miracle rabbis or zealous enough to settle in biblical homelands — who have abandoned main-stream, moderate, mid-dle-of-the-road Jewish congregations and re-turned, as Max did, to Orthodox synagogues "that didn't cut corners," run by rabbis who are also teachers. In New York, Lincoln Square Synagogue on the Upper West Side is one such place. It has 1300 members, half of them young, college-educated singles, eager to learn about their heritage. At last count, San Diego's Adat Yeshurun had only 120 families, but many of them are young, and all long for something more than sermons about American foreign policy.

As a member of a large, well-established conservative congregation, Max had been so bored he'd dreamed of throwing himself through a window. As a boy in New York, he'd gone to afternoon thebrew schools so educationally bankrupt that when, at the age of 13, he'd actually refused to be bar mitzvahed, his father had agreed with him. "He thought," said Max, "that my saying 'no' at least

The failure of American Jewish ele-mentary education, the transformation of reli-gion in America from a transcendental to a all together," he said. enterprise — all this may have drawn Max, along with thousands of others, to make a "return." On the other side were rabbinical scholars, led by a Lithus-nian sage so clear-minded and rigorous that, to keep himself alert while he studied, he would im-merse his feet in ice water. The scholars and rabmerse his feet in ice water. The scholars and rab-his who were his disciples believed the way to God was knowledge and obedience based on study. During the worst of the conflict, each side burnt the other's books and excommonicated the other's fol-lowers. The Hasids believed the rabbis to be arid members of a spiritually bankrupt establishment members of a spiritually bankrupt establishment, the rabbis thought the Hasids were ignorant and de-luded boors. No peace was ever declared between the two sides, but time and world history distracted them from each other. Max had no idea that the Lubavitchers he even-tually abandoned were one of the more intellectual of the Hasidic seets. Nor did he know, when he fi-

The Talmud is a massive and intricate compendium, a multi-volume masterpiece, the result of an intellectual, legal, rhetorical, literary, moral, ethical, speculative gat, medwat, intent, moral, entired, spectuative profoundly religious — enterprise, carried on, collectively, by generation after generation of scholars over a period of 700 years, ending in 500 A.D. Today, there are biblical scholars, lewish and mon-kewish, who argue, based on internal evidence, that the Torah, the Five Books of Mosse, was written.

down is known as the Onal Law. This he passed on by word of mouth. Throughout the history of the Jewish people, the Oral Law was never written down until 200 years after the birth of Jesus. It was written down because of a series of disasters. After the Romans destroyed the Second Temple, a few scholars survived; these the Romans destroyed the Second Temple, a few scholars survived; these the Romans destained in a princip camp; it was those scholars, detained in a princip camp; it was those scholars for the active of the Temple and the scholars of the Control of the Temple camp; the scholars of the Control of the Temple flower and joined the Control value of the Temple of the Tem scholars in the camp, were rabbis, men who were o function as both teachers and spiritual leader to tunction as both treatners and spiritual readers. No matter if the Temple and its priests were de-stroyed: the Torah and its teachers remained. Sixty years after the Romans burned Jerusalem, the Jews of Palestine rebelled again. The externi-nations and confiscations that followed were more thorough than before. It was after all this that scholars, anticipating worse to come, began the effort to write down the Oral Law. The result was called the Mishnah. Destruction and rebellion had scat-tered Jews throughout the Middle East and the Mediterranean world. The Mishnah was written Mediterranean world. The Mishnah was written for the same reason that Mose, an infant, was cast adritt on the Nile: do that or nothing would survive. The Mishnah was mean to serve as both a codex and a reference book, a collection of legal decisions and opinions about the meaning of those decisions and opinions about the meaning of those decisions. Organized in synagogues, gathered in decademies, Ewes studied the Torah and discussed it; studied the Mishnah and debated it. Debated it but because, in exile, Mishnah and Torah togethe defined their lives, made up their lives, identified them as a people set apart, bound in a covenant with God.

Many of these debates were carried on in academies in what is now Iraq; others took place in academies in what is now Israel. All such enlusive, self-reflexive, and free associative. Language was treated as if it were tangible; ideas were treated as if they were living things. Three hun-dred years after the debates began, they were writ-ten down. Their ebb and flow, call and query, challenge and response. challenge and response were compiled and com-pressed. The result was the Talmud.

At the center of the Talmud is the Oral Law of the Mishnah; clustered around it are the thought, and arguments, texts and subcass it provided. Generation after generation of scholars—rabeboolars—around and Hasidic—have read the Tahmud as it was created—not in a solitary way, but collectively, in active groups that reconstitute the debates as they such that the solitary way, but collectively in a citive groups that reconstitute the debates as they such that the solitary way.

active groups that reconstitute the debates as they study them, revivify them as they analyze them. The minds and voices of the Talmad are those of men. All the sages were men; the scholars who followed them were men; until very recently, ex-ery student and teacher of the Talmad was a man. ery student and teacher of the Latmid was a man By law, women were exempt from such study. Not forbidden but exempt. Just as, by law, they were exempt from obeying most of the commandments that would have required them to perform acts ex-actly on time. Acts like praying three times a day actly on time. Acts like praying three times a day or reading from the Torath three times a week. Many reasons have been given for such exemptions: a woman's primary obligation to the family, the periodic ticking of her own biologic clock. No material to the reason, the sages agreed acts that resulted the transmission, the sages agreed acts that resulted to the reason, the sages agreed acts that resulted to the reason, who was a comparable to the reason, the sages agreed ever the a robot that did not. The covernment of the cover wasn't obliged to do.

The practical result of this was that when Max joined Adat Yeshurun, he joined the religious equivalent of a men's club. The gauze curtain that ran aieu of a mehr seun. Fine gauze curtain that rail down the middle of the sanctuary separated men from women; exemptions from the law separated women from the scrolls of the Torah. Three days a week, it was the men who opened the ark re-moved the Torah, carried it in their arms, unrolled it, and read from it. It was the men — elevated by their obligations — who prayed the loudest, the most fervently, the most demonstratively. And of ter they prayed, every morning of every day, it was the men who — if they could — stayed to study the Talmud together.

Once, not that long ago. Max had played sports and been a member of a team — a basketbull team that had played for his college, the City College of New York, For fore years, playing on that team had defined Max's life. He had gone to classes, written papers, taken tests — all that had been less interpretable to the propers, taken tests — all that had been less into the papers, taken tests — all that had been less into the papers, taken tests — all that had been less into the papers, taken tests — all that had been less into the papers and the paper had been less into the papers and the papers of th

Every weekday, a group of them came to the sanctuary to form a mirrow, a group of ten, the minimum number needed to say the prayers and conduct a service in its entirely. On Saturday mornings, on the Sabbath, more came, dressed in their best, some in wonderfully studied suits, buttoned low, fedoras on their heads, prayer shawls draped across their shoulders, cape of fine white toned low, records on their neads, prayer shawis draped across their shoulders, capes of fine white wool or linen, broadly banded in black, trimmed with fringes, the entire garment called a tallist that, like tefillin, was a sign of the covenant between the man who wore it and God. "We come dressed like this," said one, "because we are in the presence of a King. The King of the Universe." Max

The man who led them, the rabbi Max had first seen, big as a bear, draped in a prayer shawl, had a name that fit his responsibilities: Wohlgelenter. The name was so difficult to pronounce and so intimidating, and he himself was so eager and engaging, that he asked those who know him to call him "Rabb Jeff." For a rabbe Jeff." Por a rab

The line of revelation continued through Wohlgelenter's great-grandfather, a disciple of a Hasid whose followers were known as illustrious Torah scholars. True to that tradition, Wohlgelremer's great-grandfather studied the Torah's "white fire on black" and wrote his own learned but mys-tical commentary on the text. No one succeeded him when he died. Wohlgelernter wanted to teach. He had always wanted to be a rabbi. In search of a mentor, he found one. The man was a rabbi named Yisoche Frand. What Frand taught was important, but even more important was how he taught it. In the Yeshiva, there were two kinds of Talmud study. Both took apart the text as if it were a clock; the theoretical group did it to find out how the clock worked; the practical group did it to find out the time. The theoreticians delighted in argument and anomaly. If, in the text, three rabbis argued and one dissented, they spent their time with the dissenter. At their worst, they were nit-pickers. At their best, they were brilliant logisticians. The practitioners didn't care for such refirements, if three titioners diaft care for sake retrievent. if titizer arbeits argued and one dissented, they not sold the disagreemen but attended to the migrify the total designeemen but attended to the migrify. Frand was a man in his prime, furiously in love with learning. Intense, warm-hearted, generous, and expressive, Frand taught by example. Knowledge, erudition,

Mind wasn't separate from heart: heart served mind, inspired it, drove would switch from it to greater insight Hebrew to Aramaic greater attention, more ardent and thorough inardent and thorough in-quiry. He'd bought and sold trucks, big ones and little ones, cherry pickers and step vans, all the delivery trucks of the Daily Macks, GMs, and International Harvesters. He used to drive a gigantic wrecker and hand old ones back to his yard like a

He was a man given to rages and explosive outbursts, but he was so honest and depend ble in business that the on-Jews he knew icknamed him "The nicknamed him "The Rabbi." By birth, he Levi, a tribe of scribes knew enough Hebrev to follow a service, but he never set foot in a synagogue in his adult life. When he died, Max went to New York and spoke at his funeral "If God's Seal is Truth." Max said.

"My father will fit in just fine." When Max came back home, he brought his father's cap with him.
He began to wear in when he prayed.
Jewish law requires a son to pray for his parents for 11 months after their deaths. The prayer he says is called the Kuddish. It occurs twice in every service, morning, afternoon, and evening. Although mourners say it, it makes no reference to death or mourners say it, it makes no reference to death or the dead. Instead it is an adulation, the words more alliterated in Hebrew than in English, said rapidly altiterated in February in English, sale rapidly like the ringing of a bed: "Blessed, praised, glori-fied, exalted, extelled, mighty, upraised, and lauded be the Name of the Holy One, Blessed is He, beyond any blessing and sin, praise and consolation that are uttered in the world...."

For 11 months every morning. Max went to services and, when the moment came, he stood and recited the Kaddish. No doubt he would have gone anyway, but saying Kaddish bound him to a routine that made him think of his father while routine that made that think of his father while it tied him more tightly to a liturgy that was itself an archeology of his religion. There were psalms of praise first sung by King David and declarations of praise inst saing by Joshus and occurations of faith first made by Joshus when he crossed into the Promised Land. There were recollections of Abraham and Isaac and retellings of Israel and Egypt. There were summaries of offerings and sac-nifices from the days of the Temple and prayers written to replace them after the Jews returned from captivity in Babylon. In the middle and at the end of it all, Max rose and said the Kaddish, but never did he say it alone; as he spoke, all the men responded — in praise of God, in memory of their own dead, in anticipation of their own grief. Every day, at the same moment, Max remembered his

There were reasons, though, why someone might be unable to fulfill the requirement. The text listed them: he or she might have had a nocturnal emission, seminal or venereal, and so be rendered emission, Seminai or venerea, and so or choosers unclean. Or a woman might be menstrating or a man might have had intercourse with a menstruating woman, or the person might have bean a leger or the person might have had contact with a corpse. The coincidental arrival of my tax refund enabled me to orroced.

I keep a 14-foot Laser sailboat on the Reep at 14-foot Laser sailboat on the beach below the Coronado Municipal Golf Course. On Wednesday morning, May 27, 1 dragged my lired ass down to the beach and prepared for a voyage of epic proportion. I carefully rigged my boat and loaded the cockpit with gear and provisions

It was a labonous process. Ballast trim is critical in such a tender craft, and the Laser cockpit is little more than a footbath. Despite epeated attempts I could not fit everything n, so I stowed the lightest gear in a water proof bag, which I subsequently lashed to the mast. Securing all to my satisfaction, I set sail at noon for the mouth of the harbor. The sky was overcast, and the air temperature was pleasantly cool. A slack tide created minimal surface chop, and o boat slipped quietly down the bay. The wind was south-southwesterly, gradually building to ten knots. This worried me slightly, if the wind held in this quarter, I would be unable to reach my destination on schedule and would be forced to abort my voyage. But it soon veered, becoming west-southwesterly by the time I reached the tip of Point Loma. Time: 1400. Six hours of daylight left. I set a compass course for Las Islas de los Coronados, the Coronado Islands, 15 miles south-southwest of San Diego, about 7 miles offshore at the northern end of the Baja peninsula. My two-dieg mission, to land on South Island, establish camp, explore the island, and burn at tart on the summar. South Island is the south of the summar of the south Island is the south mission and largest of the four islands in the group. Two miles long and half a mile wide, grow Island, and Middle Pock compose the re-mainder of the group. small bay known as Smugglers' Cove. This was my immediate goal. Indeed, I was a smuggler myself, carrying a loaded pistol and one marijuana oigarete across the international border into Mexican waters. To any who question the wisdom of this action, I reveal the extent of my preparation. The weed was in a weighted, waterproof carrisler, ready to be jettisoned at thrust through an inspection hatch in the deck and be hidden well out of reach under blocks of foan.

After six and a half hours and nearly twenty miles of continuous sailing, I had arrived on South Island.

South Island, less than a mile from my des-South Island, less than a mile from my des-tination. I experienced a dramatic loss of speed. The steep slopes of South Island cre-ate a large wind shadow as they rise pre-cipitously from the sea. I could make out the entrance to the cove, and I could see two or three apparently deserted buildings on the three steeps of the steep of the steep of the steep easilem side. crest of the small point that forms the cove's eastern side. I spent the next hour working my way toward the inlet.

Half a mile offshore, I saw a baby seal floating on the surface. The top of its head was bare, a circular patch of bone gleaming whitely through the firinging fur. It had been scaled by a propeller. It looked as if it had been scaled by a propeller and day looked to reserve the way and the state of the search of the state of the search of the state of the search of the sea was surrounded by inhospitable rocks swept continually by a strong tidal surge. Though possible, a landing would have been difficult, and I didn't care to risk the damage to rugged beauty of my surroundings. Deep in the recesses of the cove, a fantastic rock the recesses of the cove, a fantastic rock spire rose from the water, an island within an island. At the base of a high cliff on the cove's western side, the mouth of a large cave yawned in eerie silence. Across the inlet, on the eastern point, a well-worn trail led from the eastern joint, a well-worn trail led from the now invisible buildings on the crest to a cluster of shotgun shacks down by the wa-ter's edge. A battered skiff rode at a lonely mooring buoy a short distance from these makeshift wooden structures. I heard a stone clatter on the trail above:

looking up. I saw a solitary Mexican rambling down the trail toward the shacks. Stowing my weapon out of sight, I sailed across the cove to meet him. As I neared the shore, I could make out a rude cement stairway descending into the sea from the shack nearest to the stater. This is often the shack nearest to the water. This was the "landing" mentioned in the books, these miserable cement steps

Rounding to, I clambered over the side and stood on the lowest step, a narrow rectangle of cement submerged 18 inches.

This was my landfall. After six and a half hours and nearly 20 miles of continuous sailing. I had arrived on South Island.

Standing in knee-deep water and fend-ing my boat off the rocks to either side, I unbuckled my life yest as the May antong in whee-deep water and terming my boat off the rocks to either side, I unbuckled my life vest as the Mexican approached. His expression was mellow, he seemed unperturbed by a solo Laser sailor appearing on the landing, a sailor wearing only shorts and vest under gray and for-bidding skies. I hailed him when he came within polite speaking distance. "Hola ¿Esta una playa aqui?" Nope. No beach.

Wait, what is he saying?

There's a beach on one of the other islands. That's a beach on one of the other islands. That's a comforting thought, with no wind and just over an hour of daylight left. I changed tacks. "¿Vives aqui?" Yep, ne lives here.

"Soy un marinero de San Diego. El viaje en barco usa todo el dia: Necesito dormir aqui por la noche." My grammar may not have been perfect.

but he seemed to understand my request, and he nodded his assent.

"¿Hay otras personas en esta isla?" "Ah, si "

Art, si.
He turned back up the trail and rambled out of sight. I waited, and soon he returned with two other men. I quickly rummaged through the cockpit, extracted a small wa-terproof bag, and turned to greet the

We discussed the relative ments of one or two suspicious rock shelves across the cove. These were slippery with seaweed and obviously dangerous. But I was rapidly running out of options. If I didn't secure my boat within the next 45 minutes, I would be standing on that miserable cement step all night.

Then I saw the battered skiff riding just offshore. Could I possibly tie my boat to its stern? With much discussion and gesticulation, the Mexicans agreed to this plan.

out the fat spleef and burned it as hundreds of sea birds circled above. Then I sat down and contemplated the magnificent scenery around me.

I thought of the people who have visited Los Coronados since Cabrillo first sighted the islands in September 1542. I thought of the islands in September 1542. I thought of the early explorers, the seal hunlers, the run runners, the gambiers, sightseers, fisher-men, and naturalists... How many had stood on this summit? How many had admired this wonderful panoramic view? How many had listened to Mozart as they smoked the killer ganya?

Presently I stood and stretched, and then I sighted the flock of wild sheep foraging several hundred feet below on the western slope. There were 10 or 12 sheep in the flock, all very shaggy. I watched them for a moment, and then I turned to the north.

I studied the island from this perspective as I pounded my last smoothie. The ridge wound northward in a sinuous curve like the back of some huge dinosaur.

I returned to Smugglers' Cove via a faint trail that skirted the eastern side of the central peak. Along this trail I found evidence of geologic activity; sharp folds and faults re-vealed various rock strata and a bed of con-glomerate yielded some fine samples. I threw a few specimens into my bag and continued on my way.

The trail petered out before I reached the ne trail pieted out detore i reachet me settlement, and I was forced to bushwhack some 400 meters through the scrub. I had covered half this distance when I detected motion on the slope above. Looking up. I saw several burros awkwardly bounding away through the waist-high vegetation.

I arrived at the landing in time to see Armando and the others unloading the supply skiff. Several bags of groceries and a number of water jugs were hoisted out of the boat and distributed among the men, who promptly disappeared up the trail with liber burdens. The unloading was finished, and the skiff pulled away from the landing. Retrieving my boat from its mooring. I prepared to embark upon my return voyage.

Since my return, many people have asked me why I made this pilgrimage to the summit of South Island. Why should leven bother to explain my reasons to them? If I had to give an answer, and I usually don't, I would keep it simple and straightforward. No wankers. No trash. No billheads to keep it simple and straightforward. No wankers. No trash. Victim Statement: Stephen E. told me the following: He was driving his car slowly e/b 4200 Nordica. He saw the suspect, later identified as David L., standing on the sidewalk with another Hispanic male. L. walked into the street and tried to make E. stop his vehicle. E. drove around him and pulled into a relatives driveway. L. followed him up the driveway and said "Gimme a ride" E. said no and got out of the car. L. pulled out a knife and told E. "If ou don't give me a ride I'm gonna stick you in the neck." L. stepped to-wards E. so he hurried through a gate and started for the house, L. put his knife against the tire of E. car and said "Since you won't give me a ride I'll pop it." E. ran into the house and told his grandmother what was happening. Just then some other relatives of E. came home and they confronted L. L. started walking away and said "I thought you As L. was walking away he tried to take the bicycle of some guy who lives nearby named "Rob". "Rob" was able to get away from L. and left the area.

Investigation: After talking to tephen and his grandmother, we decided to drive them around the neighborhood to look for the suspect. While driving north on 43rd St. one block away from the scene, Stephen spotted the suspect walking ough a store parking lot. Stephe pointed out the suspect to both my-self and Officer Behrendt, Officer Behrendt pulled into the lot and stopped.

Believing the suspect to be armed with a knife, I immediately exited my police vehicle and drew my weapon (gun). I pointed my weapon at the suspect who was la identified as Mr. David L. Officer Behrendt radioed for additional cover units, then also exited his po-Mr. L. was told to stop and put lice vehicle with his gun drawn at L. his hands up. Both Officer Behrendt and myself told L. to do this several times. L. was slow to comply. He would briefly place his hands them again. He kept saving that he didn't do anything and he didn't want to deal with the police. L. was carrying a forty ounce beer in his right hand and nothing appeared to be in his left. L. was wearing a blue iacket which he had pulled up over his shoulders.

L. continued to obey then disobey our orders to raise his hands. I then told him to put his beer down on my patrol car. He took his jacket and he complied.

After numerous orders from Officer Behrendt and myself we eventually got L. to put his hands up and face away from us. I told him to drop down to his knees. L. dropped to only one knee and looked as if he was in a ready position to quickly get back up. I told L. several times again, "Keep your hands up and put your other knee to the ground. L.

refused to comply.

Officer Behrendt still had his ser vice weapon drawn at L. I put my weapon back in my hoister and drew my police nunchaku or my O.P.N.'s. I continued to order L. to both knees. He refused. At one point L. dropped his arms to his OPN's to strike L. I struck him twice. Once around the area of his right shoulder and again on his right arm. L. immediately fell down to the ground after my second blow. I or-dered him to place his hands behind his head. He complied. Other offi-cers arrived and we handcuffed L. L. was then placed in maximum restraint by Officers Behrendt and

Pine (#4458). Officer Behrendt found L.'s knife hidden in the sleeve of the jacket he was wearing. It was a chrome folding knife with about a five inch blade. The knife was in the unfolded or ready position when Behrendt found it

We also received two other calls for disturbances related to Mr. L. We drove to So. 42nd St. where I. identified Mr. L. as the suspect who tried to steal a bicycle from a relative of thiers. When L. was confronted by the victim and his family board and swung it at one of the family members. He also threw a large rock at another family

Officers Investigation: The crime scene is a two story building occupied by several offices, independer of each other. The suspect entered the building and went to the office of Wenrick and Associates and proceeded to help himself to a cup of coffer from an open table. Z. and W. confronted the suspect who asked them for the bathroom key. Z. and W. told the suspect the bathroom was occupied and to wait out side. The suspect exited their office. The suspect went to G.'s office, also on the second floor.

Victims Statement: G. told me; I was in my office with a client and someone knocked on the door. When I opened the door a man was standing in the doorway. He told me he wanted the key to the bath-room. I told him no. He kept insisting on the key, I was afraid of him so I gave him the key. When he went to the bathroom my client and I went downstairs. He came down and got right in my face. He said he had me backed up to a wall and was about six inches from my face with his face, he told me, I won't be as nice the next time I come, walls will be broken. I was really afraid of him. I tried to tell him he could get lithium at the Gifford Clinic or C.M.H. He said he has been there and won't ever go back. I gave him $8.00 to get rid of him because I was o afraid of him. After I gave him the $8.00 he said he needed bus fare Katie from downstairs gave him a $1.00 and he was leaving. My client then gave him $20.00. Then he left known if G.'s client gave the suspect $20.00 out of fear or out of compassion.

jeilant readers may recall an article published in these pages last fall. It was a story about used can mind-enchanting hubris.

I still remember, precisely, making a left off Orange Avenue in National City and glimpsing, for the first stime, that elegant Mercedes-Benz. At first glance, the vehicle presented a particularly manaly squat, summing itself on smooth asphati

I drove off enraptured, feeling the dignity of ownership we discriminating few acquire when we first captain a luxury automobile.

Next morning the Benz began to teach me about life as it is lived. Before my lessons were over, the Benz would require a new oil pump, new shocks, new power brakes, completely rebuilt

Can hear the trans-mission work-work-work, grinding its way from first to second, then holding onto second until hitting 45, 50 mph, then slamming into third, and then lugging, chugging, wheezing, heaving again. The sounds are ugly, like watching an old man shriveled on a hospital bed drowning in his own spittle and saliva and droot. Christ, will this ride ever end?

We made it! Thank God! I get out, drenched in nervous sweat. The man hands me keys, says he thought about buying it because he buys and sells Mercedes occasionally, knows something about cars, then stops in mid-sentence, reaches out, shakes my hand, tells me he's very sorry.

I return to the apartment, shuffling along with a pronounced stoop.
"Hello."

"Hello."
"About the Mercedes. My daughter has been looking for a car and she's a Volvo freak and I talked to her last night and said, 'Hey, this looks pertly good for $1300, and it's a 65 Mercedes, and it's going to be as strong as a tank.' Is it already gone,"
"There's been a lot of people looking at it..."
"Hello."

"Hi, I'm calling about the Mercedes."
"Uh-huh."
"What kind of condition is it in?"

"Tip-top."
"Completely drivable"

"Oh yeah, sure."

Now that Cold Heaven has wrapped up the third week of its run at the Hill-crest, maybe I could be allowed to say a few things about the end of it that I wanted to say in the first place but kept to myself for fear of "spoiling it."

wanted to say in the first place but kept to myselt for fear of "spoining it.

First and foremost among those things (avert your eyes if you have not already seen the movie and are still considering it) is that the ending unforeseeably multiplies the meanings and implications of the central "resurrection" theme. Somewhat as in a Father Brown detective story, the solution to a theme. Somewhat as in a Father Brown detective story, the solution to accoming supernatural puzzle appears so obvious once it has been explained to us (in this case it's a Father Niles who does the explaining, with an element elucidation of the word sanctuary), hough we would never how thought of it on our own. In that sense, it's a satisfactory exding for the kind of movie it seemed to start out to be a where-st-he-body' mystery thriller. But by then the movie has gone on to be a couple of other kinds of movie as well, and the ending is a satisfactory one for those kinds too.

The literal resurrection of the deceased husband had already pushed the proceedings into rombie-vampine; ghost territory — if not all the way into lesus and Lazarus territory — but it is not likely to occur to us at the time that a dead or a preindically dead or a "living dead" husband had had proved to the story of the solution of the solution is also an metaphor for a betterved is also metaphor for a betterved is also a metaphor for a betrayed husband — a malingering, a failing, a dying marriage. (Synonym of to betray: to stab in the back) And the multiplied meaning of ro-urrection at the end takes us well beyond the semi-revived husrespectfully through any sort of depiction hand to the fully cured husband. the healed pinky finger of the of the parsh priest (whose office deep ris into the bargain, the restored faith of the golder figurine, the golf-bag pencil holder, the golf-ball paperweight). The entire plot, even though you cannot have seen where it was beaded, has all along been an implicit play on the concept of faithlessness: unfaithful wife, lapsed communicant, unbelieving priest.

has all along been an implicit play on the concept of furthfeatures: unau-ful wide, lapsed communicant, underlieing priest. This sort of multiplication of meanings creates what some types of com-mentators are wont to call resonance. I would rather say, so as to call it by something else, that it creates a specific picture frame, a specific sighting-piparatus, a specific line of perspective, a specific angle, by which to look-snew at an old idea. (Still another form of resurrection!) This is one of the elsevies of art. and one of selfable destinification marks of art. And so, in this devices of art, and one of telltale identification marks of art. And so, in this particular work of art — and I don't use the term lightly — the idea of an indeadual particular work of ar — and I don't use the term lightly — the necession-dividual and conjugal resurrection is looked at from the perspective and the angle of the most basis resurrection myth in Western calture the cross-the Atomenent, the rebirth, all visited round to humanistic import. It's a way of, among other things, dusting off and shinning up the droning concept of the "agreement" of "agreement" of the "agreement" of "agreement" of "agreement" of "agreement" of "agreement" of "agreement" of "ag

I had (and voiced) my suspicions, since borne out in abundance by Michael Butler of The San Diege Researange others, that the religious trappings of the movie would make it hard for some people to swallow. The advantage of utilizing a Christian myth in this context is thus also its disadvantage: the familiarity that makes it so useful (so comprehensible) for metaphorical purposes makes it simultaneously so easy to reject. And even the most devout believer, not in the habit of thinking along the sible) for metaphorical purposes makes it simultaneously to easy to reject. And even the most devout believer, not in the habit of thinking along the lines of myth and metaphor, is agt to be put off no less. It's always risky to make unorthodox use of an ortheodox, risky to fiddle with a subject about which people have already made up their minds. And it's doubly risky in this contraction of the contraction of the depole with a subject about which people have already made up their minds. And it's doubly risky in this rot gent. The one is agt to be put off by the deployment of the cross in a vampine film or a devil-worship film: the religion there is understood to be a make-believe as the red it is combating. (It is father Niles once again, our linguistic ace, who invokes the term "demonic possession" to provide us a traditional bortor-film coordinate — and the husband's Exorris-tryle expectoration in the hospital bed most definitely seems to fill that bill.) Above all the contractions of the desired of the contraction of the desired of the desired of the contraction of the desired of the desired of the contraction of the desired of the desired of the contraction of the desired of the desired of the contraction of the desired of the

Chris and Joann Wright

BEST FRIENDS FIRST. Shy, adventurous, unpretentious 46-year-old, 158 lbs., 5*11*, seeks attractive lady, 46 or younger, for lasting romance and new adventures.

Joann: I liked the "shy, adventurous" part of Chris's ad. I thought that was an interesting combination Chris: I placed an ad because I've always thought that people in bars put up facades.

Joann: When he called me, he sounded shy on the phone so I said, "This sounds extremely painful for you—and very, very difficult." Chris: I felt I hadn't projected myself very well on the Joann: ... ever the New Yorker ...

Chris: With Phone Matches we had a chance to talk on the phone first and get to know each other. I found the things she said intriguing.

Joann: On our first date, at dinner, he was so quiet during the meal, I thought, "Oh no, this is a real winner." After dinner we went to the Grover Washington Jr. concert at Humphrey's.

Chris: We didn't really have a chance to talk because we were focused on the concert, so I asked her if she would like to go out a second

Joann: Our second date was spectacular. We went to the wineries in Temecula. I had so much fun, I giggled — he really opened up. Chris: In Temecula we had a chance to walk and talk and interact with Joann: Since then, it has been absolute joy. There's no way to describe it. We both have a lot in common: education, travel, hiking, camping and sports. He always tries to trick me with sports trivia questions, but generally, I know the answers. Really he's my best friend.

Chris: This woman is different. There isn't superficiality. There's intelligence. She's a person you can Joann: We had our wedding in the most beautiful place. We had classical guitar music, French food and lots of champagne.

Chris: It was just a coincidence that we married almost a year to the day of our first date.

Joann: I'm a native New Yorker, he's a native Californian; the odds that we found each other were tremendous. We are fortunate...I will be happy spending every single moment for the rest of my life with him.

Events Listings The Catholic Requiem puts the natural fact of death in the context of Christian doctrine; it consoles by making religious sense of an event that otherwise might seem meaningless and absurd. Under the ages of the holy God and the merciful Christ, those who have died can be saved from eternal punishment and instead given external rest in the light of Paralog and the same of the Requiems and the same of the same punishment and instead given external rest in the light of Paralog and the same of the same punishment and the same punis great musical drama here: the terror of death, the violent cataclysm of the of death, the violent catactysm of the Day of Judgment ("that day of wrath, calamity, and misery"), the awesome majesty of the Lord God of Hosts. But there is also the quiet of Hosts. But there is also the quiet of eternal peace, the gentleness of the Lamb of God, the serene confidence in God's n'ercy. The composer chooses among these possibilities, shaping them and balancing them—as did Mozart, Cherubini, Berlico, Verdi, and many others.

Gabriel Empires shorter years.

Gabriel Fauré's choice was perhaps the most extreme of any major composer setting this text, for his Requiem. Op. 48 is overwhelmingly on the side of serenity, peace, rest, tenderness, and consolation. He composed it after the death of his father in 1886, and the death of his father in 1806, and its gentle, sweet-sad atmosphere, it avoidance of rhetoric or high dram its tone of innocence and purity — all have had a decisive influence on French liturgical music ever since. "It floods us with that vast and "It floods us with that vast and tender calm that is the prelude to peace," says one commentator. In asking God to let His light shine upon the deceased, it does not demand, it does not dramatize, it merely whispers — but it whispers with such exquisite beauty that it is hard to see how God could resist it.

The upcoming performance of the Fauré Requiem at St. James by-the-Sea Episcopal Church in La Jolla is not solely a musical event, for it is not solely a musical event, for it integrates the composer's gentle but persistent plea to God with recent historical events. Members of the church choir conceived the concert as a benefit to relieve some of the suffering caused by the recent Los Angeles riots and as a memorial to the more than 50 people who were killed during those days of violence.

Scenes were slow and securicy times extended through guest to example, to start, as were allowed to start, a sweep and the start playing in haddows. Scene were allowed to start, as were allowed everything down far too much. Directed by Flood Gaffineys and choreographed by lean Issaes, the cast was often tentative, as if unsure of how to proceed Part of this may be due to Gaffiney's anti-realistic emphasis. He has treated the piece, rightfully it would seem, as recollected ritual, in this sense the "Mamas' are more flickerings of memory than fully drawn characters they are what they teach. At various points the cast wan't comfortable with this theatrical style.

Kim Edward Black, The Rules of Organization

REVIEW

When I reviewed Kim Edward Black's previous show at the R.B. Stevenson Gallery, I was over-whelmed (as amone would be) with this artist's mastery of realistic technique, as well as with his relentless vision of aliented Main in an indifferent universe. The term more recent paintings currently on display at the Stevenson reiterate these and other aspects of Black's work; the shape catalider medienting of surfaces (principally flesh and stone), the focus on the nude body with the repeated motif of the hairless head), the allusions to the 15th- and 16th-century Italian artists whose tradition Black perpetuates, the agonized appraisal of what it means to be a human being in the late 20th Century.

But critair concerns only suggested in the earlier paintings have now assumed greater prominence: overtones of sadistic violence and masochism in the symbolic representation of he human condition, a pronounced emphasis on senaulity and a concern — now overt — with

A consequence of the Fall is aging, leading to death, and this too is an important theme in Black's painting. The variation on Michelangelo's Creation of Adam eliminates the dynamic relationship between the Creator and the created and substitutes for it a confrontation between two targes of Man's life, youth and age. The youth (once again with the face cut off by the edge of the carwas, for this is an archety-per, not an individual) in at the height of his being, physically, seathetically, sexually, fall of aroused energy, quite unlike Michelangelo's lingual Adam, who is just receiving the touch of life. Instead of God, Black shows us and often areassuming who is just receiving the touch of life. Instead of God, Black shows us and often areassuming. who is just receiving the works of mir. "To this too we must come," the painting tells us, adding the breatthatkingly beautiful image of tree-limb shadows on the ground behind the two figures as though to remind us of the cycles of nature within which this inevitable and trage progress though to remind us of the cycles of nature within which this inevitable and trage progress.

though to remind us of the cycles of nature within which this inevitable and trapic progress from youth to age takes place.

The two superb portraits in the current exhibit are also devoted to extreme age, and the motif of androgyny returns as well. One of the pictures is of a frighteningly intense bald woman, with repitian skin. flamboyant costume jewelry, and bizing blue cyes, looking at us sardon-ically and demonically from her gill halo — a saint of the modern down-and-out. The other portrait shows the head and upper body of a very old man, bald of course), and with sagging female breasts. The wrinkled, flabbly face, with its int of salmess and wisdom, might be that of a Florentiane merchant or bliked propher in a Penaissance painting by Ghirlandsio or scalpraint experimental to the control of the con

There is a terrible cruelty in these portraits, which conceal nothing of the ugliness of aged flesh. The ice-sharp Mantegnesque technique serves as a perfect instrument for this sadism of the brush, which is otherwise reflected in Black's images of crucified, bound, tormented, and violated bodies. But at the same time there is tremendous compassion, all the more moving for them it with the brush, which is otherwise reflected in Black's images or cross-soon violated bodies. But at the same time there is tremendous compassion, all the more moving for the arrial's refusal to soften the hard hutth. The compassion is stated unequivocally in one of the simplest and strongest paintings here, nothing but two hands — one old, one young — tightly grasping each other. The loving, supportive, empethetic context of Mari in his youth with Mari in his doil age is prehip the only conference, and natural deprehation leaves him with. The supportive, empathetic context of Man in his youth with Man in his old age is perhaps the only affirmative truth Black's vision of an suffering, and natural depredation leaves him with. The arms enter from the top and bottom of the painting, across a jet-black ground, the ultimate nothingness (according to mondern naturalism and nahibism) out of which we come and into which we return. But the clasping of the hands is profiled against another of this visionary artist's golden crices. It is a sacred act, sacred because perhaps it is the only act by which the Bach's birth and death, as well as other musical happenings related to Bach. The most recent offering was the commemoration of Bach's death (he died July 28, 1750, in Leipzig), an event of which the audience was reminded by the presence in the Congregational Church of a bust of the great composer draped in black crepe. The stirrings of the funereal fabric under the impetus of air movements gave an uncanny materialization to the undensible fact that "Bach lives"; and the compact, well-rehearsed, and pleasing concert of Bach's music made the same point.

The centrepriece of the program was a performance of Cantata No. 106. Gents Zeit ist die allerbeite Zeit. This early masterpiece in the composer's canon (the number is deceptive) is one of his characteristically brilliant fusions of words and music, of Christian doctrine and musical form, of peiry and drama. It is probably a funeral cantata (and thus te for this Bach Society concert), its particularly appropriate for this Bach Society concert), its Biblical texts — which the composer himself may have assembled — emphasizing the defeat of the "old dispensation" of inevitable death by Christ's victory on the cross. Even in Bach, there are few compositions more thrilling than the central fugue, in which the lower voices obsessively reiterate, "Man, you must die," while the treble: patiently intervene with the prayer, "Yea, come, Jesus Christ"; in the end, the realists of death (their text is from Christ'; in the end, the reassts or usual times text is from Ecclesiasticus) fall silent, as does even the orchestra, and nothing is left but the unaccompanied sopranos, repeating for the final time their line from the Book of Revelation.

The performers of this great work proved to be technically and spiritually in tune with its genius soprano Kathryn Evans, alto Victoria Heins-Shaw, tenor lim Tompkins-Maclaine, the impressive bass Michael Morgan, and the San Diego Double Reed Ensemble, with Hendershott at the harpsichord. To have conveyed the essence of the work so powerfully and skillfully was undoubtedly an admirable accomplishment. But in certain details the performance had its limitations, evidently details the performance mad its limitations, evidently detailed by logistical constraints. Good as the singers were, and acceptable as a one-voice-per-part performance might have been in Bach's own time, the choral sections of this cantata are far more effective with a somewhat larger body.

The substitution of Susan Barrett's Double Reed Ensemble for the instrumental forces specified by Bach also had its drawbacks, although the group itself played well. The cantata is scored of oboes of various ranges.

The cantata was framed by two organ performances by Hendershott, of which the second, the chorale prelude on Kyrie, Gott heiliger Geist, was especially grand. The sound of the Henry Pilcher & Sons two-manual instrument sound of the Henry Pikher & Sons two-manual instrument rebuilt by Dowlington in 1965 was truly exciting in the organist's noble performance. This charming and valuable concert closed with vigorous, light-hearted performance of two drinking songs, one from Bach's "Peasant" Cantata. The double-reed players estimated a few days later in a program of their own, also at the Congregational Church but this time in the church hall. The six players (with their oboes, bass above, English horn, and bassoons) performed ones.

works by 17th- and 18th-century composers — including Telemann and Mozart — for various combinations of their instruments, or in arrangements from orchestrations that were originally somewhat different.

Alas, I can't say I enjoyed this concert very much, in

Als. I can't say I enjoyed this concert very much, in optie of the opportunity to here some rately performed pieces in Renaissance, Barcque, and Classical styles, and in spite of the extreme attractiveness of the double-reed sound. There was a rather stiff, rather routine, and rather dull quality to much of the playing, which I attribute to a certain tentativeness or apprentice-like caution on the part of the oboist playing the most prominent parts and to the lack of a conductor. Suan Barrett, the guiding spirit of the group and a splendid musician, was hidden among the tenor instruments, and there was no one standing in front of the other musicians to immart to them the drive, the of the other musicians to impart to them the drive, the energy, the rhythmic flexibility, the graceful phrasing, and the qualities of spontaneity and nuance they were in such Barrett herself could have done the job, for these are precisely the characteristics of her own playing, but evidently the need for her in the ensemble precluded her acting as conductor. No doubt a great deal of work was done in rehearsal under her leadership — but as it turned out, rehears was not enough. I am sorry to have to say anything negative about a group of musicians I have so much respect for, but when even Mozart sounds lifeless and boring there is obviously something crucially wrong.

As if we were players in commedia dell arts, our waiter assured us that the next batch would have less salt, but it proved to be identical to the first. Later in our meal, the linguist with clams, the Caesar salad, and the veal cutlet were salted beyond current California.

The second objection was that several items arrived tepid. One of our appetizers was sautéed Maine scallops with cucumber sauce and spicy relish. It sounded irresitible, but the scallops were so cold that even the spicy relish couldn't the scanops were so cout that even the appry relish couldn't heart them. What saved the early part of the evening for me was the grilled polenta, round as pancakes and layered with mush rooms. Polenta (corn meal mush) has its origins in peasant fare, and this version is both appealing and satisfying. The highlight of the meal for me was the risotto, creamy rice enhanced by sausage, mushroom, and bell pepers. It was the one dish that was sensoon as well as warm. The balance in texture and flavor was perfect.

Vaughan, Jimi Hendrix, Otis Redding. Eternally, BLUE

When the band took the stage for their second set, it was not Rejon Myles who fronted the group but harpist Eddie Rogers of the Jake and Ellroy pose on the 8"x10" press glossy. Blue Seville opened with Willie Dixon's "Hoochie Coochie Man." At first, one doesn't listen to them as much as try and get visual traction, some image reference. Almost everyone onstage looked familiar in a crazy-quilt/masquerade kind of

The harp player/singer labored under a double-bar-reled affliction. Rogers now seemed (with his hair much longer than on the photo) a botched clone of Aerosmith's Steven Tyler. He also registered a marked rock and roll disorder, rare since the early '70s: the compulsion to resemble Steppenwolf lead singer John Kay. That I dwell upon the image Blue Seville projects rather than the music is an indication of how little I projects rather than me musics is an inoctation of now inter-have to say about their music. It is unremarkable and, at least that night in Fat City, vaguely annoying because of volume and reverberation levels on amplifiers and PA. This was exacerbated by the room's tile floors and copper ceiling. But the BS image is a phenomenon I find fascination. The drummer has also been visited with Blues Broth-rest and the project of the project o ers virus and sports a necktie and shades (overtones of Huey Lewis and the News here as well). His playing? Hard to tell in that sound trampoline of a place, but think of broken glass and household appliances rolling down a flight of stairs in 55-gal

The bass player, Jim Stokes, looks like an unholy cross between Michael Medved and Weird Al Yankovic. Stokes's shirt remained open to the wast throughout the set. I tried to resist the temptation (I guess I can') to suggest the use of a stunt chest in the future. His playing, however, brings no real complaints to mind since it calls no real attention to itself.

complaints to mind since it caus no real attention to itself.

Sometimes this is a good thing.

Rhythm player and second guitarist Rick Ross, from New York, looked as if he'd just wandered in off the 18th hole. New York, looked as if ne d just wandered in off the founds. His occasional solos on his white Telecaster were relatively painless, under 200 decibels, not buried in reverb, and offered some contrast (Dorian-mode minor scales, Wes Montgomery

Rogers played unimaginative octaves, and jazzy, Steely Dan/Elliott Randall phrasings) to Will Green's top-heavy treble/reverb assaults so bad it was impossible to hear with any reliability what he was doing. He generated some chils on a low original called 'Sleazin' in the third set, but here is a man who clearly "Sleazin" in the third set, but here is a man who clearly supped while watching Stevic Ray Vaughan. To say that he imitates SkV is an understatement there must have been hours at day—likely years—spent listening to Vaughan, studying him, merging physical traits down to the trumpeter's tuff brenath his jin. Hems The hat, the bolo tie, the baggy pants with silver-studded belt, the feather hanging from the limited-edition SRV memorial-issue Stratocaster from Fender. Even the strut-pacing Vaughan did in tight circles onstage: all of them are here. Green does not invite comparison so much as demand it — loudly, and this does not serve him well. We as demand it — loudly, and this does not serve him well. We can't know who or what Green is as a guitarist, but we are left with no doubt as to who and what he is not. Rogen's wocals in the second set were okay, not bad, but hardly distinctive. The group has mislabeled itself RAB; they ire trying every hard to be a blues band, but they have every sign of being blues hopefuls who came to the music via rock and for lattler than the other way around. You can take the rocker roll rather than the other way around, You can take the rocker out of the garage, but....

The third set presented yet more of this Halloween atmosphere. La Iolian Rejon Myles mounted the stage to front the band wearing a white waist-length tuxedo jacket, matching pants, no shirt, and long alver braid equalettes on padded shoulders. Again the specter of some unsanctioned genetic engineering here with DNA from Mc. Latrender on The Low rise, and some odd snippets of the Mc. Latrender on The Low riving shopping hops and ringing doorbells: My, what scary little pop stars! Here's some Tootsie Rolls."

Rogers played unimaginative harmonica with great zeal, much grimacing, and unwelcome pantomiming of fellatio.

During Albert Collins's "Ice Man," Myles paced the stage During Albert Collins's "Ice Man." Myles paced the stage singing angily in a narrow range like a pissed-off oab driver who had just been rear-ended. The anger, presumably, was to pass for power, sool, virility. At chosen moments the would march to one edge of the stage as if to engage, address, or confront the partons sitting at the closest tables. The thing is, as he posed this way, he avoided eye contact so completely that, as with Green, the effect was the unsettling sense that we were cavesdropping: peeping into someone's bedroom-mirror fan-

During a rendition of Freddy King's "Hideaway," an instrumental with some difficult guitar acrobatics, the guitarist was cut off by Myles, who began singing possibly ad-libbed lyrics.
Green gave the singer a puzzled look but backed off on guitar. It would have been interesting to see if Green could have continued and pulled off the tough break had Myles not control him. The word intrusion mighs bease may be a seen to see the stopped him. The vocal intrusion might have been an attempt as spontaneity and originality, like the band's rock/blues ren-dition of Johnny Cash's "Folsom Pixion Blues," but these anomalies seemed more characteristic of a band with an identity criss.

Since they opened for Steppenwolf on August 2, Myles has parted company with the rest of the group, but with or without him, Blue Seville doesn't seem to know who they are — only that they want to be some other guys.

Starr Struck

REVIEW

Last Saturday night, the Marine Corps, of all possible agen-cies, offered one of the ever-diminishing opportunities to see a former Beatle perform ir. San Diego.

Ringo Starr and his All-Starr Band, including Todd Rundgren. Dave Edmunds, Joe Walsh, Nils Lofgren, Tim Capello, Timothy B. Schmit, and Zak Starkey played for two hours in the newest concert venue in the county, the Ace Bowen Concert Grounds at Camp Pendleton, to a crowd of

The Ace Bowen Concert Grounds is a weird setting for a congregation of rock and roll venerables and the men and women who love them. Later in the evening, Joe Walsh would ask, "Why do I feel so safe here?" Possibly because the heavask, why do i ree so sair nere? Possibly occause the neav-ily armed Marines in camouflage utility uniforms leading attack dogs were visible around the stage area. One wonders, who exactly were they expecting? More, apparently, than the number who showed: acres of empty seats remained, and tickets were still on sale until showtime.

FREE CONSULTATION

You're Single. We're Free. Why Wait?

Introducing Reader PHONE MATCHES, a Great Place to Meet Single People. You are provided with a free personal matching ad in the Reader Classifieds. You also receive a free "voice mailbox"— a phone service that allows you to record and receive messages from any touch-tone phone.

HOW TO PLACE YOUR AD: To place a free Phone Matches ad fill out the coupon below and mail or FAX it (233-7901) to us. (If faxing please photocopy the coupon first and then fax it. The newsprint doesn't reproduce well.) The deadline for receiving free Phone Matches ads is Saturday at 7am. Free ads are 25 words or less and run for two weeks. No free ads will be accepted over the phone or in person. Ads with more than 25 words cost $1.20 per additional word. We'll send you a 5-digit mailbox number (to be printed in your ad) and a 4-digit security code for exclusive access to your responses.

You may also place a late ad until 6pm Tuesday by phone (235-8200), in our office (1703 India St. at Date St., downtown), or by FAX (233-7907). The charge for these late ads is $20 for the first 25 words plus $1.20 per additional word. Ads placed by phone or by PAX are with Visa or MasterCard only. Limit one Phone Matches ad per person per two-week period.

HOW TO USE YOUR VOICE MAILBOX: After you receive your mailbox number and private security code, you can record your personal introduction. Call 527-1966, 24 hours a day, and follow the easy instructions

Use your introduction to tell more about yourself than your ad does (see below for guidelines). Give your first name; but DON'T give your last name, phone number or address. Make sure you ask your callers to leave their names, phono numbers and the best times to call them. You can re-record your personal introduction once per 24-hour period.
All introductions are reviewed by the Reader and go on-line within 24 hours. To listen to your responses, call 527-1966 any time, 24 hours a day, and follow the easy instructions. You can replay any response or move ahead to the next one. If you choose to move ahead, the previous response will be erased, so have a pencil and piece of paper ready! You must have a touch-tone phone to record a personal introduction or listen to responses. QUESTIONS? Call 235-8200, x 268
