Registered Democrat Dismayed By Perceived Vilification

Vilification
When we moved from the East

we understood that with the perhaps even a certain someperhaps even a certain smug-ness about what some Repubness about what some Repub-licans like to call 'family val-ues." At least the Reader presented a peck now and again that anything but a pre-dictable right-of-center view was possible.

So it was with particular dismay that your lead story for Labor Day was a long and var-ied series of vignettes of con-fessional stories by workers who have cheated, lied, and ("Labor's Love Lost," Septem tabor's Love Lost, September 3). It's not enough we have to listen every day to unremitting knee-jerk attacks on workers from most of what passes as local media — on the one day the only alternative one day the only alternative paper in town might find a story to celebrate working people, they find some new ways to reinforce cynicism and disrespect for American work-ers that the right-wing finds so ers that the right-wing finds so comforting.

A word about my background — I'm a small-business owner, not a union member, and a registered Democrat. To be surrounded by so much despair about the best and most efficient workers in the world just amazes me, especially since it's often couched in flag-awaring. First of all, these things have nothing to do with that show: MTV, Spinal Tap, Slash, Guns 'N Roses, Robert Plant. Guns N Roses, Robert Plant, Led Zeppelin, David Lee Roth, or Van Halen. You seem con-fused about the differences be-tween "heavy metal" and "death metal." There are liter-ally no connections between the two.

Second of all, I don't know where you viewed the show from, but you obviously were trom, but you obviously were either way in the back, too scared of Carcass and Napalm Death's crowds, or you had your head up your ass. Up in front, there was just about as many females as males. You many females as males. You see, women who like this type of music aren't there just to fouck the band; they are there to enjoy the music and be a part of the fun up front.

About the minorities. I don't know what you are thinking. There was alot there. Once again, they are up front enjoying themselves. Ask my griftiend, who is not only a efficient of the properties of t male but a minority as well. She was up in the pit right along with me.

To help you a little, the style of death metal vocals are done on purpose. Aggressive music calls for aggressive vomusic calls for aggressive vo-cals, not pussy shit like Poison or Warrant. That has its place elsewhere. The vocals are also used as kind of another

BETTER, MORE ENJOYABLE, EASIER TO USE STEREO COMPONENTS

Buying and owning a sound/video system should be fun. If you buy the best equipment made (in your price range) you will get more than you dreamed possible. Many of our customen thought all components were similar and they couldn't hear the differences, until they heard the best. They consistently are shocked at how big an improvement there really is. The reason – brands like B&W. Paradigm, Polk Audio, McIntosh, Nakamichi, NAD, Bang & Olufen, Sumo, etc. These are the BEST – Dow, Circuit, Sido don't carry any of them. And if that's not enough – our prices are just as good as our quality.

As soon as his comments were broadcast, Singleton started to receive death thrests. Graham was his bodyguard. The two of them had a very busy day.

The erric detail of the title aside, these coincidences, for as uncanny as they are, might be explained by the fast that the black uncanny is they are, might be explained by the fast that the black uncanny as they are, might be explained by the fast that the black sonalities play themselves out in a more or less tightly knit context. Graham's life, however, seems more coincidental than most. His father, the Reverend Samuel Graham, before moving from San Diego in 1985 to pastor a church in Las Vegas, promoted and produced some of the best-known names in gospel. here are the little men. Then there is Rudd Roetticher, I don't mean his size here are the little men. Then there is Budd Boetticher. I don't mean his size—h's a compact man with an easy smile and vaguely Mongel eyes that hint at a barbaric zest for experience. I mean his guts. Boetticher is the last of Hemigway's bijs hearted men, a living, breathing exemplar of the Nietzschean epigram. "What doesn't kill me makes me stronger."

Boetticher (it's pronounced Bed'-ker), respected as a disciplined director of westerns, bullfight pictures, and other tough-guy gene movies, was working in Hollywood when it wasn't overun with MBAs and snobs. This was the era of Harry Cohn, John Huston, Duke Wayne, John Ford, Robert Mitchum.

era of Harry Cohn, John Huston, Duke Wayne, John Ford, Robert Mitchum, and movic crews that weren't merely interested in dousts and double overtime. As Boetticher puts it, "There was a real camaradere. We could have won World War II, the toughest button of bastards you ever saw in your life."

The studio people were a tough bunch of bastards too, but Boetticher was tougher. Darry Zamuck gave him his big break, appoining him technical advisor on the 1941 Tyrone Power bullfight epic Blood and Sand after Budd put on a convincing display of capework learned from the great Mexican maestro Fermin Espinosa, "Armillia."

"There are only two things they can do to you in Hollywood," says Boetticher. "They can fire you or they can lick you. There were never a hell of a lot of guys in Hollywood who could lick me, so I've never been worned about that. And I've been fired. But when I bullfought, producers and studios don't become very frightening. I never had the horrible fear that people live with out

Case in point, Boetticher's encounter with Harry Cohn. "Everybody knew who Harry Cohn was, and he really was a buil. I was working for George Stevens on The More the Merrier. Stevens and Cohn hated each other. Stevens was the top director in town and had a backboard built on the set. And every time Harry Cohn came on the set to interfere. I would give George Stevens a tennis ball, and he would play handball against the backboard at about a hundred dollars a hit until Cohn would leave. This would just infuriate Harry Cohn.

his foreword to Boetticher's

Life around Budd was always exciting. I remember once, about 20 years back, he once, about 20 years back, he and I are walking down this Tijuana street and along come three of the toughest, tequilated-up yokels you ever saw. Budd happened to be in a feisty mood and out of the blue says. "You take the one in the middle and I'll take care of the other two." I cleared out, slunk away and melted, itsi, the backerund. cleared out, slunk away and melted into the background and left him to work it out with all three. I felt sorry for them. What a character! Boetticher returns the volley with his favorite Mitchum story.

with his favorite Mitchum story. "He was making a picture on An-gel's Flight for Rudy Matte, and in the scere Jack Palance is sup-posed to jump on the trolley and get in a fight with Mitchum, and Mitchum is supposed to cold-cock him. So floo sees this big gay coming. He backs up and Palance right in the jaw with all his might. Palance knocks Mitch right on his ass. So Mitch comes to and says to Rudy Matte, "Let's do it again." Mitch figures if he to and says to Rody Matte. Let so do it again. Mitch figures if he takes one step back he can do what we've all learned, get his leverage against this bench. So here comes Palance and Mitch goes BOOM, and Palance goes WHAM and knocks Mitch on the cost of the control of the but one some "Thei's "Th his ass again. Mitch says, 'That's it, CUT. If the world could get along racially as well It the word could get along racraity as well as they do in San Diego's County jails, it would be a much better place. Sure, there are incidents here and there. Sure, sometimes it comes down to rubber bullets, tear gas, and month-long "lock-downs," But considering the noise, withdrawal from cigarettes and drugs, legal problems. pressure from outside influences such as wives, family, children, not to mention the claustrophobic conditions, it's amazine how well the races get along. (And most of the incidents that do crop up are gang related, not race related, i.e., Crips vs. Bloods.) Sure, racial feelings are

For example, "Those fucking niggers are so fucking loud," or "Them white boys sure don't like to get wet [take showers]." It is good therapy (for some) to hold these little talks; it eases the hostility "I've got to call my mom. Can I use the

I know, I know, tough love, well, these black dides want to fuck my ass! So fuck you guys' Leave me here to rot!" He hangs up on his mother. "Martin 217, Martin 217, court call, court call." A skinny white boy, obviously spun on tweak, sits in the holding tank, playing with his pimples, pondering the future. Not only his but the other 112 people crammed in the holding cell. Most of the men here have been here before. All the men in the tank awaiting court are in here for a felony charge. More than half of them have at least one prior felony conviction. The noise is incredibly loud. Spanish rattles off the walls. Updates about the "se" (gang neighborhoods) are exchanged. The decider lange is up there with sixting in the front row of a U-2 concert, yet incredibly, some sleep on the Benches and, to Jason's disgust, on the greasy floor. The marchals, who supervise court movement, stuff 15 more "bodies" (as they are referred to by staff through "bodies" (as they are referred to by staff throughout the system) into the jam-packed box coded to hold no more than 50 men. Now there are 128 out the system) into the jam-packed box coded to hold no more than 50 men. Now there are 128 men in here.

Jason wonders, as he looks at several men, how they came to be here. He digests bits and pecces of coverexation; coming from a welf-to-do family, he learned Spanich from his maid. He hecause of durage, in one way or another. Once hecause of durage, in one way or another. Once you start the cycle and don't make drastic changes, you'll come back here or some other jail over and over and over and over again. Chances are good that if these men stayed away from alcohol and drugs they wouldn't be here.

I have been a supplementation of the start of ference between the district attorney (DA) or prosecuting attorney and Monty Hall. Monty calls for Martin. Putting yourself in Martin's shoes, here's the "offer." First he says, "Take a look at door number 1 where Carol Merril is standing. Jay, tell us what's inside:" "Well, Monty, the DA has offered to dismiss the felony resisting arrest charge and give you a misdemeanor conviction for 11-5-50 (under the influence of narcotics), which carries a mandatory 50 days. But wait, that's not all! We'll credit for time served, fine you $150, divert you to a 16-hour drug-awareness program and five days of community service and three years summary probation, all of this if you enter a "gully" plea. Now how's "bout that!"

Monty says, "Think about it while Jay tells, "Well, Mr. Mattin, you can plead nor gully," "Well, Mr. Mattin, you can plead nor gully."

you arout door number 2 — Jay?

"Well, Mr. Martin, you can plead 'not guilty,' thereby setting your case for pretrial bearing inine days, leaving you in custody in lieu of $5000 bail. If convicted you may face three years in the state pen and a fine of not more than $1000 — What a deal! Monty?"

"Are you sure?"
"Yes! Let's get this over with!" Jason, who's been in an 8-man holding cell with 26 people for six hours, is led to court with his hands cuffed behind his back. The marshal, his gun visible, behind his back. The marshal, his gun visible, points him and 6 other guys to a plexiglass-windowed immate enclosure area.

"First case!" The DA ross. "Your home, the People of the State of Californias, 3 Jason Martin. 11-5.50 being under the influence of a narrotic, and felony, resisting arrest." The marshal motions him to stand. His attorney pleash his case. "Your Honer, my cleam whiste to plead motions him to stand. His attorney preast his case. At 11-45 p.m. an electronic iron door slides open, and Jason takes one last look as he walks past the empty holding cells that were brimming with despart just hours before. He steps outside. His mother and father are waiting. He rudes to their arms, and all are shedding tears of joy. "Oh, much like the control of the steps outside. The step of the steps of the st

The person I spoke with suggested I call a few add if I felt unconflortable about placing my own. Rose was one of four people! Called. I was happy to hear she had two children since I've never had children of my own.

Rose: Our first date was at Black Angus where Richard works; then we went to the play "The Recruiting Officer" at USD.

Richard: During the play, Rose was laughing. Her laugh is infectious. What was interesting for me is you hear talk about having this electric feeling between two people. On our first date, I felt that.

Richard: Four days after our first date, it was Valentine's Day. She sent me flowers. That was something I loved.

Rose: In the beginning, Richard was testing me. He took me window-shopping for furniture, to see if we had the same taste. Another test was walking through mud in Penasquitos Canyon.

Richard: Rose is smart as a whip. She's someone I can explicitly trust. She's a wonderful manager, very organized, just an all-around planner. Her kids are great. I'm taking stepparent classes. In fact, we've all planted a garden together.

Richard: Rose and I never would have met if it wasn't for this Phone Matches™ service. Most of us only have a small group of friends and work associates, and if you don't go to bars, your sphere is that much smaller for finding the right person.

Rose: Over spring break, we went to San Luis Obispo. We were listening to a saxophonist at the open air market. We asked the saxophonist's wife life her husband did weddings. When she asked, "Why, are you two getting married?" Richard answered, "Yes." I thought, well would you at least ask me?

Richard: It just popped out. It's like you get asked a question and you don't have your guard up so you answer from your heart. My ex-wife, who was still my good friend, died a few months ago. She lowed Rose. The day before I proposed to Rose, my ex-wife gave us her blessing. The day I proposed, my ex-wife, who had been sick for musty years, passed away.

Rose: That was our sign. Since then, we've set the date for getting married to March, on Harbor Island. Richard's best man will be a woman.

Richard: In our future, we want to own a dairy farm. Rose shares that vision with me. I'll milk the cows early in the morning. Rose will sit on a stool and supervise.

Minor Irritation

Minor Irritation
I'm writing regarding the City
Lights' piece 'When Kids
Rape Kids' by Julie Bowlet (August 20). Having experienced minor-to-minor sexual abuse within my own family. I read the article with much interest, and ultimately, frustration and approver the intration and approver the intra-sterest, and ultimately, frustra-tion and anger over the inac-curate and one-sided tone afforded this subject. There are a few points I'd like to raise. First, the photograph of the anatomically correct doils was inflammatory and misleading. The dolls were depicted nude-their clothing scattered around them. When questioning chil-dren, social workers and ther-apixts begin with the dolls fully clothed. Thus, the statement not be as likely to elicit the doll's being undressed if this had not occurred. The photo also, I believe, was intended to give the impression that the child's eye would immediately treatment.

Secondly, the idea of a 15-year-old sodomizing a 4-year-old relative because he lives in North County and was heterosexual 15-year-olds from conservative families in North County are more likely to begin their sexual "experi-mentation" with 4-year-olds? And no number of letters of 4-year-old's body or mind

(CPS) must have changed dra matically over the last two years if no one mentioned the "five-year age rule." Perhaps it's an unwritten rule, but from my experience, seems to be universally followed. One of the county's foremost expert the county's foremost experts in child sexual abuse informed me that unless CPS had "prior contact" with the family, most cases where the ages of chil-dren are within five years of one another are not only not one another are not only not referred to the court system but not even followed up by CPS with either the referring party or the accused. Thus, the absurdity of two seven-yearolds playing doctor being re-ferred for counseling is not only impossible, but had lohn-nie decided to enforce his will on a ten-year-old rather than a five-year-old, he most likely wouldn't have been sentenced to anything. The "embarrass ing. personal, intimate" ques-tions asked of Johnnie's fam-ily were entirely appropriate at one time - in other word the perpetrator may have been a victim of abuse him/hersels the cases of Johnnie and Peter

Ms. Robinson, do you know your African history? Yes, the slave trade was hideous, but it was completely dependent on the enthusiastic participation of Africans, who rounded up their own people and delivered them to the Euand delivered them to the Eu-ropean slave traders. Slavery was a way of life in Africa long before Europeans arrived, and it still is, many thousands of Africans today were born and will die as slaves to other Africans. It was the "white man" who long ago ended slavery in the Northern Hemiillions of black Africans who are being and have been starved to death because of po-litical fighting between Africans, who could count the tens of thousands of Africans slaughtered, literally mowed down by machine guns and flailing machetes, all at the hands of fellow blacks? Idi Amin was only one of many bloodthirsty monsters. And where does nearly all the hu manitarian aid to Africa come from? The "white" world. I would also suggest that Ms.

Robinson read Alice Walker's new book, all about the mil-lions of African women whose clitorises have been amputated so that they will be "obedient so that they will be "obedient" wives. Of course, in nearly all Third World "non-white" countries, women are merci-lessly subjugated and doomed to lifelong inferiority. Walk in African woman who's had her clitoris cut off, whose family has been murdered by soldiers, and who lives in a country so hopelessly corrupt that there is no hope of her ever rising out of grinding, scratch-in-the-dirt poverty — and then lecture us about the "white man's inhu-

Then we could get into the and the pitiless class system India, genocide and political torture in Latin America. Isn't it strange that the millions of people in those countries are desperate to get to the United States and Europe — the world of the white man — since we all know that the "white man" is so much more evil and vicious than the peaceful innocents of the Third World?

Wake up out of your pa thetic fantasy, Ms. Robinsor

Inhumanity flourishes in every culture and among all races. Pointing the finger of blame at one group and demanding that they admit that "they're the worst" is a big waste of time. What are you doing now to make the world a better

Some of the mimicry of television newscasters — especially Spader's — evidences some close observation, but nowhere does the movie attempt to advance beyond the imitative to the truly imaginative.

About Blade Runner, it needs to be said before anything else that the re-released "director's cut" (now at the Park) is not the historically valid director's cut of 1982 — prior to its revision for the original release — but rather the historically rewritten director's cut of 1992. The former exists only in Ridley Scott's memory. Another so-called director's cut, after a trial run in Ridley Scott's memory. Another so-called director's cut, after a trial run late last year in los Angles and San Francisco, was pulled back for further fine-tuning. It now runs several minutes shorter than it did ten years ago in the viewor the viewor the viewor the opportunity to use opportunity to use opportunity to use

There's also an added slow-motion mental image of a unicorn, a foreshadowing no so much of lidade Ruiner's denouement as of Ridley Scott's supremely ludicrous Legend: another likely candidate for a director's-cut reissue. Has it been improved? Not enough to make any difference. From this distance in time, it is hard to know whether the movie deserves to be classed as genuinely influential or just indicative; it came after the same director's Alien, after all, and The Empire Strikes Back and Escape from New York and Outland. The best movies I have seen lately have been seen on TV. The Short The best movies I have seen lately have been seen on IV. The Short and Curlies, a twenty-minute filler on the Bravo channel, was alertly taped and loaned to me by a friend who knows how interested I am in Mike Leigh. This 1987 work, from before I had ever heard of the man, proved to be very much the Mike Leigh I am interested in: the merciles caricature softened with aching compassion, centered this time around a foursome comprising with acting compassion, centered unit offer around a four-some comprising an astimatically gasping hairdresser, her sullen pregnant unmarried daugh-ter, a client whose only flickers of interest in life are activated by the variations in her coffure, and an unsuitable suitor for her who cart quit cracking jocks. The result is continuously hilarious and lingeringly bleak. (Leigh's earliest ture was named Bleak Moments: I'd like to get to see that one someday.) Compressed as it is, however, into about one-fifth the time, this film is more perfect, which is to say more continuously hilarious and more lingeringly bleak, than either High Hopes or Life Is Sweet. What a pity it is that filmmakers haven't as acceptable an outlet for short pieces as fiction writers have.

Lessons of Darkness, shown on the Discovery channel and taped by me and loaned in repayment to the friend mentioned above, is Werner Herzog's hour-long documentary on postwar Kuwait. His expectorating speech and incantatory narration are characteristically overstriving, as are his selections

The movie takes us through his final day in prison and all the way past the guillotine prion and all the way past the guillotine before cracking open his memoris and going into flashback and answering some of the queetions raused in the opening. Even the prison cell, and is two long overall, and the prison cell, and is two long overall, and too talky, and the climactic courtreom spectacle (with the unseen gallery providing a kind of flaught rack) still rise to do too much in too short a time. Baby Got Back

REVIEW

The life of Endesha Ida Mae Holland, an African-American woman from Greenwood. Mississippi. abounds with radical turning points. What looked like the best day of her 11th year — go ing to the movies, on a "aalm, balmy day" with Becky Ann, a white girl Holland babysat — became the worst. The calm was "counterfeit." The girl's grandfather raped Holland. For the continued from previous page "driver" in Swahili, someone who drives others as well as herself. The name could apply equally to Ain't Baby

From the Mississippi Delta spans the mid-1940s to the mid-1980s, and its 11 scenes contain both humor and horror. On the comedic side, there's Bro Pastor, a minister with a hotline to heaven...literally. In the middle of a sermon he stops, looks up, and carries on a private conversation with his Maker ("What's that, Lord? Uh.nh...uh-huh..."). There's Rosebud Dupree. She sits in a chair next to a pile of bricks and — with Duprec. She sits in a chair next to a pile of bricks and — with a throwing arm the Padres could use—Haunches them at anyone who tries to step on her water meter. There's also Holland's brief sint as the "Della Queen". a strapper with a rather unique gimmink. Defau is often riotously frampy. At the same time, though, tragedy haunts the play. The reason five Pastor is giving a sermon is because Airi fishey was burned to death by hooded men — possibly in ctribution for Holland's widt rights active. There are mightriders in New York, and a burning cross in There are ingirtness in New York, and a burning cross in Minneapolis/St. Paul. But, and this happens often in Delta, Hol-land finds something positive about it. The cross is a source of warmth on a freezing night. Holland's ability to transform things, as a person and as a writer, is at the heart of this work. She's known enough grief for 20 people, and yet she has managed not merely to survive it, but to survive it with abundant

At the Cassius Carter Centre Stage, director Seret Scott has turned Delta into a theatrical celebration. The pain is never undercut. The rape and Ain't Baby's murder are gruesomely depicted, for example. But the production in general chooses to look back on the past from the perspective of current achievements, and thus the tone—extensions of mains upbeat throughout. So the doesn't seem completely comfortable with the Carter's in-theround configuration, as the occasional sightline problems indicate (when one of the four sides of the theater is laughing loudly, and the other three are silent, reblocking the scene is iouary, and the other three are sheft, rebooking the scene is an imperative). Scott isn't able to stage ways to disguise the 20-year gap in the material either (Holland entered college in 1966 and got her Ph.D. in '86 — but then again, the road to a doctorate is rarely straight, never paved, and often clogged with cul-de-sacs). Scott is very close to this material, though, and has directed the best ensemble work I've seen in some

Cheryl Lynn Bruce heads the cast. She plays Ain't Baby as a gentle bulldozer who lets nothing stand in her way. Bruce is an extremely talented actor, not the least of her skills being a deft ability to mime. In the scene called "Second Doctor Lady," Ain't Baby miraculously alters the path of a breech baby, and Bruce makes the scene work with wordless elo-quence. She also shows her versatility by playing Rosebud Dupree and Bro Pastor - both artfully crafted comic roles. Dupree and Bro Fastor—both artudy evalued colin. Joseph Young Saundra Quarterman and Pamala Tyson alternate play-ing the Holland character, and both do exceedingly well. In the program, Quarterman's bio is brief. Given her impressive range of expressiveness and natural ease onstage, the bio is bound to bloom. Tyson's forte is physical, even athletic, com-edy. She contorts her face and body in ways as fast as they are bilarious. Individually the three actors are obviously gifted. hilarious. Individually the three actions are oversionly girele.
It's what they do together, however, that makes the production work so well. There are times when they appear to be actual extensions of each other, their movements are so precise.
And there are other times — as when they sing "Will the Circle Be Unbroken" at Ain't Baby's funeral — when you forget it's only three people on the stage, since they make it seem as if they're an entire crowd.

A Cup of Goffee

Of his 1931 comnely, the legendary filmmaker Preston Sturges wrote.

It was probably a little too mild for Broadway, and no producer evinced any interest in staging it.

A Cup of Coffee int' early Sturges, necessarily—his Strietly Dishonorable had a successful Broadway run in 1929—It just feels like the work of an apprentice playwright crossing over into journeyman status. The pacing is iourneyman status. The pacing is often lax, the tension turns on and off, climaxes lack shape, and its three acts take a long time for little to happen. As in the movie Working Girl, Coffee's premise is it gives the play every chance to succeed. Director Larry Carpenti treats it as a time-capsule, encouraging an acting style current in 1931 and a look (minutely detailed set by Mark Wendland, lit by Martin Aronstein, and precisely period costumes by Nancy Konrardy) from that time as well. But though these artistic choice are interesting on their own, and treats it as a time-capsule 16 years should have a more obviously uplifting effect) and by Rave Birk as a jerk with neurotic vulnerabilities. communa from previous page on the Achille: the sinking of the Redoubtable — these events in fact took place at different hours of the day or on different days, yet Turner showed them all happening at once.

This was no innovation for Turner, who habitually exaggerated, distorted, altered, and recomposed his landscape and seascape subjects for dramatic and pictorial effect. But Turner's private aesthetics seem not to have pleased the royal taste (although there is no direct evidence of the King's personal attitude). In any case, this — the only picture in the royal Collection by England's foremost painter — was banished from St. James's Palace five years later, winding up in Greenwich, whence it comes to us (this is first time it has been exhibited elsewhere up in Greenwich, whence it comes to us (this is first time it has been exhibited elsewhere).

For those loss concerned with the exact details of the battle of Trafalgar, what is of moment is the way Turner has disposed his quasi-historical subject on the rommous canvas (cat eight-and-affall by tweelve feet, this is the largest painting the artist ever made). The composition is much more frontal and palent with any that of the Arnald Battle of the Nile. Like the Swifssare, the Vetery is at the centre of the painting, but since the vessel is seen broadside, much closer, quite high in the water, and with exaggerated dimensions, if fills great deal more of the central area. We are more aware of its vast, noble, static architecture than of its dramatic movement, the energy of movement having been visually transferred to the creamy-white forward sails in a dizzying tangle of billowing arabesques.

With the mass of the flagship as a backdrop, the foreground is occupied with the Redoubtable's teeming lifeboat, injured or drowning members of the crew, and an immense drooping union jack on the surface of the waves. This area of royal collection drooping union jack on the surface of the waves. This area of the picture, with its histinica, sounted postures reminiscent of Geficiault's Raft of the Medium (painted only a few years before), forms a triangular-shape wedge exhoing, in inversion, the large, overlapping triangular forms of the rigging above. Other ships at left and right consist of sketchy, burred, or obscured masses with isolated linear details emerging firthly from the variegated, imprously applied washes of paint. The bold freedom of Turner's hand (and imagination) dissolves nainter - was banished from the St. James's lines and shapes at either side of the central vessel, vaporizing material objects into a shimmer of light: white at one side, and a pastel ruddy tan at the other.

The dark sea of the foreground drives this dissolution of form to its extreme great rolling sweeps of paint, with overpainted murk and underpainted gleams. The more distant passages of the shallow foreground triangle, with its dramatic human content, similarly transform outlines, contours, shapes, and masses into streaks and confusions of color, where figuration has burred into untineligibility or had sispapered altogether. There is, moreover, a strong sense that these painterly passages exist not in the depth of represented space but on the surface of the painting. Throughout the picture, in fact, we are struck not by the impression of space in depth, as in the Arnald, but rather by the immense, cyclonic, disintegrating flood of densely readant light playing over everwhine.

depth, as in the Arnald, but rather by the immense, cycloin, dismitegrating loose of orensy radiant light plang over everything. In an analogous way, the chief coloristic cloor of Arnald's Bartle of the Nile, the melo-dramatic contrast between deep darkness and blazing light, is only locally in evidence in Turner's far more individualized treatment of color and chiarosuro. The upper four fifth of his painting are dominated by pasted colors—white, excens gravith pink, and various tans—with salis and clouds not contrasting but blending, and the enclosing thins of forms from grave. The control of the control of the effects of perspective due to the way the color is applied.

On a more restricted scale, we see here the same near-abstract expressionism that seems to incredibly modern in Turner's late style, where the arm near substract expressionism that seems to incredibly modern in Turner's late style, where the arms its life-long impulse to the greatest emotional expression through unfettered breadwork takes over almost completely. In The Bart of Tradisfact, the impulse remains on the persphere of the sharply delineated central area, swiring around it, making incursions into its edges, but unable to dissolve its sold forms and innear contours. The confused blending of the discrete forms — not a defect but the essence of Turner's att — is enhanced by the point of view. In the Arnald, we see the lifeboats from above and at a certain distance; we are outside the scene and can look down upon something separate from courselves. In the Turner, our variatege point is 'much lower, virtually a the level of the waves.

REVIEW

A SummerFest concert for small ensembles (two trios and one duo sonata) began with a deft and shapely performance of Beethoven's early String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1. The of Bethoven's early String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1. The composer has not yet quite found his personal voice in this composition, which is at once derivative (a bit of Mozart and a lot of Haydn) and experimental. But it is a delightful piece, gathering more and more vitality and inventiveness at goes along, and the spirit of the youthful Bethoven could not have asked for a more sprightly and idiomatic performance than the one offered by the SummerFest musicians; violinist Hamos Poliwara. Violist Toby Hoffman, and cellist David Finckel.

From then on, the concert plunged into Romanticism, first of all with the Chopin Gello Sonata (Op. 65, in G Minor), and then — expansively (or perhaps excessively) filling the second half of the program — with the Tchaikovsky Plano Trio (Op. 50, in A Minor). Each of the Tchaikovsky Plano Trio (Op. 50, in A Minor). Each of these is a fascinating work, not only because of the composers' imagination and inventiveness, but also because neither of them had much experience with chamber music. The Chopin Cello Sonata, dating from near the end of his life, is his only sonata involving an instrument other than the piano; his only other chamber music is a trio for violin, cello, and piano — also, by the way, in G Minor — written cello, and piano — also, by the way, in G Minor — written when the composer was 19.

As for Tchaikowsky, aside from some student pieces, there are only the three string quartets (beautiful works, for some reason almost never performed in this country) and—a decade after the Trio — the String Sextet, "Souvenir de Florence." Tchaikovsky's genius demanded the orchestra (symphonies, concertos, balles) or the opera stage, just as Choppin's expressed itself almost exclusively through the Choppin's expressed interest probability of them from producing. piano. This did not prevent either of them from producing excellent chamber music on the few occasions when they essayed such works, but one senses that they did not feel quite at home in a genre of composition that was too intimate for Tchaikovsky and not quite intimate enough for Chopin.

In the Chopin Cello Sonata, the discomfort manifests itself in a peculiar unChopinesque quality of imagination. Every piano piece of this composer, including the large-scale works such as the piano concertos and the piano sonatas, bears the indelible mark of his unique style; they all sound like Chopin and like no one else (if we exclude his own imitators). The Cello Sonata, however, has a tendency — even at its loveliest — to speak in the common language of mid-19th-century German Romanticism: Mendelssohn, for example, or Schumann (the Chopin Cello Mendessonn, for example, or schummant (inc Chopin Leilo Sonata occasionally sounds very much like the cello version of the latter composer's Op. 73 Phantasiestäcke, composed a few years after the Chopin). Each of the movements is a little masterpiece of Romantic sensibility, lyrical or fiery, but few listeners not being told who the composer was would be able to guess that it was Chopin. (I do not make this comment as a reproach to the Cello Sonata, but simply as a curious observation.

The place of the Chopin Sonata in its composer's Deuvre or in the development of 19th-century Romantic style is of little concern to the performers, whose task it is to realize this particular score to its fullest — which is precisely what was done by David Finckel, the cellist in the Each of the ammerFest performance Finckel familiar to San movements Diego audiences as the cellist in the Emerson Quartet. carries in his own person all the qualities that make the masterpiece of Romantic Emerson so superb: in particular, the combination of emotional intensity and patrician elegance that characterizes all their work. Lyrical and fiery in his own temperament (if we may judge by his flashing eyes, his swaying body, and — more importantly — by the sound of his playing), Finckel made the most of the Chopin score's possibilities, addressing it with the large, passionate imagination it calls for.

There is less to say about pianist Wu Han, Finckel's collaborator, whose remarkable talents (demonstrated elsewhere in the festival) were held in check in a somewhat blurringly self-effacing performance of the piano part, which sounded very much like an accompaniment to something far more important than itself. The composer himself must take the blame here, for most of his imaginative energy seems to have gone into the writing for the cello, to the relative neglect of his favorite instrument. The Tchaikovsky Trio, mirroring its composer's self-contradictory nature, is at once a heart-on-sleeve emotional effusion and a dazzling piece of bravura display. At times, emotions appropriate to commemorating the untimely death of Nikolai Rubinstein are at the fore, enabling Tchaikovsky to express his own depent feelings about suffering. In the first movement, above all, we hear some of the Tchaikovsky of well with the composer's lifelong tendency toward meloderum and the composer's lifelong tendency toward meloderum and composer's lifelong tendency toward melo melodrama and sentimentality.

While the immensely long second movement (there are only two movements) ultimately returns to this mood, ending in a poignant despair anticipating the end of the ending in a poignant despair anticipating the end or international Tathetimes "Symphony, most of it is given over to a series of extroverted variations on a folk song, challenging the technical abilities of the players and allowing them—if they are good enough—to show off brilliantly. It is not a meditative exploration of the grife-stricken soul that is at the center of this music, but rather the exuberant the content of the properties of the grade and the content of the properties of the grade and the content of the properties of the grade and the content of the properties of the grade and th ostentation of sensational dancers in the more public moments of Tchaikovsky's ballet scores.

The internal contradictions of the music were In internal contradictions of the music were enhanced by SummerFees's yoking together of three extremely different musicians to perform it. Cellist Gary Hoffman is an amazingly deep performer, drawing on what appears to be a vast sea of emotional resources going down to his very core. (It was interesting to compare him with David Finckel, for although the technical mastery of the two continued on next page continued from previous page cellists is of quite the same consummate authority, and although both are highly emotional players, Hoffman's feelings seem to have greater internal resonance, a characteristic reflected in his darker, more burred tone: a

Violinist Cho-Liang Lin, in contrast, adopts a sweet, caressing style, delicately nuanced, with never a hint of roughness or even of tension — a very unRussian style that, however beautiful in its own terms, would never make you think of Heifetz or Oistrakh. Pianist Yefim Bronfman, an authentic Russian with (no doubt) Thaikovsky in his blood, is a bold, large-gestured, flashingly vivid performer, who revels in explosive keyboard crashes, extremes of rhythmic freedom, and a breathtaking wildness of

With these three strongly profiled individuals on stage, there was at all moments someone to give full realization to Tchaikovsky's tormented emotional inwardness, or to his tender, wistful, and sentimental side, or to his grandiose, external, balletic panache. But while no aspect of the composer was neglected, the nature of this trio of musicians was not such as to draw those varied aspects together into a single musical personality or a single, thoroughly coherent musical utterance. I found myself ous, almost all the time, of the three separate players, conscious, aimost att the time, of the three separate payers, who never quite seemed to be speaking with a unified voice. A performance like this has certain unique merits, especially in that it underlines the contradictions in Tchaikowsky's spirit that are powerfully present in the musi-istelf. BLt another sort of performance, with players matched for similarities rather than for divergences, might have given the Sherwood Auditorium audience a greater sense of the comprehensive self that lies in Tchaikovsky's personality even deeper than the contradictions.

that the restaurant was to be renamed Triangles, menus changed weekly, and the same items would be served for lunch and dinner so that diners could have small or large meals at prices they could afford. I felt instinctively that the format would bring a whole new generation of diners to Triangles — peo-ple who desire light sauces and ravishing taste combinations.

I waited a month so the restaurant could be prepared for the public and then returned to Triangles the other night. Every dish that sailed by our table looked exquisite. Harris Golden and executive chef Jeff Hurlbut sent out plates so gorgeous to behold that they could rival those in photographs. Whether you're ordering a bowl of fresh fruit or fresh fish, you're sure to comment on the presentation.

Lest you think that light food means less flavor, think Lest you think that light food means less flavor, think again. This time around we had a baked vegetable and almond spring roll, a huge roll prepared from file dough and stituted with assorted vegetables ($5.00). The hoisin-mustard sauce that decorates the plate is applied with a pastry bag, making his appetized looks at if it were a dessert. If you're not very hungry, this one spring roll is enough for a small meal. We had it with a large Caster stade ($7.50), and it'l doth have to make it with a large Caesar salad ($7.50), and if I didn't have to make more recommendations for this column, we would have ordered a fruit plate and stopped right there.

Still, we weren't sorry that we selected stuffed breast of chicken as well as the evening fresh fish, escalar ($11.50 and $12.00). I quite adore escalar, a meary, white fish, because it's so tender. It arrived in a basil-dill suuce that was masterful. The breast of chicken stuffed with julienned wegetables, Port Salut, and ricotta cheeses was surrounded by a dekicate sun-dried tomato sauce. Both of these entrées were accompanied by lots of fresh vegetables: broccoli, tiny roasted potatoes, and slivers of rean vegetables: oroccoli, tiny roastee postates, and silvers of beets. Take my word for it, eating healthy has never been so divine or so inexpensive. We couldn't finish everything, so I took the remainders home, and the next day the ingredients maintained their freshness.

Given my ordinary propensity, I would have had a chocolate dessert, but my friend is whippeet thin and she favored a fresh fruit platter. The waiter told us shat some people who had first encountered Harris Golden at the Main Chance were at Triangles for dinner. It seemed a hell of a lot cheaper than spending $3000 a week at the spa!

In getting better at going out for breakfast, and I would like to recommend the breakfast at Triangles. They're unique like to recommend the breakfast at Triangles. Piret's in La Jolla Village Square will close its doors september 30 or sooner. Although Trader Joe's is not affected by the restructuring of the mall, Piret's, located inside the mall, is forced to close. I remember with fondness all the special events done by Piret and George Munger and the high qual-ity of the food. My favorite was the dinner served during the sian Arts Festival: it was a night of incomparable gaiety and good will.

Absence Makes The Heart Grow Fonder.

Patience Is A Virtue.

If These Two Clichés Aren't True, Boy Are We Screwed.

At the risk of one adage leading to another, stuff happens. Snapple allnatural iced teas, juice drinks, sodas, sports drinks and juices are such a hit in California, our five local bottlers can't keep up. We've been working day and night to fix this by Fall. Even adding more bottlers. In the meantime, if you're having trouble finding your favorite flavor, try any of the other 52. Many are still available. And if you come up empty. don't worry. Good things come to those who wait. Made from the best stuff on earth."

Congratulations!

You're Single. We're Free. Why Wait?

Introducing Reader PHONE MATCHES, a Great Place to Meet Single People. You are provided with a free personal matching ad in the Reader Classifieds. You also receive a free "voice mailbox"— a phone service that allows you to ecord and receive messages from any touch-tone phone coupon below and mail or FAX it (233-7907) to us. (It faxing, please photocopy the coupon first and then fax it. The newsprint doesn't reproduce well.) The deadline for receiving free Phone Matches ads is Saturday at 7am. Free ads are 25 aords or less and run for two weeks. No free ads will be accepted over the phone or in person. Ads with more than 25 words cost $1.20 per additional word. We'll send you a 5-digit mailbox number (to be printed in your ad) and a 4-digit security ode for exclusive access to your respons

You may also place a late ad until 6pm Tuesday by phone (235-8200), in our office (1703 India St. at Date St., downtown), or by FAX (233-7907). The charge for these late ads is $20 for the first 25 words plus $1.20 per additional word, Ads placed by phone or by FAX are with Visa or MasterCard only. Limit one Phone Matches ad per person per two-week period.

HOW TO USE YOUR VOICE MAILBOX: After you receive your mailbox number and private security code, you can record your personal introduction, Call 527-1966, 24 hours a day, and follow the easy instructions.

Use your introduction to tell more about yourself than your ad does (see below for guidelines). Give your first name; but DON'T give your last name, phone number or address. Make sure you ask your callers to leave their names, phone numbers and the best times to call them. You can re-record your personal introduction once per 24-hour period.

LATE AD DEADLINE: 6pm Tuesday

All introductions are reviewed by the Reader and go on-line within 24 hours. To listen to your responses, call 527-1966 any time 24 hours a day, and follow the easy instructions. You can replay any response or move ahead to the next one. If you choose to move ahead, the previous response will be erased, so have a pencil and piece of paper ready! You must have a touch-tone phone to record a personal introduction or listen to responses. QUESTIONS? Call 235-8200, x 268

win. Make that, they would have had a chance to win if they had done what they needed to, you know, completed that pass, stopped that drive, then they would have had a chance to win.

Does this sound familiar?

Another week is upon us, time to check with Nevada Bob. You want to call Nevada Bob real early so you don't miss him during his three-and-a-half-hour lunch break. Only took one secretary to get through. I announce, "Hey, bour ainch oreas. Only look one extent way and one of three.

"I got fucked on the Raiders game. You should put a footnote by my stats. Got Screwed By The Raiders.

"Who do you like this week?"

"Who do you like this week"
"It's a tough week. It is one with Philadelphia, the Rams, and to make your readers happy. I'll take the San Diego Chokers."
"Jesus. Okay, what do you like aboud Philly?" Nothing. I'm betting against Denver more than I'm betting on Philip, because Denver is a lossy floworte although the yide lover last solids. Evere he played from grauch that they could and should have fort. And I doo't brillen played from grauch that when the played they graue that they could and should have fort. And I doo't brillen played from graue that they could and should have fort. And I doo't brillen played from the with Philadelphia. Phily as a reman, upp. Hijvscal team and Denver is a finesse with Philadelphia."

with Philadelphia. Philly is a mean, ugly, physical team and Denver is a timese team.

"Why the Ranis"

"I have no their, just betting a hunch."

"And your herois pick. The Chokers."

"I think there ve played two pretty good games and came up short. They're coming back home and may really be pused oil enough to pit a 64-minute effort together. There's no good reason why the Chokers can't win, after playing two games like that, and their quarterback looking devent. They've got a good defereis and Philosoph, relationating, is a dod roal devent. Well, the Sporting Box is 6 and O. Another couple weeks on the shopping for a house. Of course, one mast not purchase and the drive it through the heart of a good thing, and no conventing to keep money in the bank would go againts Nesand heit on a regular basis. But then again, the real question is, "Can the Chargers dig road deep and find a way to looe!"
